EUROPE OPENS WAR ON REDS

SILENCE, STUDY, WORK, RUNGS IN CURTIS' LADDER

On Them He Climbed to Top in Senate.

The new senate leader's six rules for success in congress:

1—Look after the matters that are put in your hands.

2—Answer your letters within twenty-four hours.

3—Remember names and faces.

4—When you speak, carry conviction by knowing.

5—Don't go gadding to the lecture platform.

6—Work.

CHARLES CURTIS OF KANSAS.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—I asked one of the shrewdest and kindliest observers among the veterans on the Washington scene—Angus McSween—this question:

"What's the outstanding attribute that has carried Senator Curtis from driving a hack in a Kansas town to the leadership of the United States senate?"

[illegible] answered Angus McSween. "[illegible] And he's knowing."

[illegible] Thought of [illegible]

[illegible] wrote Ellen Terry—re[illegible] "Much Ado" in the Pil[illegible] book at Holy Trinity in Stratford Upon Avon, "is the perfectest herald of joy: I were but little happy, if I could say how much."

Such quoting alone would make Ellen Terry Charles Curtis' favorite actress.

Last Monday noon when Curtis of Kansas strode onto the floor of the United States senate as majority leader in succession to Henry Cabot Lodge he must have been a proud and happy man. But he was not saying how much. He was keeping one eye on the clock, the other on his colleagues. The prayer said and the roll called, he was on his feet expediting business. He did it in two sentences which conveyed five facts. Then he sat.

Entitled to His Pride.

The rest of that day, and the next day, important persons crowded around him or telephoned to him or sat waiting on the leather settees in his outer office. One hour the all-powerful committee on appropriations needed him; the next hour the White House was summoning him. Yes, he must have been proud and happy, for after thirty years he had come into the highest honor which the majority in the most powerful legislative body in the world can confer upon a colleague—the honor of having that majority say, "Now, you tell us what to do."

But no wasteful words of elation escaped Curtis of Kansas.

It was not ever thus.

Harks Back Thirty Years.

Between whiles of turning from this to that he found time—for men of his stamp always find time for a neighborly act—to tell me about it. He said:

"When I first came into congress—that was thirty years ago, and I was 33 then—I thought a young member ought to speak often. I did, and was thinking pretty well of myself. There never was a bigger mistake. One day Holman of Indiana called me aside—old Holman, the watchdog of the treasury—and said: 'Young man, I want to give you some advice. If you'll quit talking so much, I'll give you the subcommittee having charge of Indian appropriations for the committee on Indian affairs.'"

Here must be interjected the fact, which has been written to death, that the senator has a generous infusion of Indian blood in his veins, his grandmother having been a Kaw Indian of much force of character and sense.

Knew His Subject Well.

Also, as a youth, he had a first hand knowledge of the old reservation country that now is the state of Oklahoma.

"Well," continued Curtis of Kansas, "I told Holman I would think it over, and then I went to Uncle Joe Cannon and told him what Holman said. 'My boy,' Uncle Joe said, 'that's the best advice any man ever gave you. I don't mean that you should not talk at all. But you study appropriations. Say what you know, and quit.'

"I took both men's advice. The [illegible] Holman turned over to [illegible] southern state bonds given the

Gene Porter Dies by Crash of Her Auto

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—Mrs. Gene Stratton Porter, novelist, lecturer, and expert on American natural history, died tonight from injuries suffered when her automobile collided with a street car.

Her daughter, Mrs. Leo Meehan, and Mr. Meehan, were summoned to the receiving hospital, where the novelist was rushed after the accident, but Mrs. Porter did not regain consciousness. She had sustained a compound fracture of the skull and internal injuries.

Street Car Runs Swiftly.

Her chauffeur, James Gowdy, was injured, but probably will recover.

The writer had set out from her residence to visit Hollywood friends. The chauffeur was the only other occupant of the car. At 3d street and Serrano, the car was struck by a rapidly moving trolley.

Mrs. Stratton Porter came to California four years ago. She had supervision of the screen adaptation of her popular novel, "A Girl of the Limberlost," and on the completion of that work, became interested in the films as a literary field, and gradually divided her efforts between the films and magazine and other writings.

Born on Indiana Farm.

The novelist was 56 years old. She was born on an Indiana farm and married Charles Darwin Porter in Wabash county, Ind., in 1886. She lived for many years at Rome City, Ind., before coming to the coast.

Mrs. Porter was one of the founders of the Izaak Walton League of America. Among her most popular writings besides the "Girl of the Limberlost" were "Freckles," "Song of the Cardinal," "Michael O'Halloran," "At the Foot of the Rainbow," "Laddie," and "Her Father's Daughter."

PARK POLICEMAN BEATEN TO DEATH

Rushes to Aid of Woman and Loses Life.

Albert Burgerson, 1505 Bryn Mawr avenue, a Lincoln Park policeman off duty, was fatally beaten early this morning when he responded to a woman's scream for help from an automobile parked near a road house at Lincoln and Touhy avenues, north of the city. He died a short time afterward at the Swedish Covenant hospital, where he was taken by the county highway police. Edward Engelkrout, 1928 Berenice avenue, who was with Burgerson, was also beaten and kicked and is in a serious condition at the hospital.

Burgerson and Engelkrout, with Walter Gerbing, 3104 North Robey street, and William Llewellyn, 3643 Sheffield avenue, were in an automobile returning from Niles Tavern on the Milwaukee road when they heard the scream. Investigating, they saw the woman struggling with six men in an automobile. They approached the car to aid the woman when the six jumped from the machine and attacked them. Several others rushed from the roadhouse and joined in the attack on Burgerson's party, kicking and beating them. Burgerson's neck was broken.

Gerbing and Llewellyn were also injured, but not seriously, and went back to the roadhouse with the highway police to search for their assailants.

McANDREW, HEAD OF SCHOOLS, TO HAVE OPERATION

Superintendent of Schools William McAndrew will be operated upon, it was learned late yesterday, presumably for some malady of the nose or throat. Rumors that he was ill were current about the board of education during the day, but nothing definite could be learned.

Some said the affection was of a serious nature, but the superintendent, reached at his home late at night, denied this. He admitted the operation would keep him from his duties "for about two weeks," but would tell nothing more definite.

"All that is a personal matter with me," he said. "I am perfectly willing to take the public into my confidence in all matters which concern the public schools or education; but this does not concern the public."

Bare $100,000 Dope Theft in Army Depot

All government enforcement agencies last night were concentrated in an effort to establish a connection between a hitherto unannounced theft of $100,000 worth of narcotics from the United States army warehouse at 39th and Wood streets and the robber raid on the $3,000,000 worth of booze stored in the same warehouse.

Federal officials had succeeded in keeping the narcotics robbery a secret for several months.

The sixth floor of the warehouse is leased to the federal narcotic division, in command of Col. Will Gray Beach. There all narcotic drugs seized under the anti-narcotic act are stored. For several weeks, it was discovered, opium, cocaine, and morphine had been disappearing.

Get Tip, Foil One Robbery.

After investigation, a man of the name of Hirsch was arrested and is said to have confessed a part in a system by which packages of narcotics were tossed from the warehouse windows to confederates with outspread blankets.

Hirsch, it is said, was granted immunity in exchange for information concerning a plot to remove all the good booze from the federal collection of 18,000 cases and thousands of gallons in barrels, and this information enabled government operatives to thwart the specific plot of which he told.

Start Hunt for Suspects.

Deputy marshals, general prohibition agents and special intelligence unit operatives spent last night in an effort to locate Hirsch and persons named in his confession on the theory they might know something about the $3,000,000 liquor robbery.

TRAINMEN STRIKE ON McKINLEY TRACTION LINES

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 7.—Trainmen on the Illinois Traction system struck at midnight this morning.

Between 350 and 400 employés are affected in the walkout. Warning of the proposed strike was given the traction officials at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon during a conference between representatives of the workmen and officials of the road.

The men are striking for a wage increase of 10 cents an hour and improved working conditions, they declared.

ONE CAPTURED AFTER SHOOTING UP SOUTH BEND

Pal Believed in Trap of Posse.

Two men were killed, and five others were shot and seriously wounded in and near South Bend, Ind., yesterday, when two young gunmen, foiled in an attempt to hold up a saloon, shot their way out of that city.

In their flight the bandits seized an automobile and headed for Chicago. After a thrilling chase by Chief of Police Laurence Lane and a posse, one of the bandits was captured at a roadhouse on the Division street highway, eight miles from South Bend.

Hunt Second Bandit.

Last night rifle squads hunted over the bad lands of the Calumet steel district in search of the second bandit. Chief Lane, Sheriff Michael Hanley of St. Joseph county, and Captain John Stege of the Chicago detective bureau supervised the hunt.

Early this morning police and deputies had surrounded a swamp morass lying along Grapevine creek between the Lincoln and Division street highways, about ten miles from South Bend. They expected to have the second bandit in custody before daylight, they said.

THE DEAD.

FRANK RATHFON, [illegible] years old, [illegible] Rush street, South Bend, a patron in the saloon. Shot through stomach. Died at Epworth hospital.

ELMER J. KAUFFMAN, 59 years old, Lydick, Ind., farmer and father of four children. Killed when he resisted bandits at Grapevine creek.

THE INJURED.

HOMER FRED CURRY, 31 years old, farmer. Shot in left side after he had felled one of the bandits with hammer at Grapevine creek.

STANLEY POLMARZAK, 55 years old. Owner of car commandeered by bandits. Shot in right shoulder.

C. L. CAMP, farmer. Shot in left side.

WILLIAM WRIGHT, customer in saloon.

FELIX STEVENS, 57 years old, bartender.

Came from Boston.

The captured youth said he is Raymond L. Moseley and claimed his home is on Hillsdale road, Boston, Mass. He is 22 years old.

Moseley was in a half-conscious condition last night from the hammer blow given him by Curry and talked little of himself and his confederate.

A search of his room at 212 South Perry street, South Bend, revealed a complete forger's outfit, Chief Lane said. Moseley claimed to have come to South Bend last Thursday. He said he met his bandit accomplice yesterday at a railroad station, but denied knowing his name.

May Be Pay Roll Robbers.

Chief Lane suspects the youths may have been implicated in a $12,000 pay roll robbery at Toledo, O., early yesterday. He was preparing last night to send a photograph of Moseley to authorities of that city.

In Moseley's pockets was found a 25 caliber Luger pistol. Its seven chambers were empty. Moseley said he had purchased the gun yesterday at a South Bend army goods store.

Order Drinks; Fire.

The two youths had walked into the saloon at 510 Chapin street, and approaching the bar, ordered drinks of the bartender, Stevens. Mrs. Tilly De Menk, wife of the saloon owner, was seated in a small wine room in the rear. Both bandits appeared to have been drinking, witnesses said.

When Stevens set the glasses on the bar he found he was looking into two pistol barrels.

"Hand over your cash," one of the bandits demanded.

Rathfon, standing at the bar, moved forward.

Without a word both bandits wheeled and fired. Rathfon fell, mortally wounded.

Patrons of Saloon Flee.

Panic stricken, Stevens and several other patrons made a break for safety behind the bar, the tables and the chairs.

The bandits continued firing about the place, aiming the guns at moving figures.

When they had backed out of the place with emptied revolvers Stevens and William Wright, another customer, had fallen pierced by bullets.

Mrs. De Menk fled screaming out

Attack Girls; Youths Given 45-30 Years

"Dear Chicago:

"We are sincerely sorry for you. Take a lesson from us, for your own good.

"Your respectable neighbor.

"MILWAUKEE, WIS."

Chicago's criminal happenings drew the foregoing bit of advice from Milwaukee yesterday. The arrest, identification, and confession of rape by Nathan Berman and Richard Fitzgerald, both 16 years old, followed by the shooting of three policemen Friday night by a window peeping moron, gave Milwaukee another opportunity.

"We are inclosing a newspaper story which we thought you might use to advantage for another aticle on the difference of justice as meted out in the two cities," one message read. The news was about the recent sentencing of youthful rapists, as follows:

"Walter Oleniczak was sentenced to forty-five years at hard labor in the state penitentiary at Waupun, and Johnny Knutowski, 16, the 'kid' of the same gang, was given a thirty year term in the same prison by Judge W. B. Quinlan in Municipal court today.

Attacks Judge Caverly's Decision.

"Characterizing the crime of the pair in kidnaping Ruth and Esther Gregerson, south side twins, after robbing their escorts, as the most flagrant violation in his thirty years' experience, Judge Quinlan attacked the Leopold-Loeb decision in Chicago, calling it a piece of judicial folly, intimating that such decisions were to some extent responsible for crimes like those of the youths before him.

"'This man Oleniczak is what is called a 'repeater,' Judge Quinlan said. 'He has been arrested frequently and spent most of his mature years in the Green Bay reformatory and in Waupun.

"'In some cases we may have some expectation and hope of a reformation, but this man is incorrigible. He absolutely has failed to reform.

Ways to Curb Crime.

"'There are three ways to deal with the cirminal: reforming them where that is possible; sending them to a psychopathic institution when insane, but this case comes under the third manner, that of handling the confirmed criminal.

"'I have never before heard such a sad and sorrowful story as that told by Ruth Gregerson.

"'That night was Ruth's Gethsemane. "Boys," she said, "don't take Esther; she is ill. I am willing to go down to the depths of shame if you will spare her and take me. I'll carry the cross."

So They Get Long Terms.

"'What must we do with this new philosophy of the irresponsibility of the youthful criminal? Its effect must be stopped. This court will not fail in its duty to stop its spread.'

"The sentencing of the two followed. The further judgment of the court was that Oleniczak and Knutowski must spend in solitary confinement each July 16, the anniversary of the day on which they kidnaped the girls."

In Chicago, it was recalled, Berman and two others, on July 26 (the date of the Milwaukee rape was July 16) had committed a crime almost identical with that of the Milwaukee youths.

For this crime Berman and one other boy were sent to the school farm at St. Charles by the Juvenile court; Berman escaped Nov. 7.

FRANCE BREAKS REVOLT PLOT OF COMMUNISTS

Roumania Plans to Deport 100,000.

Europe opened a widespread offensive against the red menace yesterday. Meanwhile reports came from the Russian border that the communist government was threatened by famine and a shortage of money and might fall before spring. The chief centers of attack on the reds were:

FRANCE—Herriot government raids communist centers and prepares to deport reds.

ROUMANIA—Plans for deportation of 100,000 undesirables announced.

SPAIN—Two convicted communists executed.

GERMANY—Electorate expected to cut down communist power in reichstag vote today.

In England the royal family and cabinet ministers were closely guarded against Egyptian plotters, whom the communists have been accused of aiding. Latvia and Poland offered to aid Esthonia should the red revolt, crushed last week, again show its head. Within the last few days sharp measures have also been taken in Jugo-Slavia against a red revolt and the Italian parliament gave Premier Mussolini votes of confidence after his warnings concerning the bolshevik peril.

PARIS, Dec. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—Complete success in putting a stop to the communist agitation toward revolution was claimed by the Herriot government tonight. Minister of Interior Chautemps, supreme head of the French police, was able to express entire satisfaction with the manner in which his men "nipped the action in the bud."

Reticence is shown by communist headquarters. The communists do not acknowledge defeat, but say the action has been merely postponed. The official party organ published an appeal tonight for communists to hold themselves in readiness for any eventuality.

Round Up 300 Reds.

To the neutral observer it appears that the government scored heavily against the extremists first, by rounding up more than 300 communists of all nationalities, more than seventy of whom, foreigners, will be expelled, and, second, by preventing the communist manifestation announced as a protest against these arrests and expulsions. Communistic propaganda, however, has gathered such headway and the organization has been perfected to such a point that students of social and political conditions in France express the opinion that the government must continue severe repressive measure if it hopes to annihilate the revolutionary movement.

In their raid on the soviet headquarters at Bobigny the police claim to have seized documents purporting to show that the communists were preparing to attempt an armed coup against Paris in the course of next week.

Hunt for Arms.

The magnitude of the police operations, which were not confined to Paris and its suburbs, but extended throughout France, was shown when it became known that twenty police commissioners at the head of between six and seven hundred men were engaged. Many of them searched in distant suburbs for hidden stores of arms and ammunition, the existence of which had been called to their attention.

Foreigners alone were held in jail tonight, the Frenchmen arrested being allowed to depart after their names and addresses were registered. The dragnet thus far failed to catch a single Russian.

Leonid Krassin, the soviet representative, is reported to have told Premier Herriot in the course of a conference this morning that the soviet embassy had absolutely no connection with the present agitation; that the soviet diplomatic mission would carefully refrain from mixing in any way in France's internal affairs.

Herriot Pledges War on Reds.

M. Herriot pledged his government to fight communistic violence in France in a declaration before the chamber of deputies today during a stormy session that brought into sharp relief the open intent of communistic influences to accomplish revolution by force.

"To be precise," the premier said, "the government finds itself at grips with a double agitation—one might say a double offensive—which evidently is seeking to encircle it.

"On the one hand there is the clerical agitation. It is a formidable effort of the Catholics to arouse the country against the pretended persecutions of the government.

"On the other hand, there is another offensive that increasingly unmasks itself daily and which is accompanied by a whole series of provocations."

"Will Break Resistance."

M. Herriot turned towards the communists and said:

"There is too many foreign communists in France who forget their duty to the country that has given them asylum. They are indulging in political demonstrations, and we will not tolerate it, we will not let them meddle in our political life. If we meet with resistance we will break it, and we will deport as many as necessary.

"The government is resolved to fight the clerical agitation and the communist peril."

Replying to objections by the Catholics, the premier said he had an official report that the Catholic deputy Bire was at a meeting where the cry was "long live the revolution!"

Mayor Aids Red Strike.

DOUARNEZ, France, Dec. 6. — [By the Associated Press.] — The fear stricken population of this town began to breathe easier today at the news that Mayor Le Flanchec had been suspended by the government and ordered tried for inciting a rebellion. The people had been living in terror for the past week since the communist strike in the sardine factories spread, practically tying up the town, while the mayor, wearing his sash of office, led the demonstrations.

Troops Sent to Strike Area.

L'ORIENT, France, Dec. 6.—A brigade of 200 mounted gendarmes and a number of smaller units from surrounding centers proceeded today to various points in the department of Finistere, where a series of strikes is in progress. Other forces have been sent to the ports to preserve order in connection with Catholic demonstrations called for tomorrow.

Investigate Priest's Defi.

BREST, France, Dec. 6. — [By the Associated Press.]—A judicial investigation has been ordered into charges that the parish priest of the Church of Notre Dame des Carmes here had spoken from the pulpit of "a religious war declared anew by the government" and had urged his congregation to resist the laws aimed at them, even to bloodshed if necessary.

A Catholic massmeeting has been arranged for tomorrow at Quimper, capital of the department of Finistere, to make demonstration for "defense of religious liberty." A similar meeting is set for Monday at Folgoet, near Brest. Posters announcing these meetings read: "Up, men, we will get them."

Roumania to Deport 100,000.

BUCHAREST, Dec. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Roamanian government is preparing to deport 100,000 undesirables under the recent law granting the authorities exceptional powers to maintain order. A large number of Russian suspects, who cannot well be sent home, will be required to live in a restricted area.

Spain Executes Two.

PAMPLONA, Spain, Dec. 6. — [By the Associated Press.]—Having been found guilty of plotting to overthrow the Spanish directorate, Enrique Sanches Gil and Juan Santillan, communists, were executed in the prison here at dawn today. A third man, Pablo Martin, was to have been put to death at the same time, but while the men were being escorted to the execution chamber he tried to escape by running to a high gallery, from which he jumped to death when he saw escape was impossible.

RED RULE TOTTERS

BY RAYMOND FENDRICK.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 6.—The most dependable diplomatic reports from Moscow agree that a great famine is raging in Russia and there is a terrific shrinkage in state exports and state revenues. There is a wide revolt of peasants against the requisition of their surplus grain, accompanied by a lack of money to pay the Red army and subsidize the several million idle citizens and workmen. Some of the principal apostles of Nicolai Lenin have abandoned all hope of the bolshevik dictatorship surviving through the winter unless France advances Russia a huge loan.

The threat of an aggressive British policy against Russia in reprisal against the intense revolutionary propaganda in India and Egypt also has caused great consternation in Moscow.

The fact that the angry peasants are now planning for next year only half of this year's acreage, which is a famine acreage, is the gravest menace of all.

Fear Revolt of Army.

The immediate fear of the soviet leaders is that the Red army will revolt if not paid and fed. The last thing they worry about is buying food for the 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 in the Volga and Caucasus now facing famine.

An attempt to force Great Britain into giving Russia a loan by intensifying the revolutionary propaganda in India and Egypt and Mesopotamia was thwarted by the English elections. The soviet relations with Italy are a farce. The only other country rich enough to give the soviets credits is France.

The soviet government, therefore, instructed the communist Internationale, which is its double, to suspend its revolutionary propaganda everywhere in the world except China and concentrate all available money and agitators and printed propaganda in France and the French colonies to intimidate the French government into giving the soviets a loan.

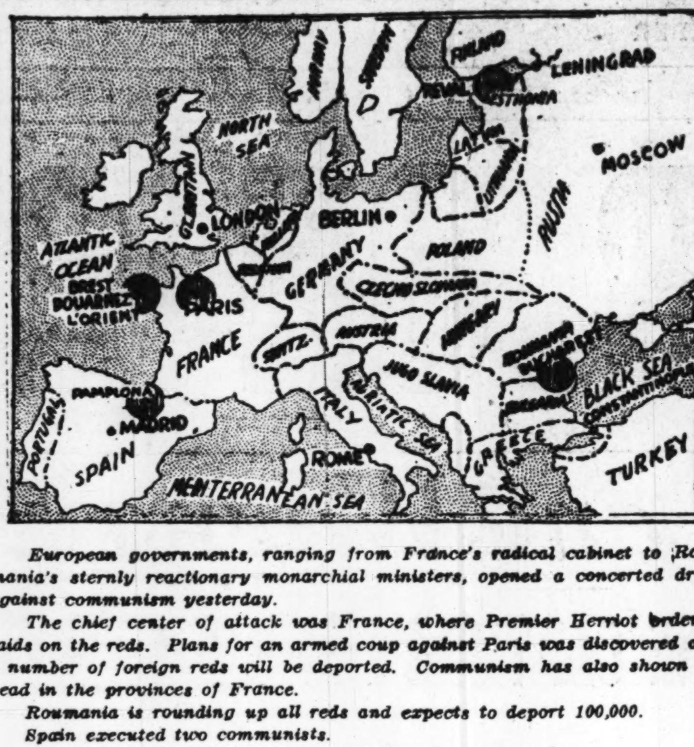
RED SPLOTCHES ON EUROPE'S FACE



European governments, ranging from France's radical cabinet to Roumania's sternly reactionary monarchial ministers, opened a concerted drive against communism yesterday.

The chief center of attack was France, where Premier Herriot ordered raids on the reds. Plans for an armed coup against Paris was discovered and a number of foreign reds will be deported. Communism has also shown its head in the provinces of France.

Roumania is rounding up all reds and expects to deport 100,000.

Spain executed two communists.

A red revolt in Esthonia was crushed early in the week.

2 BEER BARONS KICK TO U. S. ON SERVICE IN JAIL

Can't Get the Right Sort of Shaves.

Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, debonair inmates of the Cook county jail, have found life irksome in Warden Westbrook's domain even though they have been permitted to recline on cots in the lockup hospital.

As a result they have petitioned Washington for a change of habitat. Yesterday J. P. McAdams, supervisor of federal prisons, arrived to investigate claims of the convicted beer barons that they are not being granted all the conveniences of home at the county jail.

Ask Court's Attitude.

Capt. William F. Waugh, first assistant district attorney, who convicted the bootleg pair, and Mr. McAdams appeared before Judge Wilkerson to ask the court's attitude on the proposed change. The court withheld recommendations, but it was said that Capt. Waugh will do everything possible to see that the original terms of Judge Wilkerson's sentences are carried out.

It is said that Druggan and Lake want to be transferred to one of the small town county jails in the northern Illinois federal district, where sheriffs are said sometimes to engage in the practice of allowing inmates to go to town barber shops under guard.

It's Tedious Waiting.

It frequently has been reported that affable prisoners have found it necessary to remain out of jail many hours each day in the week in order to get the desired kind of shaves.

According to Capt. Waugh, Druggan and Lake both claim that for years they have failed in their attempts to learn to shave themselves. It is reported that Judge Wilkerson and Capt. Waugh doubt this.

ACQUIT FARMER OF KILLING LAWYER.

Cairo, Ill., Dec. 6.—John Hasel, farmer, who on June 9 shot and killed Grover A. Koehler, city attorney of Thebes, and Democrat candidate for states' attorney, was found not guilty of a charge of murder by a jury here last night.

SPURIOUS HEIR FOISTED ON HIM, HUSBAND CLAIMS

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 6.—That Mrs. Charlotte Dodd Patton Sherman, wife of Rogers S. Sherman, wealthy and prominent Tulsa attorney, came to Memphis in July, 1924, and through arrangements with physicians procured a child, intending to deceive her husband by passing the baby off as her own, thereby affecting a reconciliation with Sherman, from whom she was estranged, became known today, says a story printed in the Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Sherman is now suing his wife for divorce. In an amended petition Sherman states that he became aware of the fact that the child was not his nor Mrs. Sherman's and evidence that he is said to have gathered is expected to figure in the now pending divorce suit, the story says.

The baby alleged to have been procured by Mrs. Sherman through physicians is said to be the son of a young, unmarried Arkansas woman, the Commercial Appeal states.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94 PER CENT AIR

Beats Electric or Gas.

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke, or noise—no pumping up; is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94 per cent air and 6 per cent common kerosene [coal oil].

The inventor, L. P. Johnson, 609 West Lake street, Chicago, Ill., is offering to send a lamp on ten days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.—Adv.

HON. HINKY DINK GIVES SCHOONER TO DRY LEADER

Scuttle o' Suds on Reef in Evanston.

BY JOHN KELLEY.

Santa Claus has a unique present for Miss Anna A. Gordon, president of both the National and the World's Women's Christian Temperance union. There is no other gift like it in old Santa's pack.

And what do you think this wonderful present is? It is a glass receptacle, a "schooner" or "scuttle," or, as Mr. Webster's well known dictionary says, a flagon or tankard.

Affectionately Called a Tub.

But at the Workingman's exchange in Clark street, where ye merrie hobo once plunged his face into the foamy receptacle, it was called a "tub."

Former Ald. Michael Kenna, commonly called "Hinky Dink," who conducted the Workingman's exchange before prohibition, is the donor. It was highly prized as a souvenir by the "little fellow," but when he learned that Miss Gordon was desirous of having a "tub" for Rest Cottage in Evanston, headquarters of the W. C. T. U., he gracefully handed over the last one he had.

Ode to a Schooner.

Ald. John J. Coughlin (the bathhouse), who was present when Kenna consented to part with the treasure, wrote the following poem, which accompanied the gift:

Dear gentle, gracious, efficient president of the W. C. T. U.,
This souvenir of pre-Volsteadean days I beg to present to you.
My compliments go with it, and as you gaze upon it filled with flowers sweet,
I prithee remember that it oft contained
Manhattan "suds" on Clark street.

There are more of the verses, just as sad.

Farwell Displays Scuttle.

It was at the recent golden jubilee convention of the W. C. T. U. that Miss Gordon first heard about Kenna's famous "tubs." Arthur Burrage Farwell exhibited one. Miss Gordon filled it with packages of tea, told all the guests to take a small package home, brew a cup, and write her "a nice long letter about the tea."

When Mr. Farwell called for the return of his "tub" Miss Gordon expressed a wish to have one for Rest Cottage.

"I wouldn't part with mine for any money," said Mr. Farwell. "They are the delight of antiquarians."

Miss Gordon appealed to the Rev. Dr. Norton, religious editor of THE TRIBUNE, to aid her in procuring one of the "tubs" and Kenna did the rest.

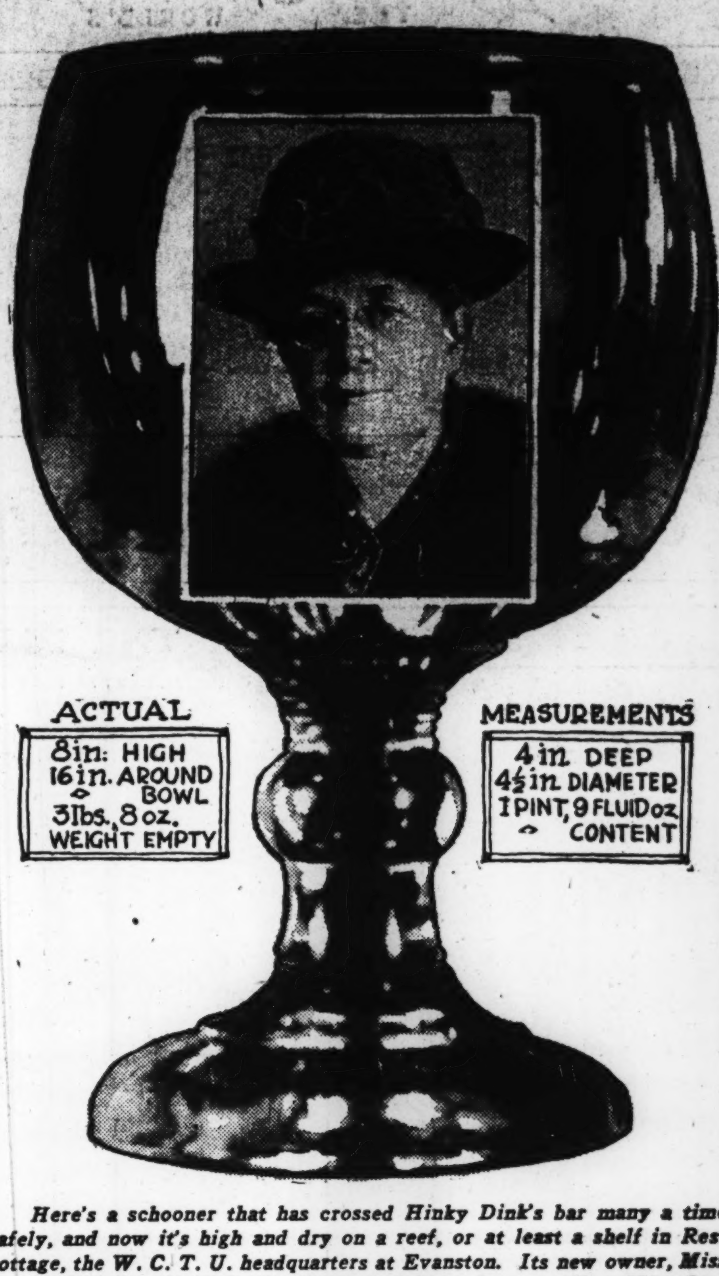
World's Oldest Y. M. C. A. Member Dies in Montreal

Montreal, Que., Dec. 6.—David Bentley, oldest Y. M. C. A. member in the world, died here today at the age of 91. He was a charter member of the Montreal Y. M. C. A., founded sixty years ago, a Baptist Sunday school teacher, and for forty-two years a deacon of Olivet Baptist church.

LIVE WIRE KILLS BOY.

Galena, Ill., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—Kenneth Baysinger, 12, was killed today when he tried to pick up a live wire that had been blown down by a storm.

SCHOONER ON REEF



Here's a schooner that has crossed Hinky Dink's bar many a time safely, and now it's high and dry on a reef, or at least a shelf in Rest cottage, the W. C. T. U. headquarters at Evanston. Its new owner, Miss Anna Gordon, a W. C. T. U. official, is keeping it as a relic. Miss Gordon's picture is by the J. D. Tolloff studio.

FOUR YANKS GET FREEDOM, 4 MORE ASK IT IN PARIS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 6.—Four American couples came into the Paris divorce courts today. Petitions were filed by Frances Hartford against John Hartford, both giving their addresses at Paris hotels, where they are not known, and by Julia Poett Wharton against William Wharton. Both bills charged desertion. Decrees were granted to Mrs. Elsa Alsop from Edward Alsop and to Mrs. Sofia Meldrin Coy from Edward Harris Coy. The former were married at Atlanta, Ga., in 1913 and the latter at Asheville, N. C., the same year.

John Hartford is believed to be John Augustine Hartford of New York, president of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Stores, Inc. His second wife, the former Frances Bulger, a model, sued him for divorce in New York in July after less than a year of wedded life.

Wife Swallows Poison After Tiff with Husband

Mrs. Christ Jensen, 40 years old, drank lysol last night in her home at 1330 North State street. Jensen wished to visit friends. She didn't. Jensen insisted. She ran into the bathroom and had emptied part of the contents of the bottle when he knocked it out of her hand. She was taken to Augustana hospital, where it was said she will recover.

BANDIT PAIR GO ON RAMPAGE; KILL 2; SHOOT 5

1 Caught After South Bend Affray.

the back door and telephoned police from a nearby restaurant

Seize Agents' Car.

The bandits commandeered the automobile of Stanley Palmarzak, an insurance agent. They forced Palmarzak's small nephew to get out of the car and, holding a revolver at Palmarzak's head, ordered him to "drive like hell for Chicago."

Three miles out of South Bend the car broke down. Enraged, the bandits turned their guns upon Palmarzak, shooting him through the right shoulder.

They approached the home of Camp, demanding a car. Camp attempted to slam the door in their faces. They fired, shooting him through the left side.

Fleeing on foot to Grapevine creek, the bandits discovered the bridge had been torn away to permit of repairs. They spied Kauffman and Curry at work at a dredge nearby, and, drawing their guns, ran toward them.

One Falls Dead.

Curry felled Moseley with his hammer as Kauffman fell dead from a bullet. Another shot struck Curry in the left side.

The wild flight in Palmarzak's car down Chapman street and on through the heart of the business section of South Bend threw the town into wild confusion. The bandits, reloading their weapons, fired promiscuously at whatever car or pedestrian barred their passage.

Traffic signals were ignored by the flying auto.

Take Up Pursuit.

Chief Lane was in pursuit within a few minutes in a car filled with officers armed with shotguns. A second car containing Sheriff Hanley and a half dozen deputies followed close behind the chief's car.

Once upon the open concrete highway, the bandit car shot ahead at maximum speed. After their battle with Kauffman and Curry, the bandits abandoned the highway and struck off across the fields and swamps.

Stagger to Roadhouse.

Seeing the roadhouse in the distance, Moseley, weak and groggy from the heavy blow of Curry's hammer, staggered forward in hope of aid. His companion, not yet winded, fled toward a nearby grove of trees and disappeared.

Chief Lane said he is convinced the fugitive will not be able to break through the police cordon and make his way into Chicago before daylight.

In addition to the detective squads from Chicago, other posses were quickly organized in Valparaiso, Michigan City, La Porte, and Gary to watch every highway and path leading toward Chicago.

Other posses scoured the wild dune country lying along the shore of Lake Michigan between Gary and Chesterton.

Reports that in recent conferenc between army officials and those o the sanitary district, a field to be lo cated in Grant Park on land to b reclaimed just south of the lighthou at the mouth of the river was dis cussed, aroused the mayor's interest

"Air transit is being rapidly devel oped and no one knows its future," he declared. "It would be negligence in deed if the city failed to provide or aid in the acquisition of adequate ter minals. There are some, of course, who may question the necessity of such provision on any scale when the new transit facility is still in its in fancy.

"Let us not overlook any possibil ities. We cannot afford to allow th business which probably will follow air transit development to fly over and beyond Chicago.

Urges Immediate Action.

"There is no question in my mind at the present, but that the propose landing fields should be owned and controlled by the city. The council should lose no time in making an ini tial appropriation for study of th question."

Another suggested site is located at 63d street and Cicero avenue. The property is owned by the school board, which has been asked to lease it for a term of years as a landing field for commercial airplanes. The would-be lessees, the school board has been told, have received assurances from mem bers of the council finance committee that the $15,000 needed to grade the field and condition it for use will be appropriated in the 1926 budget bill.

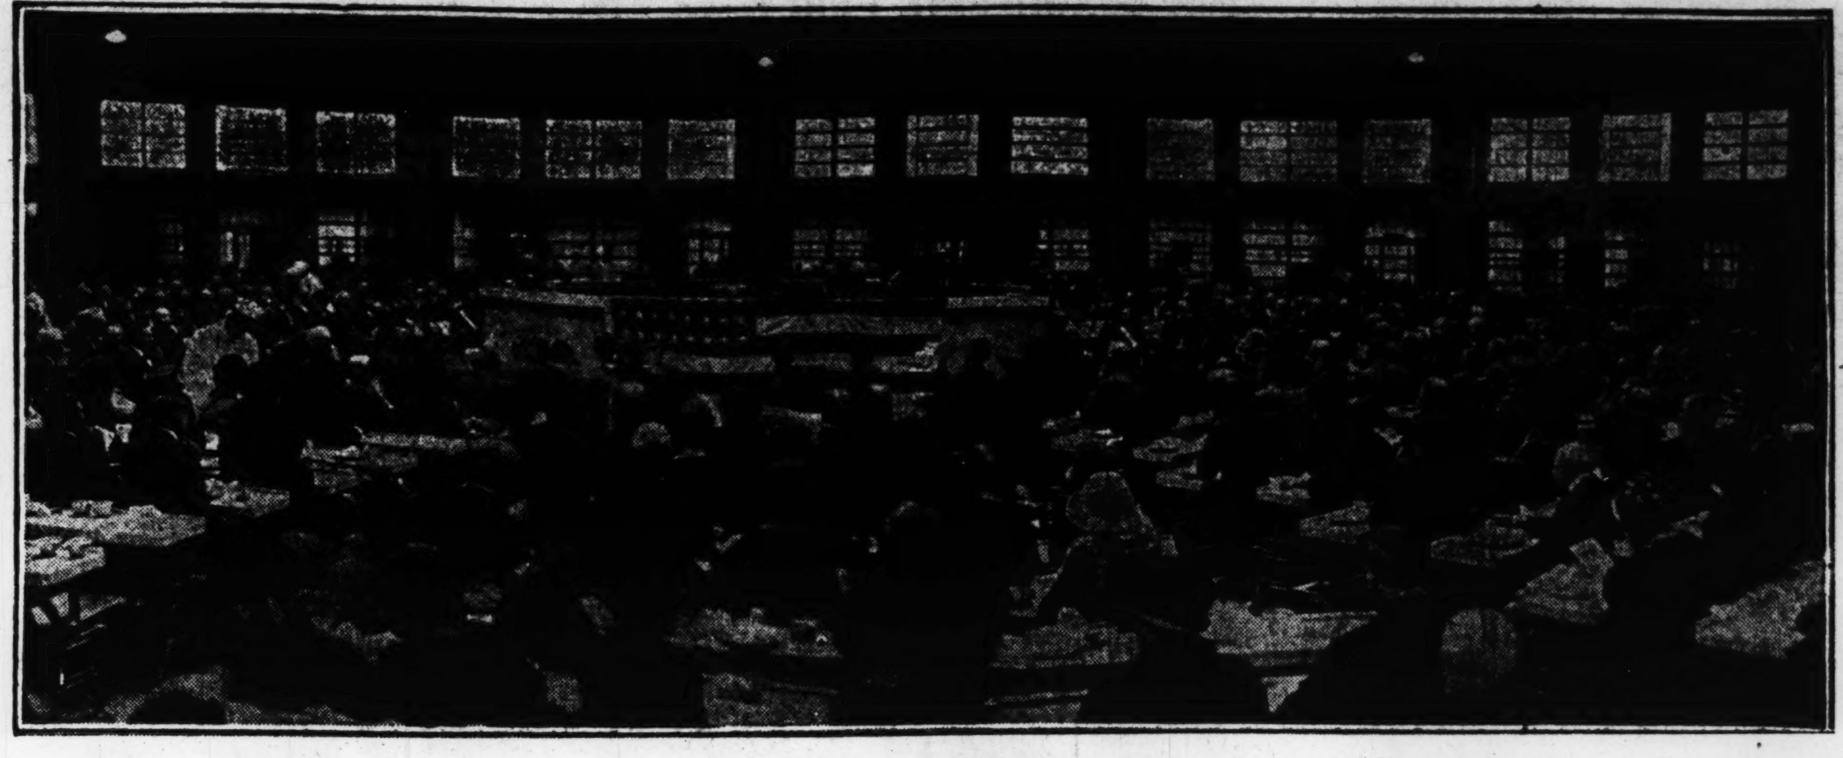
THOUSANDS, GUESTS OF A DAY, AT OPENING OF NEW ILLINOIS PRISON



Dining hall of the new prison a short distance outside of Joliet, Ill., where Warden John L. Whitman, former jailer and warden of the Bridewell in Chicago, had about 3,000 persons as guests yesterday at the official opening.

POLITICS BUBBLES AS LEGISLATORS DEDICATE PRISON

Leaders Complete Organization Plans.

BY FRANK BUTZOW.

Joliet, Ill., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—Plans for organizing the new legislature were carried forward today when members came here for the dedication of the new Illinois prison at Stateville.

More than 2,000 visitors attended the inspection. They included prosecuting attorneys, judges, and sheriffs from all parts of the state and penologists from other commonwealths.

Legislators who arrived before noon were luncheon guests of State Senator Richard J. Barr [Rep., Will], sponsor of most of the legislation that made the world's most modern prison possible.

Organization Agreed on.

Politics was discussed in every corner. The Republican old guard of the senate has virtually agreed on its organization program, including the most important committee chairmanships. Senator Barr will be reëlected president pro tem of the senate. Senator Roos [Rep., Cook] will again be chairman of the Republican caucus and will head the committee on committees.

The speakership candidacy of Representative Robert Scholes [Rep., Peoria] was given a big boost here today. Scholes is the choice of the administration. The Anti-Saloon league, which has been opposing him, is said to be relieving some of its pressure.

Warden Makes Address.

Warden John L. Whitman in his dedication address declared the function of the model prison would be the reformation of men who had run afoul of the law, not merely a place of punishment.

"I believe in giving men a square deal, just reward for their accomplishments, and prompt punishment for their misdeeds, teaching them that they can get that to which they are entitled only by giving in exchange that which they owe," said the veteran prison keeper.

The new prison is six miles northwest of Joliet and covers sixty-four acres. The walls are buff and green, instead of the conventional white. The cells are semi-circular with glass doors, braced by steel.

Appropriations amounting to $3,025,000 are required next year for completion for the new prison, Senator Barr told his colleagues today. To date $4,534,227 has been spent under Henry W. Tomlinson, superintendent of construction. About 900 convicts have been removed to Stateville. By the first of the year, it is said, the old prison will be virtually abandoned when the other 1,100 are transferred.

Interior of a cell in new prison being explained to visitors. Left to right: R. W. Yardley, assistant superintendent of construction; Elmer J. Green, superintendent of prisons; Warden Whitman, who is pointing out the improvements compared with the old prisons.

PEARL HALL, REPORTER, SOUGHT.

The detective bureau was asked yesterday to locate Pearl Hall, a court reporter, who is believed to have an office in the Ashland block and to reside in the 4800 block on Sheridan road. An information bureau of Akron, O., wired to inform her that her nephew has died.

MAKES AUTOS GO 49 MILES ON GALLON OF GASOLINE.

Sioux Falls, S. Dak.—James A. May, 2292 Lacotah Bldg., this city, announces the perfection of an amazing device that is enabling car owners to more than double their mileage from gasoline used and at the same time remove every particle of carbon from their motors. Many cars with this device attached have made over 49 miles on a gallon. It is automatic and self-regulating and can be attached by any one to any car in a few minutes. Mr. May wants agents and is willing to send a sample at his own risk to any one who will write him. Just send him your name and address.—Adv.

GETS WRIT TO KEEP HUBSAND, ALIMONY HERE

Hurried action to prevent her husband, Salem E. Munyer, wealthy New York importer, from avoiding the payment of alimony by fleeing from Chicago, was taken yesterday by Mrs. Wadia Munyer, 405 North Taylor avenue, Oak Park, through her attorney, Charles E. Erbstein.

Learning, according to Mr. Erbstein, that Munyer was about to board a train for New York, the lawyer filed a suit for separate maintenance, went at once before Superior Judge Joseph Sabath, and obtained a writ preventing Munyer from leaving the city.

Munyer, who has a place of business at 587 5th avenue, New York, has an annual income of $25,000, and owns property worth $150,000.

Two Hold Up Doctor in His Office; Rob Him of $50

Two men called at the office of Dr. Samuel M. Robin at 901 West Roosevelt road last night. One of them was limping.

"Now where does it hurt you?" the doctor inquired.

"Here," said the patient as he reached for his right hip and drew a pistol from his pocket. They took $50 from the doctor. He fired at them as they climbed into an automobile and thinks he wounded one.

VICTIM OF MOONSHINE.

Daniel Murray, 45 years old, died at the Psychopathic hospital yesterday from moonshine poisoning.

FIRE ENGINEER IS ARRESTED ON SERIOUS CHARGE

John Plant, 4833 North Lawndale avenue, chief engineer of the fire prevention bureau, was formally charged yesterday with contributing to the delinquency of two boys, Chester Schlyter, 15 years old, 1055 North Hermitage avenue, and David Antal, 16, of 1800 Thomas street.

Plant was arrested in his automobile with the two boys on Friday night by Policeman Harry Hegebon of the detective bureau, at Elston avenue and Julian street.

Daniel Antal, father of the older boy, said his son had gone riding with Plant once a week for six months. Fire Commissioner Joseph Connery was amazed when informed of the accusation against Plant, who has been one of his principal lieutenants. He began an independent investigation.

Mexicans Hide Children to Keep Them Out of School

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, Dec. 6.—In compliance with a promise to push the educational campaign of President Calles, the department of education yesterday sent out a band of truant officers in the capital and suburban towns and villages in the federal district. Indians and the laboring classes in many cases hid their children to prevent their being registered for school in January. All towns and villages in Mexico are to have truant officers.

25,000,000 Germans Vote in Reichstag Elections Today

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—Germany's general election campaign ended tonight and tomorrow 38,000,000 men and women will be asked to vote on whether they want their country to be a republic or a monarchy. It is expected that 25,000,000 persons will exercise the right of suffrage after one of the most stormy and sensational campaigns in the history of the republic.

When the campaign started the press announced that the candidates would follow the American system of radio speeches, public meetings, great advertising splurges and floods of party literature. Nothing of the kind happened. This campaign, the same as previous ones, degenerated largely into lying to the public, the planting of fake documents in the party press, the stirring up of class, racial and international hatred, and a general indulging in mud slinging in a manner which America has not witnessed for fifty years.

Dirty Politics.

The latest example of how filthy the campaign has been is seen in the effort to connect two mass murders, cases which have been next in European sensationalism to the Robinson blackmail affair, with political parties. The Stinnes organ, Algemeine Zeitung, charged that Angerstein, who killed eight persons the other day, was a ward of the chairman of the Democratic party. This accusation proved a boomerang because documents soon proved that the murderer was a member of the Nationalist party and also of the monarchist military organization known as the Young German order.

Turn Against France.

Another feature of the monarchist campaign was a last minute turn against France. With every unbiased report from Paris showing that the Herriot government is continuing its policy of reconcilation, politically and economically, the monarchists have revived the world war in an effort to stir up hatred, charging that a vote for republicanism is a vote for Germany's enemy, France.

Nevertheless, the three republican parties, the Democratic, Social Democratic, and Catholic, are confident that they will not only maintain their full strength but will gain a score of seats. In fact, they are hopeful that their gains will make possible the first republican majority government since 1919.

Expect Communists to Lose.

Every one agrees that the communist party will lose heavily. Moscow failed to send funds this time and the fact that the Dawes plan has placed Germany on its feet, providing work for most of the workmen and three square meals daily, has knocked the bottom out of the communist campaign.

The big question, therefore, is how the monarchist and nationalist parties will come out. The monarchists claim gains for the nationalists, but admit that the Voelkische (radical monarchist) party of Gen. Ludendorff and Adolf Hitler, the Fascisti leader, will lose heavily.

The Democratic and Social Democratic parties predict gains; the former on account of the republican ideas and the latter on account of the collapse of the communist organization, which hitherto took many of its members.

Conflict Among Catholics.

The Catholic party expects to gain only two or three seats in the reichstag, which would be in accordance with the natural growth of the Catholic organization. For the first time there is an internal conflict in the Catholic party. One group favors the forming of the next government with the Social Democrats instead of the People's party, thus having a purely republican government without Foreign Minister Stresemann, whose fidelity to the Republican cause has always been doubted.

Count Albrecht Montgelas, former art and literary critic of a Chicago newspaper, today published a stirring appeal for a republic.

WHO WILL PROVE SANTA LIVES TO THESE CHILDREN?

Mother Is Wonder, but Yule Hope Is Slim.

Good Fellows, the sand is pouring through the glass. The time is growing short. There are only seventeen days remaining between today and Christmas. You must hurry. If you fail thousands of the children of the poor will awaken to empty stockings on Christmas morning and there'll be sadness in the tenements.

Consider the case of the O—— family.

Last September Mr. O—— met with an accident. His skull was fractured. There was nothing in his clothes to identify him and he was taken to the county hospital as an unidentified man. For two weeks Mrs. O—— was frantic. Her husband didn't come home. The six children wondered what had happened to their daddy.

After a long search Mrs. O—— found her husband, and after several weeks the man was permitted to go to his home, his head only half healed and his condition weak. Soon he was in bed with pneumonia and was returned to the hospital. Before his accident Mr. O—— was a steady worker and gave his family all of his wages. Of course he hasn't earned any money since September.

A Neat, Tidy Little Home.

If you were to go to the little flat where the O—— family lives you would find it clean, neat, and in good order. At first glance you might think that the floors were a little too well scrubbed, the furniture a little too orderly to be that of a poverty stricken family. But if you would sit down and talk to Mrs. O—— for a minute you would learn that she is one of the wonder women of the world.

Her oldest child is 13 and her youngest is only 6 months old. Yet with the cares of these children, with the matter of providing food for them on her mind every minute, she manages to keep her house in good order. She works and with the donations from charitable organizations she manages to keep her brood from starving.

But the story of Santa Claus is in the air. The kids hear it every day. They ask their mother about it and she always assures them that the Christmas story is true, that Santa will come. Sometimes she has to hide her eyes when she says it. She knows that there won't be one extra cent this Christmas, not a single penny for Christmas presents. But she hasn't the courage to disillusion those children. She simply can't tell them the truth.

It's Up to You!

Go, Good Fellow, it's up to you. Who is going to take care of the O—— family? Who is going to prove to those children that the Christmas story isn't a myth? Who is going to fill their stockings Christmas eve? Who is going to make them happy Christmas morning?

The first Good Fellow who asks for the O—— family will have the great joy of making children cry with happiness on Christmas morning. There are hundreds of similar cases. There must be 5,000 Good Fellows this Christmas or about 25,000 poor kids are going to be disappointed Christmas morning.

If you want to be a Good Fellow—if you want to reap a wonderful reward of joy on Christmas eve—clip the coupon and fill it out. Or tomorrow go or telephone to the Good Fellow headquarters, 11 South Dearborn street, telephone CENtral 0100.

Do it now, Mr. and Mrs. Good Fellow.

HATCHET MURDER BARED AS BOYS DISCOVER BODY

Discovery of the body of a man yesterday in a prairie near Kedzie avenue and 33d street revealed what the police declare to be a Black Hand murder. Fourteen wounds on the victim's head indicated that he had been struck down with one or several hatchets.

The victim was identified by his wife as Michael Perrice of 5610 Menard avenue, employed by the Ontario Warehouse company at Ontario and Kingsbury streets. Capt. William Killeen of the Lawndale station said the murder was undoubtedly the work of the Black Hand.

The hands and feet of the dead man were tied. A raincoat had been torn in two and the pieces used to truss his head. An overcoat concealed the body from casual glances of passersby.

Several boys playing among the weeds chanced upon the body and ran screaming to the street. The police were notified and summoned Coroner's Physician Joseph Springer.

Children Fail to Return from Play; Search Is On

Police searched far into the night for two missing children. They are John Cannon, 9 years old, 846 East Marquette road, and Violet Martin, 8 years old, 5547 Blackstone avenue. They left their homes in the afternoon to play and failed to return.

BUYING HORDES SHOPPING EARLY, SHOPPING OFTEN

Stores Report Record for This Season.

BY ORVILLE DWYER.

Optimism is abroad in State street. The old laggard shopping spirit is stung into action. The perennial exhortation, "Do Your Christmas Shopping Early," is heeded. The buying has been on for several days.

The Christmas buying this year started early last week and has been going on unabated ever since. All the merchants are unanimous in stating that the sales have been remarkable.

Toy Buying Starts Early.

One of the leading signs that prosperity is really with us, the department stores' astute observers say, is the unusual early sales of toys. This early buying of toys is a sure indication that there is plenty of loose Christmas money about this year.

"The buying started much earlier this year than usual," said D. F. Kelly, vice president and general manager of The Fair. "We had the largest November business ever recorded. Business has been scattered pretty well through the house, with toys, of course, predominating.

"The two days after Thanksgiving were the biggest toy days we ever had. The early sale of toys indicates the unusual prosperity. People will not buy toys so soon in the season, if they have not the money, and the fact that they don't wait until near the end speaks for itself.

Arthur Davis of the Davis Dry Goods company had a message just as hopeful.

"If you could walk over to our store right now you'd think it was the day before Christmas," Mr. Davis said. "All the signs are that we'll have the biggest Christmas year we ever had. Toys are going as never before. In fact, we've had a rattling good business, holiday goods generally are being bought with unusual animation for so early in the season."

Setting Early Record.

John Wood of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. had another cheerful message along the same line. He asserted that holiday shopping "in the last few days has been larger and more general than it ever was before so early in the season.

"Everything points to a very successful season," he continued. "There is every indication of a general prosperity. There is early shopping, but we cannot too strongly urge the people to continue to shop both early in the season and early in the day."

"We don't remember a time within our experience when the people started their Christmas buying so early as they have done this season," was the addition of F. D. Corley, general merchandise manager of Marshall Field & Co. "There is a general feeling of optimism in the early Christmas business. People appear to have ready cash. We had a marvelous and the largest November business we have ever had."

Said Edward Mandel of Mandel Bros.: "This will be a record breaking year. I thought everybody in Chicago was downtown last week. We couldn't handle the crowds. There is an unusual early interest in toys, but people seem to be buying the better and more practical things."

Still Further Support.

H. G. Hart of the Boston Store had still another message of the same sort to add.

"People have started buying very early this year," he said, concluding the sanguine symposium. "The buying has been very brisk ever since the weather grew colder. It seems to me that the general buying shows the people have money, which, of course, means prosperity."

Bob Spent $221,977 on Campaign; Saved $4,000

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—Expenditures of the La Follette-Wheeler campaign committee to Dec. 2, as reported today to the clerk of the house, totaled $221,977, and receipts amounted to $225,936.50.

NATIONAL HOME OF V. OF F. W. TO BE READY JAN. 1

The national home of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at Jackson, Mich., will be in operation by Jan. 1, it was announced yesterday when the national council of administration, V. of F. W., meeting here, approved the recommendations of the committee on the national home.

The home will be a half million dollar project. The original property, given by Cary J. Spencer of Jackson, is valued at $250,000. It is proposed that $250,000 be expended upon equipment, the funds to be raised from members without outside solicitation. Ten thousand dollars will be applied at once to the purchase of live stock. The purpose of the home, according to the committee, will be to provide "a haven for veterans' widows and orphans and for disabled and impoverished veterans."

PLANE'S STATUS IN WAR BRINGS NAVAL CLASH

Experts Disagree on Future Value.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—The question of whether aircraft is destined to supplant battleships as the first line of the nation's defense has bobbed up again in connection with the forthcoming appropriations by congress for military aviation.

On the one hand are the advocates of a separate department of the air presided over by a cabinet minister, under whom the flying forces of the army and navy would be consolidated and rendered wholly independent of the war and navy departments. The leader of this group is Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, assistant chief of the army air service.

Airmen to Fix Preliminaries.

Gen. Mitchell visualizes the next war as a conflict in the initial stage between opposing air forces, with the army and perhaps even the navy playing a subordinate role pending the establishment of the dominion of the air by one of the contending parties. He pictures the helplessness of the army and navy of any power to cope with an enemy that has won the conquest of the air.

Heading the opposition group are the admirals and other navy officers, as well as many army officers, who insist that aviation never will be more than supplementary to warships and armies in time of war and hence that aircraft must continue under the jurisdiction of the respective defense departments. This opposition to an independent air service was expressed today in an interview with Rear Admiral Albert Gleaves.

Both Demand Development.

Both groups agree on one thing: that it is false economy which may have tragic consequences to hamstring army and navy aviation as has been done by the administration and congress since the war. The adminstration is still pursuing this policy the President asking congress this week for $14,911,191 for the army air service for the next fiscal year which is only $2,000,000 more than was appropriated for the current year, and $14,[illegible]61,000 for the naval bureau of aeronautics which is $400,000 less than it has this year.

This is the way Gen. Mitchell views the future use of military aircraft.

"The meaning of the word flight is just beginning to be understood in its far reaching consequences. We have seen that airplanes can go wherever we can establish an airway. Wherever airpower is, it can dominate the sea areas and have a great influence on any military operations on land.

Air Bases First Targets.

"In the future, powers wishing to [illegible] their physical strength against [illegible] will first seek out air bases and will [illegible] on their offensive campaigns [illegible] the air ahead of anything [illegible] successful, armies may never be [illegible] into conflict.

"There is no adequate means of defense against aircraft from the ground. Anti-aircraft guns, missile throwing weapons of all kinds, cannons, machine guns, nets raised by balloons, and searchlights cannot stop an air attack, even against the limited area that they are destined to defend. The best defense against airplanes is other airplanes.

Objective Lost in Muddle.

"In this country our aeronautical effort today is divided between a dozen or more agencies of government, all of which have some function other than aviation. The army, which can only act on the ground, cannot swim out to sea or take wings and go into the air, is designed for acting against other armies. Air power with it is entirely a secondary matter.

"The navy bases its strength on battleships and uses aviation as a secondary or auxiliary force and not as a principal one.

"We in the air say: 'Give us a chance; give us an opportunity to develop aviation for aviation's sake first and not as an auxiliary to the army and navy. Let us be a whole dog instead of being the tail of several dogs, and we'll give to you in this country a constantly increasing security from attack by air or sea.'"

Cannot Dominate Old Forces.

Admiral Gleaves concedes that air power is "essential to the efficient and successful operations of the fleet in time of war."

"But," he asserted, "so long as I can distinguish between fact and imagination and recognize the difference between sound conclusion and hysterical delusion there can be no doubt in my mind that air power is a vital and essential arm of the fleet, but it cannot dominate it.

"Let us take for granted that ships may be sunk by aircraft. Let us presume that these ships are guarding our commercial sea lanes 500, 1,000, 2,000 miles from our coast. Will the aircraft which are to sink them spring from the sea? Certainly they cannot strike from shore bases at this distance.

"The answer is obvious. These planes must attack from ships, and it would be more than absurd to presume that the ships which they attack would not be adequately equipped to repel them by aircraft. On this basis aviation is simply a new element in naval warfare, like armor plate, the rifled gun, the submarine, and the destroyer; it serves to further complicate the problems of naval strategy.

Strong for the Warship.

"It is frequently claimed that if we were 'amply provided' with airplanes, but had no battleships or forts, planes alone could prevent hostile landing and invasions.

"This is a matter of opinion; but it is safe to say that if our nation relied solely on aviation for protection it would be fatally handicapped from the beginning of a war. We might fight a defensive war for a time, but our merchant fleet would be swept from the sea, our foreign trade, which amounts to eight billions yearly, would perish. The destruction of sea power means the extinction of our foreign trade."

RESURRECT ISLE OF PINES TREATY IN U. S. SENATE

20 Year Old Problem Is Up on Wednesday.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—The Cuban government and people, according to official advices, are watching with keen interest the result of action on the famous Isle of Pines treaty, which, under an agreement reached near the close of the last session of congress, is to be taken up by the United States senate on Wednesday.

This historic treaty, having reposed for the greater part of twenty years in the committee on foreign relations, would definitely cede the Isle of Pines, lying south of the western end of the main island, to Cuba.

Plenty of Opposition.

Because of the fact that a number of Americans are interested in property in the little island, having gone down there shortly after the close of the Spanish-American war in the belief that the Isle of Pines was to be made part of American territory, there has always been enough opposition in the senate to prevent final adoption of the treaty.

The failure during all these years to settle this problem is having some effect, it is believed, on the friendly relations between the two governments and on commerce and industry between the United States and Cuba. In official Cuban circles it is pointed out that hundreds of Americans have investments in Cuba, largely in sugar, running into millions of dollars, and they have not complained because they are obliged to obey the Cuban laws, and that therefore the people living on or with money invested in the Isle of Pines should not object, for they would receive just as good treatment as the other Americans who are doing business in Cuba.

No Fear of Discrimination.

The administration and the state department have made known their desire that the treaty should be ratified, and it is believed that if it comes to a vote it will be adoped. The Amrican government does not fear that the rights of American citizens on the island will not be protected.

It is not definitely known just what assurances the Cuban government may have given in this direction, but it has been stated authoritatively that Cuba is willing to make certain concessions to the inhabitants of the island which will be to their economic benefit in case the treaty is approved.

SKI SLIDE FOR AMATEURS READY AT DEER GROVE

Forest Reserves Are to Build Four.

ANTON J. CERMAK.

The first of four ski slides for amateurs to be built in the forest preserve was completed yesterday at Deer Grove, near Palatine, it was announced by Anton J. Cermak, president of the county board.

With the first fall of snow and cold weather the new slide will be dedicated as another step in Mr. Cermak's winter sports program. A celebration is being planned by scores of snow sport enthusiasts.

Built for Amateurs.

This slide, built under the direction of Chief Forester Ransom E. Kennicott, was designed for use by ski jumpers of moderate experience. The cost was negligible. Beside the structure a runway has been cleared for tobogganing and ski running without a "jump" or takeoff.

The ski riders wil slide far out on the surface of the lake at Deer Grove. Caution, however, will be exercised in permitting this until the lake is safely frozen. The structure is completely hidden among the tall trees, so that there has been no marring of the preserve's natural beauties.

Two More in Sight.

Two more slides have been planned, for Niles and Beverly Hills. The fourth site has not yet been selected. All will be patterned so that amateur jumpers may use them without hazard. The ski slide at Palos, built of steel, can be used only by experienced ski jumpers.

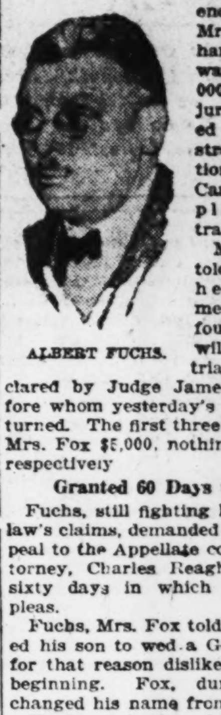
FOURTH JURY GIVES MRS. FOX $50,000 BALM



ALBERT FUCHS.

Her long quest for damages from Albert Fuchs, millionaire real estate dealer, neared an end yesterday for Mrs. Gladys Graham Fox. She was awarded $50,000 damages by a jury which decided Fuchs had destroyed the affections of his son, Carleton Fox, the plaintiff's estranged husband.

Mrs. Fox has told her story of her disillusionment in love to four juries. There will be no fifth trial, it was declared by Judge James Baldwin, before whom yesterday's verdict was returned. The first three juries awarded Mrs. Fox $5,000, nothing, and $50,000, respectively.

Granted 60 Days to Appeal.

Fuchs, still fighting his daughter-in-law's claims, demanded the right to appeal to the Appellate court, and his attorney, Charles Reagh, was granted sixty days in which to perfect the pleas.

Fuchs, Mrs. Fox told the jury, wanted his son to wed a German girl, and for that reason disliked her from the beginning. Fox, during the war, changed his name from Fuchs.

Fuchs, defending himself, declared he had made every effort to make his son and his wife happy, and even after their separation had attempted reconciliation of their differences.

Mrs. Fox Satisfied.

The jury deliberated three hours. After the verdict was read Mrs. Fox, "tired of it all," said she hoped she never would be required to go through the ordeal of another trial. She was pleased with the jury's decision, though her suit had asked $250,000.

LT. HARDING'S STORY OF LAST HOP OF MARTIN

In yesterday's installment of the story of the American airmen's flight around the world Mr. Thomas incorporated Lieut. Erik Nelson's account of the perilous journey from Sitka to Seward, Alaska. Today he resumes the story with striking excerpts from the diary of "Smiling Jack" Harding.

BY LOWELL THOMAS.

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate and the McCluer Newspapers Syndicate.]

SECTION XV.

"Smiling Jack" Harding was the only one of the world flyers to set down in his diary a detailed account of one of the most dramatic episodes of the first aerial circumnavigation of the globe, the story of the flight from Seward to Chignik and the mysterious disappearance of Martin and Harvey at one of the wildest and most remote points on the Alaskan coast.

"Les" Arnold's diary tells the story also, and the tale recorded by both men is substantially the same. But the ruggedness of the region, the bitter cold, the grandeur of the snowy peaks in that realm of ice, and both the tragic and the humorous incidents of the flight seemed to make a deeper impression on Jack, who had never encountered anything quite like this back home in sunny Tennessee.

"Snow, Snow, Snow."

"April 14. Snow, snow, snow. This is surely a good country for Eskimo," wrote "Smiling Jack." "We got up early this morning hoping to get away for Chignik. But the air is full of the biggest snowflakes I've ever seen, bigger and fluffier than we came through on our 'hair-raising, death-defying, ten-reel thriller' of a flight up here from Sitka. Having had quite enough excitement battling blizzards the previous day, we decided to wait for clear weather.

"We had moored the planes several miles north of Seward in a rather sheltered part of Resurrection bay, near a big cannery. Ogden and Harvey and I went out to the ships to get the batteries and have them recharged at the local power plant. The wind was blowing hard and yanking the planes around. So we decided to run no risk of going through another such experience as we had encountered at Sitka, and we borrowed heavy ropes and anchors from the cannery.

"We were anxious to protect the ships from mysterious variable winds called 'woolies' or 'willie-waws,' that are liable to sweep down off the snow capped mountains at any moment. These 'willie-waws' are gusts off the ice fields. Although they are only of short duration, they reach a velocity of from fifty to a hundred miles an hour, and the effect of them is much the same as the effect of a Kansas cyclone, except that they are icy blasts as cold as though you were inside an Eskimo igloo near the north pole and some one had come in and forgotten to close the door. At some places down on the Alaskan peninsula and in the Aleutian islands we were told that cables have to be put over the houses and staked to the ground to keep the 'willie-waws' from carrying away the roofs.

Some Rough Fishermen.

"Seward is a fine town. Situated on the Kenai peninsula at the head of Resurrection bay and surrounded by towering snow clad mountains, it is the southern terminus of the new government railway that is to unlock the treasure lands in the heart of Alaska. Seward also is the headquarters for the halibut fishing fleet. The fishermen from one schooner turned to and helped us put extra heavy 250 pound anchors on our planes. Then we went on board their smack while she lay alongside the cannery dock.

"These fishermen are the biggest, roughest, toughest, bearded giants I have ever seen. Most of them were Finns, Swedes, and Danes and they spoke English without an accent. But their conversation especially 'humpbacked Jake's' would not even get by an army censor.

"April 15—Up at 5. Out to the cannery to get the planes ready while the major, Erik, Smitty, and Leigh get the dope on the weather by radio from the boys down the line. Sky clear as a bell.

"When the sun came up the icy peaks sparkled as though studded with millions of scintillating diamonds.

"Bissell had arranged for oil to be supplied to us here in five gallon cans. It was as stiff as molasses from the cold, so we built a fire on the beach and put the cans right in the fire. As soon as one was hot enough we would jump into a rowboat, push out to one of the planes and dump it in.

"At 9:45 we took off. Maj. Martin was the last to get under way, so the rest of us circled around for twenty minutes, flew alongside each other, took pictures, and fooled about in the air amusing ourselves and the crowd below, until the 'Seattle' finally joined us. It was just 10:05 as we headed down the fjord between the two rows of extinct volcanoes whose snow covered cones and glacier filled valleys make Resurrection bay one of the sights of the world.

"The course to be followed on this hop from Seward to Chignik had been carefully worked out by Maj. Martin, Smith, Erik, and Wade. Our plane was to lead the flight, so Erik ascended to 1,500 feet, closely followed by the Chicago and the Boston. But for some reason, we don't know just why, and never did find out, the Seattle remained much lower, and when we headed off on the prescribed course over some low mountains near where Resurrection bay joins the sea, Maj. Martin flew way out around Cape Aialik into the Gulf of Alaska. Just off the mainland we passed an uncharted rock with a tunnel right through it. The water went in one side and out the other. We slowed up on the other side of this rock and jogged along slowly, until the major caught up with us when we were opposite McCarty glacier and Nuka bay near the southern end of the Kenai peninsula.

Leave the Seattle Far Behind.

"But the Seattle only remained with us for a mile or so. By the time we had reached Port Dick it had fallen rather far behind again.

"After passing over Barren islands, rocky promontories even more barren than their name suggests, we started down Shelikof strait, which separates Kodiak island from the mainland of the Alaskan peninsula. Here we started running into snow squalls. The waters of the Shelikof strait, by the way, have the reputation of being the roughest in the whole world with the exception of Bering sea. Between squalls the air was so clear that we could see the snowy mountains of the Aleutian range, from sixty to seventy miles to the right.

Pass Mount Katmai Volcano.

"Over there, not so far distant, we could see Mount Katmai, the gigantic active volcano from which on June 6, 1912, had come one of the most violent eruptions of modern times. On that occasion clouds of ash had fallen on hundreds of square miles of the Alaskan peninsula and Kodiak island. Ash even fell on the decks of passenger steamers 600 miles away steaming along the Yukon river.

"The whole face of the mountain had been blown off and 'bowlders as big as a house flowed like water' down into the adjoining valleys. Mount Katmai is the greatest active volcano in the world. The rim of the crater is over eight miles in circumference and its depth is over 3,500 feet. All of the buildings of New York City could be dropped into the crater without filling it, according to the explorers sent out by the National Geographic society, who were among the first to reach the rim after the eruption.

"Although we were not flying close enough to see the wonderland around the base of the volcano called 'The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes,' we could see clouds of steam rising from it. Had we not been engaged in pioneering an aerial route around the world we would have liked nothing better than to stop and visit that modern inferno where scalding streams flow from under glaciers and where hot water and icebergs are found in the same lake. We were told that it ranks with the Yellowstone and the Grand Canyon as one of the most awe-inspiring sights on the planet.

Fly Into Snow Squalls.

"Just as we were passing Cold Bay, shortly after we had seen Mount Katmai, we slowed down and Major Martin caught up with us. Again he did not signal that he had been having any trouble.

"At the southern end of Shelikof strait we ran into several snow squalls, and although we lost sight of the Seattle, under the circumstances we all thought that the major and Harvey would soon be up with us again. We kept looking back, and when fifteen or twenty minutes had elapsed we began to fear that something had happened and that they had been forced to land. By then we were not over a hundred miles from Chignik. But we were flying against a stiff headwind that retarded us. In fact, we had been bucking a wind most of the way and we barely had enough gas to carry us through. This meant that if we turned back to look for the major and Harvey that the whole expedition would run the risk of being wrecked.

Start Search for Seattle.

"We speeded up the revolutions of our motors to over 1,620 revolutions per minute and sped past Cape Providence. Then a little later we ran into fog and more snow squalls, but landed at Chignik at 4:25. A native boat came out to meet us. Smith, Nelson, and Wade immediately hurried ashore. A radio station had been established here by our advance officer, Capt. Bissell, and Smith at once ordered the operator, Sergt. Rogers, to communicate with the U. S. destroyers Hull and Cory. He also radioed Capt. Johannsen of the Star.

"We knew that they were all not far away and within a few minutes replies came back that they were acting on Smith's suggestion and speeding toward Kanatak and Portage bay. We knew the Seattle must be somewhere along that part of the coast. Smith also sent a message to a Standard Oil radio station some miles inland from Kanatak where there was a crew prospecting for oil. The superintendent at once started overland on horseback through the snow on a long and hazardous ride to get every one at Kanatak to help in the search for the lost world cruiser.

Gallant "Sub" Joins Search.

"The destroyers Hull and Cory radioed us that they were proceeding full speed ahead and expected to find the plane by daylight. A touch of humor crept into the tragic situation at this point. Capt. Johannsen on his little 'rubber bottomed tub' radioed:

"'Racing to the rescue full speed ahead.'

"Then a little later he radioed again: 'Hope to reach Martin ahead of the destroyers.' They were doing from thirty-one to thirty-three knots an hour and the best Johannsen could make was eight.

"But not long afterward another message arrived from him: 'Destroyers have just passed us making thirty-two knots. Best we can do is seven. By comparison looks as though we must be going backwards.'

"We were all worried sick over the disappearance of No. 1. But that day as we flew above Shelikof strait near Mount Katmai was to be the last time we were to see our plucky commander and our pal, Alva Harvey, until our return to Seattle after flying the rest of the way around the world."

NEW POSTOFFICE HOPE REVIVED BY HOUSE BILL

$150,000,000 Building Program Is Asked.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—Hope for a new Chicago postoffice flickered to life again today when Representative Elliott [Rep., Ind.] introduced a bill providing for a $150,000,000 building program to meet government housing needs.

Then Representative Madden [Rep., Ill.], chairman of the house appropriations committee, left a conference at the White House to spread gloom once more on the prospect of getting any building legislation through the short session. Answering a query as to the prospect of passage of Senator Smoot's bill calling for a $10,000,000 ten year building program in the District of Columbia, he replied he did not think this measure possible of enactment until it carried with it an omnibus appropriation for the erection of other government buildings much needed elsewhere in the country.

Gives President Check.

Representative Elliott's bill presents a feature which may not be objectionable to the administration, as it gives the President a double check on expenditures. Under the bill the secretary of the treasury would direct the expenditures with the consent and approval of the director of the budget, not more than $25,000,000 to be spent in any fiscal year.

This would carry the entire appropriation over a period of at least six years. In other words, if the President willed that no money at all should be spent in a certain year none would be spent.

To Study Requirements.

The Elliott bill also calls upon the secretary of the treasury to make a study of the requirements of all government establishments with a view to determining the floor area and type of building necessary in each case. He would also be required to designate the site and to allocate, subject to the approval of the President, the work of preparing plans, estimates, specifications and awarding contracts.

TEXTILE MILLS IN FALL RIVER REOPEN MONDAY

Fall River, Mass., Dec. 6.—Announcement was made today by the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers' association that all but five of the cotton mills of the city will reopen at full time on Monday, affording employment for 20,000 persons. Some of the mills had been closed for many months.

The announcement of the manufacturers said the demand for finished product of Fall River looms had shown decided improvement. There has been no wage reduction in Fall River textile mills.

Roast Spring Turkey dark meat 85c white meat 95c

North American food values like these can't be matched anywhere

(Ready 5 to 8 P. M. week days—all day Sundays and Holidays)

Whether your preference is for dark meat or white meat you will get a portion big enough to satisfy the heartiest appetite. We carve each turkey into six portions only. So instead of the few thin slices which many dining-places call a portion, we actually give you one-sixth of a good sized turkey. And included with each portion is a liberal helping of delicious stuffing, giblet gravy and cranberry sauce.

Yet in spite of these extremely low prices for such liberal portions, you cannot get finer roast turkey anywhere. We roast only plump, tender spring turkeys from the State of Missouri—the finest turkeys coming into Chicago. And they are roasted and stuffed as carefully and finely as you would roast them at home.

Do you know any restaurant or hotel—anywhere—where you can get such a fine portion of turkey for so little money? Doesn't this prove that it pays to "serve yourself" in this Common Sense Restaurant?

A few of our other specialties:

Fried Oysters: 7 big New York Counts fried to your order, with tartar or chile sauce or ketchup 40c

Fried Premium Chicken: Breast of Premium Milk-fed Chicken, with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce - 65c

Tenderloin Steak: A thick, juicy steak, with French fried potatoes and lima beans 85c

And for Breakfast:—

Honey Waffles: With 3 strips of bacon or Mickelberry's Old Farm sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey 25c

Bacon and Eggs: 2 fresh eggs, fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon 30c

(To order from 7 a. m. to Midnight)

This is one restaurant where children are always welcome!

POLICEMAN WHO SHOT IT OUT WITH TRIO WINS $100

Jesse B. Reese Awarded Tribune Hero Prize.

Extraordinary bravery and devotion to duty exhibited during a gun battle with three bandits in which he killed two and shot the third, although wounded, causes THE TRIBUNE to award its November $100 hero prize to Jesse B. Reese, colored policeman. He is of the Cottage Grove avenue station.

A close rival for the distinction was Policeman John Kaspar of the Brighton Park command, who pursued an armed thug into a dark areaway. As he entered the passage, Kaspar received a shot through his right lung.

Kills the Thug.

Struggling to his knees, Kaspar, the target for more bullets from the thug's gun, fired one shot, killing the man instantly. Terror stricken bystanders when they ventured into the areaway found Kaspar, gun still in hand, collapsed over the body of his man. Kaspar was taken to a hospital, where it was reported yesterday, he is still in a critical condition.

A few minutes before midnight on Nov. 7 Policeman Reese noticed three suspicious looking colored men leaving the Griswold drug store, 3701 Indiana avenue. Thinking to question and search them, Reese ordered the trio to hold up their hands.

While his companions moved as if to comply with the order, one of the men suddenly drew a revolver and fired pointblank at the policeman. Reese dropped to the sidewalk with a bullet through his right lung. Fighting to retain consciousness, Reese drew himself up on one elbow and returned the fire of the three bandits, all of whom had by this time drawn guns and were firing as they retreated.

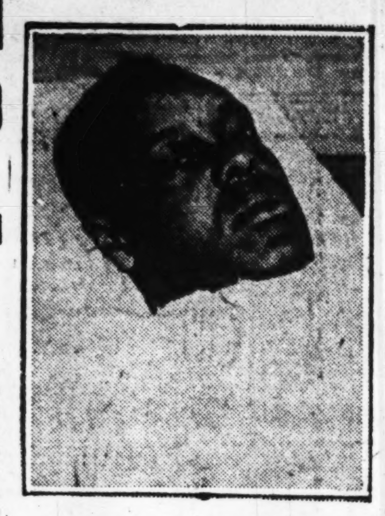
Dies in Fence Corner.

The policeman's first bullet found its mark in the body of Arthur Breen, 4610 Calumet avenue, who staggered away into the darkness to die in a fence corner in the rear of 3614 Indiana avenue. Reese's second bullet hit Jim Hamilton, 3014 Indiana avenue, whose body was found later in a vacant lot at 37th street and Michigan avenue.

Half a dozen witnesses of the battle confirm Reese's assertion that another bullet struck the third bandit, who dropped his gun and fled.

At the side of Breen, the bandit who shot Reese, was found a large revolver with five empty cartridges in its chambers. Hamilton's hand still clutched the $40 which he had snatched from Emmet Napper, the drug clerk who was cowed into submission by a shot fired by the bandit.

Heroism Rewarded



Policeman Jesse B. Reese wins The Tribune's $100 November bravery award.

N. U. CLASSROOM GIVEN IN HONOR OF LATE R. W. COX

"The Rensselaer W. Cox Classroom on Factory Management," will be a feature of Northwestern university's downtown school. Mrs. Louise Deshler Cox, 1539 Astor street, has contributed $25,000 to provide the special lecture room in memory of her husband. It will be in the school of commerce building.

The room will be devoted largely to the topics in which the late cooperage manufacturer was interested.

Mr. Cox was a pioneer Chicagoan who obtained his public and high school education in Chicago. He organized the firm of Seaman, Cox & Brown in 1882. Later the name was changed to the Pioneer Cooperage company, with Mr. Cox as president. In 1921 he became chairman of the board of directors, which office he held until his death, a year later.

The subscriptions to the commerce building now total $400,000, $300,000 short of the goal.

Mother Seeks Missing Daughter in This City

Ella Ilkanich, 16 years old, 2128 West 50th street, has been missing from her home since last Monday. Her mother, Mrs. Joseph Ilkanich, believes she may be employed as a maid in some Chicago home. The girl quarreled with a brother, ran out of the house, and called on a friend in the neighborhood where she said she was going for a walk in Gage Gage park. She has not been seen since.

HOW POSTAL PAY TRAILS POSTAL DUTIES SHOWN

Salary Raises Lag Behind Increase in Work.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Although salaries of postal employés have lagged far behind the increase in cost of living and the increased wage levels for workers in private industry, the carriers, clerks and other groups are each doing about 50 per cent more work than ten years ago.

Individual productivity has grown rapidly. The postal service is one line in which limitation of output is unknown, and the faster the volume of mail has grown, the harder the men have worked to get it to its destination.

It is one of the arguments brought out for the salary increase bill, which may go to a vote in the United States senate this coming week on a question of overriding the President's veto. The veto, by the way, was based most largely on the fact that the bill does not provide additional revenue.

Figures on the Real Wage.

Just where does the faithful carrier and clerk stand in his wrestle with cost of living? Since 1907 the salary of the grade embracing the major portion has been advanced from $1,200 to $1.800. It is a raise of 50 per cent. During that period, it is pointed out, living costs have doubled. As to manufacturing industries, average wages are more than double the pre-war level. Real wages—the purchasing power of the pay envelope—are computed to stand 25 per cent above 1914 for the average worker in private manufacturing industries. On the other hand, the real wages of the postal employés are considerably below the 1914 mark.

Among the arguments submitted before congress at its last session, when the salary increase got an almost unanimous vote in both house and senate, was one computing that if the pay of postal employés had kept pace with the growing wages of workers in private industry, fifth grade carriers and clerks would now be paid $2,619 a year. Instead they get $1,800. The bill gives them $2,100.

What Bill Would Do.

To put it another way, still using these two groups as a measure, the bill would increase the maximum pay of the 107,000 city letter carriers and clerks in first and second class postoffices from $150 a month to $175. It would raise them from 34.60 a week to $40.38 a week. Out of this is deducted 2½ per cent for the pension fund.

The postal deficit of $24,000,000, supporters of the bill say, ought to prove no hobgoblin to scare off a living wage for the employés. The employés, in fact, have been diligent in cutting the deficit down. Postmaster General New reported in September that since 1921 the postal deficit had been reduced from $83,400,000 to about $24,000,000. This showing was largely made possible because the postal workers have pitched into an increasing volume of mail and speeded up their efforts.

The $60,000,000 saving has come largely out of the backs and nerves and hides of the employés, and it has been done cheerfully and without a murmur.

Figures Prove Efficiency.

Here is one significant measure:

Mr. New's annual report, out last Monday, shows that in expenditures per thousand dollars of receipts the clerical force cost $232.69 in 1921 and $211.34 in 1924—a reduction of 9 per cent. It was due to increased productivity of the force. Similarly for every $1,000 of receipts the city delivery carriers cost $159.70 in 1921 and $148.28 in 1924. A reduction of 7 per cent—meaning larger loads carried in the shoulder bag. Railway mail service, too, made a similar reduction of operating ratio, amounting to 12 per cent, while rural delivery service recorded a 15 per cent reduction in ratio of costs to receipts.

Table of Increases.

So far as the largest groups of employeés are concerned, the bill would increase salaries as follows:

—Number—		Salary per year.
Clerks.	Carriers.	Now.	Proposed.
28,592	32,940	$1,800	$2,100
6,881	4,357	1,700	2,000
4,582	3,101	1,600	1,900
4,739	2,419	1,500	1,800
5,326	1,866	1,400	1,700

It will increase the salaries of some 20,000 railway mail clerks $300 a year. The present schedule ranging from $1,600 to 2,300 would be made $1,900 to $2,300.

Some 44,000 rural carriers, covering 1,194,000 miles each day, now using their own vehicles and equipment without any allowance, would be given 4 cents for each mile covered per day as an equipment allowance.

Hursen's 3 Funeral Homes are the most beautiful in America

Each of Hursen's 3 establishments in Chicago is built like a mansion. Each is a "funeral-home," with great chapels, lodge and society meeting-rooms, private family sanctums—all furnished with consummate art and elegance.

No matter how large or small the funeral, these facilities are at the disposal of all, without any extra charge whatever. Hursen's automobiles are the "most beautiful things on wheels," each specially designed by Hursen himself. There is no extra charge for these over the usual auto hire.

Your "neighborhood undertaker" has not the facilities, the massive space, elegance of equipment, beauty of environment and materials, perfect organization with the highest-type of service-employes in America, nor the amazing beauty of automobile equipment, which are obtainable only at "Hursen" funerals.

With "Hursen" service there is always one invariable rule—that Hursen charges are far less than those exacted anywhere else without a single exception. Call Hursen, of course!

PROTECTION FOR THE FARMER AND WAGE EARNER.

The President's reference in the message to the tariff and to immigration may remind both the wage earner and the farmer that when we talk about labor laws and agricultural laws we usually forget the two most important. Labor leaders demand laws which they think will protect wages. Farmer leaders demand laws which they think will increase prices. But the two greatest labor laws and the two greatest agricultural laws are the tariff act and the exclusion act.

From the standpoint of the wage earner, though he has often voted for the party which theoretically opposes the protective doctrine and when possible restricts protection to the injury of the wage earner, the tariff maintains his standard of living and makes possible a level of pay which places him ahead of any other labor in the world. All the organization he could build up would not save him from economic and social retrogression if protection from the competition of low cost foreign products were not given the industries on which his prosperity depends.

The immigration act is another labor law. Aside from the political and social objects of restriction, it is another form of protection of the American worker. It is a bulwark of his living standard, a defense against the competition of workers willing to live more narrowly and to work longer than he. No organization, no artificial wage laws could save him from a deterioration of living conditions if the influx of low price foreign workers were unchecked. Restriction of immigration is not only protection to the American worker's conditions of life but assurance of progress.

As for the farmer, the protection of American industry and the standard of living of the American wage earner, if it has raised the price of what he buys, has given him the best market in the world for his products. Important as the foreign markets are in the fixing of prices of farm exports, a collapse of the home market through general business depression would soon be found to be an even more serious matter.

The President in his message, when discussing the agricultural situation, said: "We must permit no division of classes in this country, with one occupation striving to secure advantage over the other;" and this wise principle applies to tariff policy. The farmer is exhorted to demand tariff reduction, but with better judgment of his own final interest than the wage earner who votes for the reduction of his own protection, the farmer has usually supported the party of protection. Although protection has raised the price of what he has to buy, it has in the main protected his chief market. His proper course for correcting the inequities of tariff law is not to destroy the protection of his market but to bring agriculture within its defenses wherever it needs them. We think the present act needs some amendments for the better protection of the farmer, and we hope the President and Republican leaders will see that he gets it.

Immigration restriction will also aid the farmer substantially. It will protect him from the direct competition of agriculturists of lower standards of living, as it will protect the American wage earner from the competition of cheap labor in industry. And by protecting the American worker in his standard of living it will help sustain the American farmer's best customer.

There are offsets to these advantages, of course, but in the main and in the long run the policies of tariff protection of American industry from foreign competition at home and the protection by exclusion of the American worker on the farm and in the factory are the two great main pillars of our industrial and agricultural welfare, and therefore the two most important labor and agricultural policies of the United States.

CHICAGO, THE FLAGSHIP OF BACKWARD AVIATION.

"Everybody asks us how the world cruisers got their names," says Lieut. Arnold, log keeper of the great flight. This is how:

"Washington preferred the idea of naming them after four important cities that had been particularly backward in aviation." Those four cities were Seattle, Boston, New Orleans, Chicago. The hope was, says Lieut. Arnold, to stir up interest in aviation among the inhabitants of the backward cities.

Chicago became the flagship of the backward squad. It is the biggest aviation slacker. And when the Seattle rammed the mountains of Alaska and the Boston fell into Iceland seas, only the Chicago and the New Orleans were left to tell the world that big cities should look to their aviation. Underground and up in the air Chicago is a loafer.

MR. GOMPERS IN MEXICO.

The prominence given Mr. Gompers and a delegation of the A. F. L. at the inauguration of President Calles we trust is a portent of good. Mexico, like other Latin American republics, has been an asylum for political exiles and revolutionary propagandists from Europe; and during and after the war from the United States. Their influence has been evident in Mexican affairs since the fall of Madero and we know of few countries which could less afford to follow their leadership or respond to their incitements. The United States was interested in their machinations to the extent it is interested in the stability and substantial progress of Mexico.

We are glad, therefore, that conservative labor leadership in this country has won the confidence of Mexican organized labor and its political leaders. If the wise counsel of Mr. Gompers is followed, revolutionary radicalism will get the cold shoulder, anarchy will be avoided, and an economic policy established which will justify the investment in Mexican development of the private capital which is essential to the progress of the nation and the prosperity of its people. That involves likewise a stabilization of Mexican politics, the recognition of a sovereign state's responsibilities, and therefore the maintenance of peace on our border and mutually profitable relations between the Mexican and American nations.

A NATION'S WASTE AND ITS CORRECTION.

Secretary Hoover insists upon thinking in terms of the science of government rather than the profession or business of politics. By that we do not mean he is forever proposing some new job for the state. On the contrary, Mr. Hoover is a sturdy individualist, a sound American who believes that we must rely upon the individual, his intelligence and character, for genuine progress. So Mr. Hoover, thinking of the problems of the general good, confidently addresses himself to the task for which his constructive and practical genius well fits him, of pointing out what voluntary coöperation and private initiative can accomplish in improving the organization of production, the methods of commerce, and the exploitation of our national resources. In his annual report as secretary of commerce he has some important things to say on economic waste, and while the problem of reducing its drain is as wide as the nation's activities and as many sided, he has some general remarks which are worth considering.

For example: "The American standard of living is the product of high wages to producers and low prices to consumers. The road to national progress lies in increasing the real wages through proportionately lower prices. The one and only way is to improve methods and processes eliminating waste."

In other words, the way is not to "liquidate" wages nor to put American workers into competition with Europeans or Asiatics by lowering the tariff to let in cheap foreign manufactures.

Also the way is not to pass more laws, create more bureaus, put more government into business. "But by well directed economic forces, by coöperation in the community, we cannot only maintain American standards, we can raise them."

"We have the highest ingenuity and efficiency in the operation of our industry and commerce of any nation in the world. Yet our economic machine is far from perfect. Wastes are legion. There are wastes which arise from widespread unemployment during depressions, and from speculation and overproduction in booms; wastes attributable to labor turnover and labor conflicts; wastes due to intermittent and seasonal production, as in the coal and construction industries; vast wastes from strictures in commerce due to inadequate transportation, such as insufficient terminals; wastes caused by excessive variations in products; wastes in materials arising from inefficient processes; wastes by fires, and wastes in human life."

Secretary Hoover's conception of the function of the department of commerce, as we might expect, is anti-paternalistic. He reports that an increasingly definite program has been developing for three years, the principle of which is coöperation with industry and commerce, not bureaucratic regulation and control. We hope that conception will inspire and restrain the department of commerce permanently. We are not very confident that it will, for the tendency of government is to aggrandize itself and of departments and bureaus to expand and spread out. But Secretary Hoover has shown the right way, and if public opinion will give thought to Secretary Hoover's policies and principles, which are essentially American, bureaucratic encroachments may be kept within bounds.

LA FOLLETTE NO REPUBLICAN.

Senator Brookhart has no direct criticism, we are told by a Washington interviewer, of the action of the Republican senate caucus denying him and three other senators who were elected as Republicans a Republican status in the senate.

That is very magnanimous of the man who, after running for the senate in two Republican primaries and two elections as a Republican, has done about everything he could to discredit Republicanism and its administration of government, defeat the Republican presidential candidates, and assist a movement to break up the Republican party. But if Brookhart has not lost all standing in the Republican party, together with La Follette, his leader, and Ladd and Frazier, there is no such thing as a Republican party.

We do not pretend to pass upon the question of parliamentary expediency involved in refusing to recognize these four men as officially Republican. But we have said, and we say it again, that there is nothing in any advantages of senate tactics or organization which might come of compromising with these men which can offset the discredit to the party which condoning their desertion, their open enmity, and their political and economic theories would justly bring upon it. To give La Follette and his associates the privileges of party affiliation would be an act of cowardice which would put a premium on betrayal and on desertion and advertise to the public that the leadership of the Republican party did not regard its principles as important or loyalty to them essential to standing in the party. Such a decision would make a farce of party and it is our opinion that there is a serious need in our national life to restore the prestige of party and reënergize party loyalty, not to weaken it. La Follette is no Republican.

The men who have just been denied status by the senate caucus, although they do not represent western Republicanism do represent a western phenomenon with which the Republican party must deal. They represent discontent which has a good deal of justification and which ought to have a more intelligent expression than La Follette and the Farmer-Labor representatives can give. This is one of the chief duties of Republican leadership to give to western Republicanism the representation in Republican administration and policies the place it deserves and must have if the Republican party is to survive. The third party leaders did not represent the fundamental political, social, or economic convictions of the west. They only represented its discontent and sense of injustice, or, rather, they misrepresented it. It is the privilege and duty of the real leadership of the party to give it a true expression.

Mr. Henning has pointed out that the control of congress through the committees has by process of seniority passed into the hands of western men. We hope that means that western needs and western views of national polity will have greater influence than they have had for some time. We do not preach a narrow sectionalism, though the west has suffered from eastern sectionalism in the past. We do say it is time the west had more to say in Republican policy, domestic and foreign, than it has had. In this is the best hope of new progress and power for the party.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

The symbol of life has been created out of environment. Christmas is moving into the cities from the north, in boatloads and carloads of evergreens. We do not set up the palm as a symbol of the Birth, but get one out of the snow, a fir or spruce which will sing in a tempest of snow, a conifer which will harbor flock of small wintering cross bills and seed eaters and which is alive when it is burdened in white.

The new life comes when the frost has firmly locked the door on production. The sign of hope is in the fir which stands by the window against which the thorns of the dried rose bush rasp in the wind. The fir is alive and bold. It is the picture of our optimism, the singing voice of our illusion and the fresh token of our knowledge of the greater good beyond the horizon of experience.

THE BEAR AND THE BUFFER STATES.

The effort of communists to overthrow the government of Esthonia is recognized as a measure of Russian policy. The revolt was fomented and supplied from Moscow, whether through the agency of the Red International or directly that of the soviet government, a difference of tweedledum and tweedledee. To the doctrinaire communists this neighborly activity would be described as a phase of the proletarian revolution. To the observer not concerned with that jargon it appears as a piece of Russian imperialist policy of the traditional kind. It is amusing to note how behind all the Leninist phraseology about the workers' world revolution the ancient objects of Russian foreign policy reveal themselves, with the proletarian dictatorship as doggedly and sleeplessly determined as ever a czarist foreign minister was.

Those objects are comprised in the word expansion, or, if you choose, in the phrase, the drive to warm water, to the high seas, the central thoroughfare of the world. Whether to the Atlantic by way of the Baltic or to the Mediterranean by way of the Bosporus, the westward urge of Russia continues under the soviet as under the czars.

This is a movement deeper and stronger than policies or theories, more enduring than dynasties or revolutions.

In its fateful path lie the new republics formed from czarist Russia on the amiable principle of self-determination, but with the practical intent of placing a cordon around bolshevism. But resolved as the Esthonian patriots, the Letts, or the Lithuanians may be to determine their own national or racial destiny, the future lies dark and stormy before them. Any one who considers past experience of mankind must fear that the vast mass of Russia, moved by the expansive force of an immemorial impulse, and indeed by a very practical present interest, will in due time sweep inexorably over these barriers. It has been often the fate of buffer states and justice or ideal right has never saved them.

We do not say this must be the fate of the Baltic republics and the American people will respond, emotionally, at least, to the appeal of the Esthonian government for the civilized world's moral support against the Russian menace. Whether more than moral support can or will be given by other nations is dubious but not impossible. Measures might be developed which would not involve the reaction on Russian affairs which aid to some reactionary experiments produced. They are Europe's responsibility rather than ours.

Meanwhile, however, the people of the United States have had another striking illustration of the use made by Moscow of diplomatic relations. Moscow and Esthonia were formally at peace, with the normal contacts and responsibilities of friendly nations. But that has not prevented the Red régime from plotting the destruction of the Esthonian republic and its absorption into bolshevik Russia.

We do not know if this new demonstration of the soviet code of international morals will have any weight with our advocates of resuming diplomatic relations with Russia. We are sure it will intensify public opinion in this country against recognition. We are not in danger from communist propaganda or espionage, but given cover of diplomatic relations they would be a nuisance and at the same time our recognition would give a new prestige to Moscow which would strengthen its power to do mischief in weak states. We see no profit in increasing the instability of world affairs by playing into the hands of the ambitious and unscrupulous régime which holds power in Russia at this time.

Editorial of the Day

UNDERMINING COURTS.

[Sheboygan (Wis.) Press-Telegram.]

The crime wave has grown in Chicago because of the breaking down of good court ethics, and their replacement by sympathetic pleas. As we reviewed the report of the Chicago Anti-Crime council, we noted that for the first ten months of 1924 there had been 294 murders as against 270 for the year of 1923, and in the month of October alone there were 36 murders. Since January, 1921, to and including Nov. 1, 1924, there was a total of 991 murders, for which 485 persons were indicted, or a trifle under 50 per cent for the murders committed, and but 35 per cent penalized or sentenced. A review of the jury verdicts in murder cases indicates that one in every three was found guilty, and in the face of concrete evidence of guilt. In one instance the defendant was found insane at the time of the murder and sane at the time of the verdict.

It is not our law making machinery that is defective, but those who undermine that machinery. The crooked politician is usually found lined up with the criminal element, and he usually finds worthy support in some fanatic who is afraid that some poor murderer is going to pay the penalty with capital punishment, and so he reaches the ear of the deluded man or woman who does not understand the essential need for courts and juries, and as a result justice many times miscarries, and the criminal is idolized and even flowers are sent as a tribute to his criminal genius. No, our court machinery is all right, but our citizenship is somewhat off color.

PROFESSIONALISM.

The seance was proving a great success. The new member of the circle, an Oldham pigeon fancier, had been brought into touch with the lately departed father-in-law, who had just announced he was an angel.

"Wi' wings an' all?" asked the son-in-law.

The reply was in the affirmative.

"What dost measure fra' tip to tip?" asked the pigeon fancier.—Vancouver Province.

PROPER VENTILATION.

It is time to begin writing about heating and ventilation. The common impression is that the pneumonias, bronchitis, sore throats, and common colds are due to imperfect heating and ventilation. It is true that all these diseases are due to bacteria, they are forms of contagion and they are spread by people. While this is true, it is also true that they do not spread to a great extent except in those seasons of the year when the people are housed. In cold climates people stay in their houses long hours each day in the seasons where the houses are hot and dry. Aside from the question of disease, there are the questions of comfort.

In order that the air in a heated and ventilated room shall be comfortable, it must measure up to a group of standards. These, E. V. Hill outlines in what he calls the synthetic chart method. The qualities of the air which are recorded on this synthetic air chart embrace temperature, humidity, motion, dust, bacteria, odors, carbonic acid, and distribution. Not only are the facts set down as they are observed, but the percentage of perfect in each division is also set down. Finally, the percentage of perfect on all qualities is determined. When this synthetic chart is used for scoring a heating and ventilating system, the final percentage of perfect on all the qualities covered is the rating given the installation.

The great value of Hill's synthetic air chart is that it drives home the fact that heating and ventilation is more than a matter of so much cubic feet of air per inhabitant per hour, and such a temperature as recorded by an ordinary thermometer. In a report on nineteen installations which Dr. Hill made to the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers the scores ranged from 63.5 to 93. A test made in the open air on an ideal day gave a score of 99.

The low score—63.5—was given a printing pressroom. Natural ventilation was employed. The room was hot, the humidity was high, there were odors and the air was poorly distributed. A telephone booth without ventilation of any kind got a score of 68.5. The air in this booth was hot and wet because the occupants heated it and supplied it with moisture and odors. The score of 93 was given to a banking room. This was built under specifications which included a provision that the air in the rooms was to score 90 or over on the synthetic air chart.

This chart calls for no examination for carbon monoxide, or unburned gas, or fumes of any sort. Before it can be used with advantage in certain places, for instance, in some industrial establishments, quality of freedom from carbon monoxide and fumes must be covered.

FRUIT JUICE VALUES.

A. A. writes:

1. Would you kindly give me some information about fruit juice? I know that oranges are the best, but if oranges cannot be supplied what are the others that might be used instead?

2. Are grapes very good for the health even of people affected with enteritis?

REPLY.

1. If you mean to use fruit juices as a source of anti-scorbutic vitamine, those which rank high are: Orange juice, tomato juice, lemon juice, and lime juice. This last is taken from a table given by Kellogg. If you use fruit juice for the growth of vitamines, or for the mineral content, they should be ranked differently.

2. I should say, in a general way, that eating grapes is good for the health, though I see no special reason for eating them for enteritis.

CURED ITCHING FEET.

P. E. D. writes: I would like to add my testimony to that of "J. E. H." recommending salicylic acid for itching feet. For three years I had the trouble from knee to ankle and had run the gamut of known remedies with no relief. Three weeks' use of the acid has turned the trick. I am entirely cured and owe a debt of gratitude to "J. E. H." and to you for the publication.

GOING IN CIRCLES.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—[Friend of the People.]—Just what are the obligations of the city in regard to removing ashes from private residences? We have six galvanized bushel sized ash containers, all full, and lately we have been forced to dump the ashes in the alley. Now an inspector comes and threatens to bring us into court if we do not stop dumping the ashes in the alley. What are we to do? L. G. R.

We regret because of the fact that the funds for the removal of ashes in the 49th ward are almost depleted service will be greatly handicapped for the balance of the year. Immediately thereafter regular and more frequent service will be given.

LOOK BEFORE YOU BUY.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—About two weeks ago I bought a coat at a neighborhood store and when I got it home I found it badly damaged. I took the coat back next day and they denied selling the coat in that condition and accused me of tearing it myself. I have two witnesses who saw the condition of the coat when I took it out of the box. Can I compel them to make good without any expense to myself? A. E. F.

Expenses would necessarily be incurred in enforcing your legal rights.

1. No.

2. Yes, as far as the facts stated are concerned.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

60 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 7, 1864.

WASHINGTON.—Maj. Gen. Rosecrans was superseded in command of the department of Missouri by Maj. Gen. Grenville M. Dodge of Iowa. Gen. Steele is understood to be superseded by Maj. Gen. Reynolds.

WASHINGTON.—President Lincoln sent to the senate the nomination of Salmon P. Chase as chief justice of the Supreme court, and it was immediately confirmed. The nominations of James Speed as attorney general and William Dennison as postmaster general also went to the senate, but were not acted upon.

CHICAGO.—John M. Gibson and Miss Jennie L. Goode, daughter of Thomas Goode, were married at the Church of the Ascension by the Rev. S Russell Jones.

WASHINGTON.—President Lincoln's failure to say anything in his message to congress on the relations of the United States with Great Britain and France caused much comment. Although every phase of government activities was taken up by the message, the recommendation that slavery be forever abolished by amendment to the constitution is regarded as the most important. The President recalled that such a measure passed the senate at the last session, but was lost in the house. Since then, he said, there has been an election, which, in effect, is evidence that the public want such an amendment, and that, if this congress does not pass it, the next one will.

CHICAGO.—News reached Chicago of the death of Maj. Rodney S. Brown of the 100th Illinois volunteers, son of Dr. Brown of Washington, Ill., at Nashville, from wounds received at the battle of Franklin, Tenn., on Dec. 3.

ST. PAUL.—Information has reached here that most of the hostile tribes of Indians have sent representatives to Fort Sully, on the Missouri, with overtures for peace. Capt. Pell refused to meet with the Indians until they gave up the white woman they hold as prisoner, and they agreed to produce her.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 7, 1899.

MAYSVILLE, Ky.—Richard Coleman, a Negro, confessed murderer of Mrs. James Lashbrook, wife of his employer, was burned at the stake by a mob of 1,000 led by relatives of the dead woman.

CHICAGO.—W. B. Moss of Mattoon, Ill., offered to sell to the Lincoln park board for $10 the spring wagon on which Abraham Lincoln rode to the polls on the occasion of his first election. The board referred the offer to a committee.

CHICAGO.—Miss Ethel Richardson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Richardson, 47 Bellevue place, and Robert Dunham were married at St. Chrysostom's church.

CHICAGO.—The national executive committee of the Grand Army of the Republic, meeting at the Palmer House, fixed next year's national encampment for Aug. 27 to Sept. 1 at Chicago. It is expected to have 50,000 of the veterans in the parade line.

LONDON.—The only battle reported yesterday was fought just outside of Kimberley. The British claim to have captured a Boer leader, but admit they suffered considerable losses. Maj. Scott-Turner of the Second Highlanders and thirty-one men were killed.

WASHINGTON.—St. Louis congressmen plan to make a hard fight against the water being turned into Chicago's new drainage canal. They claim the water supply of St. Louis will be imperiled.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 7, 1914.

BERLIN.—It is officially announced that the Germans occupied Lodz, the second largest city in Russian Poland, day before yesterday. The Russians retreated after heavy losses.

LONDON.—The allies made advances in Flanders and northern France and succeeded in hampering communication between Metz and points further west. Ostend is reported to be on fire either from British shells or German incendiaries.

PETROGRAD.—A correspondent says: "The shelling of Lodz began a week ago and grew heavier and heavier until shells were falling at five minute intervals, setting many fires. Once the Germans attempted to storm the city but were driven back at the points of bayonets."

NEW YORK.—The World prints a dispatch from Mexico City charging that two United States senators were paid $75,000 by Carranza to hasten the evacuation of Vera Cruz by the American troops under Gen. Funston. The government records show the money was paid, but do not give the names of the senators.

CHICAGO.—Thomas F. Scully, who takes his seat as county judge today, announced that August Lueders will be appointed a member of the board of election commissioners to succeed Dr. Howard S. Taylor. Dennis J. Egan will succeed William H. Stuart as chief clerk of the board. John E. Traeger succeeds Michael Zimmer as sheriff and William L. O'Connell Henry Stuckart as county treasurer.

CHICAGO.—Three members of the grand jury which returned graft indictments against Capt. John J. Halpin and others in the detective bureau received anonymous letters threatening their lives.

CHICAGO.—Edward N. Hurley will be installed president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association at its annual banquet tomorrow night at the Congress.

IS FLORIDA A HAVEN FOR TAX DODGERS?

Phillips, Wis., Nov. 29.—Noting your recent editorial on "Florida's Anti-Inheritance Tax Amendment to Its Constitution," suggests looking at this matter in the full light of the facts.

The federal revenue act of June 2, 1924, provides as follows:

"[b] The tax imposed by this section shall be credited with the amount of any estate, inheritance, legacy, or succession taxes actually paid to any state or territory, or the District of Columbia, in respect of any property included in the gross estate. The credit allowed by this subdivision shall not exceed 25 per centum of the tax imposed by this section." It is clear that Florida estates will pay the full tax. It is equally clear that the state of Florida will lose 25 per cent of the federal estate levees on estates within that state.

Let us see what this means in loss to the Florida state treasury without any gain to any one. A short time ago Mr. Ingraham, vice president of the Florida East Coast railway (a native of Wisconsin), died, leaving an estate of $10,000,000. The estate tax rates on page 49 of the act of June 2, 1924, show that the federal tax on that estate is $2,560,000, of which Florida's 25 per cent would have been $640,000. This amount is forfeited by the adoption of its anti-inheritance tax amendment.

Florida boasts of its vast estates owned by aged men who will soon pass away. There are many estates on which that state will lose more than a million dollars each under this foolish amendment. It is an effort to make the state a haven for tax dodgers and this was naturally foiled by congress with the insertion of the 25 per cent clause above referred to. The few multimillionaires in the north who might have been induced to move to Florida to avoid the inheritance taxes will find that no state has such taxes high enough to consume the 25 per cent to which they are entitled. The loss (and the joke) seems to be on Florida.

FELIX A. KREMER,
Municipal Judge.

SAVE THOSE TEACHERS.

Chicago, Nov. 27.—Reading your splendid editorial in this morning's paper on "Keeping the Elder Teachers," I feel urged to express my hearty commendation of this article.

Although not a member of the school force myself, I am fortunate in enjoying the friendship of many of the older teachers and have had the opportunity of becoming acquainted with their excellent work and of observing their far-reaching influence for good on the minds of their young pupils.

With deep felt appreciation of your editorial, ANNA WULLWEBER.

HOW THE RAILROADS DO SAVE FORESTS.

Galesburg, Ill., Nov. 25.—B. M. calls attention to: "The average life of a cross tie is ten years. The average tie life can be increased to fifteen years by preservative treatment. The railroad people know this. They make no pretense of questioning. Why, then, is this not done?"

From that we get the impression that the railroads are not using treated ties, that they are getting an average life out of their ties of only ten years, that they could increase this to fifteen years by preservative treatment.

First: Very few railroads use untreated ties.

Second: An untreated tie will not give an average life of anywhere near ten years. In fact we do very well to get more than five years life out of untreated ties, with the exception of white oak, black walnut and heart pine, which constitutes less than 5 per cent of all ties used.

Third: The average of only fifteen years is indeed a very conservative estimate of the life the railroads are getting from treated ties. Many roads get an average life of from eighteen to twenty years.

I wonder why B. M. before writing did not acquaint himself with the facts that there are in the United States 115 treating plants operated by the railroads, or commercial companies treating practically exclusively for railroads; that there is an annual output from these plants of from 60,000,000 to 75,000,000 treated track ties and 75,000,000 cubic feet of miscellaneous lumber, such as switch ties, piling, poles, bridge lumber, and car lumber.

Such articles as written by B. M. and published throughout the country to say the least, are very misleading and are the direct cause of so much misunderstanding between the public and the railroads. F. S. SHINN.

WHEN GROVER CLEVELAND REFUSED TO VOTE.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—With reference to Charles G. Blake and his compulsory voting, there is nothing original about the idea, although if he were a little better informed he would know that jury service is not always compulsory to all, and some are excused by the judge for less reason than many who refuse to exercise the franchise.

Grover Cleveland refused to vote on one or two occasions, and Wendell Phillips on account of the fugitive slave law also refused to exercise the franchise, and did more than most of his countrymen to bring about the abolition of slavery; and many others equally noted have done more by dissent to bring about reform than those holding different beliefs.

The Supreme court of the United States has decided that this is a Christian nation, and Christianity stands for civil and religious liberty.

So long as corrupt men are permitted to run for office in a Christian country we have one great question that remains unsolved, but it cannot be solved by petty tyrants. JOHN C. MCCA[illegible]

VOLSTEAD AND THE DIVINE LAW.

In regard to the controversy can one be a true American and be a prohibitionist, would say that surely no one could favor the Volstead interpretation and be a right American. No right interpreter of law under free institutions would delegate his authority to regulate his private conduct away from him. No real citizen of any country would consciously vote away his liberty, but the citizenry did not vote on the Volstead act; that act was a frenzied congressional interpretation under the suasion of the Anti-Saloon league lobby.

No resident of America is a trustworthy citizen who will interpret political law over the divine law. No majority anywhere can vote on my personal conduct as an individual. When we get to doing that we have destroyed the political law and only enhanced the divine law. The citizen is an individual, and he becomes a majority when he appeals against a majority that has taken away his constitutional prerogative of governing himself. C. LEROY WINTERS.

WILSON-PECK.

Antigo, Wis., Nov. 30.—The vituperative tirade of the Daily Oklahoman against the biography of Woodrow Wilson by William Allen White is not justifiable. This biography simply and candidly relates the life of Wilson including his friendship with Mary Peck.

Is this friendship so wrong that it must be completely ignored?

I see nothing injurious to his character in such a friendship and I do not think William Allen White or "Liberty" are guilty of malicious intent.

TAXIS KILL TWO; RAISE AUTO TOLL OF YEAR TO 649

Chicago Woman Victim in Florida Crash.

Taxicabs killed two Chicagoans last night, bringing the year's total of automobile deaths to 649. One of yesterday's victims was a woman 70 years old and the other a man aged 82. Another Chicago woman was killed by an automobile in West Palm Beach, Fla.

A Yellow cab struck Mrs. Anna Nangelberg, 70 years old, of 530 West 42d street, as she was crossing 43d street at Wallace street.

Driver Aids Victim.

The driver, Ferdinand Trost of 2344 Warren avenue, took her in his car to the German Deaconess hospital, but she was dead before the hospital was reached. Trost is being held pending the inquest tomorrow.

A Premier cab driven by Patrick O'Neill of 601 West 47th street, struck Lee Hutchinson, 82, of 2605 South Wabash avenue at Wabash avenue and 26th street. The victim was taken in the cab to Wesley Memorial hospital, where he died within half an hour.

Woman Killed in Florida.

Mrs. Carrie W. Webb of Chicago was killed by a machine at West Palm Beach. Letters found in her handbag identified the victim as the mother of Mrs. Gladys L. Ladew of 62 North Lotus avenue, Chicago. The driver of the car was arrested.

DETECTIVES RAID; SEEK SUSPECTS FOR BIG SHOWUP

With sixteen holdups reported between 5 o'clock last night and midnight, more than 100 suspects had been thrust into cells in various police stations by squads of the detective bureau at an early hour this morning for a "show up" at the bureau today.

All victims of holdsups will be taken to the detective bureau today, where those under arrest will be paraded before them for identification.

Chief of Detectives Schoemaker, with Capt. John Stege and Lieut. Thomas Burke and a squad last night raided the saloon of David Podesta, 1972 Ogden avenue, in front of which Walter Langille, a teaming contractor, was killed a week ago. They seized a quantity of moonshine, and arrested Podesta and two others.

Caddy Master Loses His Genial Friends—to Police

Fred Nicholson, caddy master for the Cherry Hill Golf club, a suburb of Denver, Colo., stopped off in Chicago yesterday between trains to Kingston, Ont., where his mother is dying. "Pennsy" Traffic Manager Drops Dead at His Desk

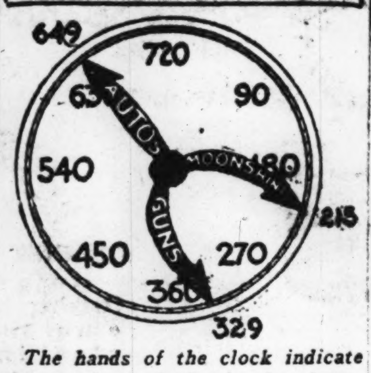
Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 6.—Robert C. Wright, general traffic manager of the Pennsylvania railroad, dropped dead in his office here today. Mr. Wright was 55, and had been with the railroad for thirty-six years.

HANDS OF DEATH



The hands of the clock indicate the number of deaths by autos, guns, and moonshine in Cook county since Jan. 1.

COOLIDGE BACK ON THE JOB; HAD GOOD TIME HERE

Washingotn, D. C., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—President Coolidge was at his desk shortly before 9 oclock this morning, ready for the day's work. The change evidently agreed with him, for when he reached the office he appeared eager to wade through the correspondence and state papers which accumulated during his absence and meet the long line of visitors scheduled for this morning.

According to friends who called on him this morning, the President greatly enjoyed both his stay in Chicago and method of travel employed. From the way President Coolidge spoke this morning it would not surprise his friends if he would continue using ordinary railroad accommodations rather than special trains and private cars on future trips.

Whether any of the conferences held by the President in Chicago will have anything to do with the selection of new cabinet members was not made known. It was known, however, that he conferred with influential Republicans in Chicago.

All doubt as to whether Secretary of the Interior Work will remain after March 4, if the President wants him, was removed today when Senator Phipps [Rep., Colo.] called on President Coolidge.

After the conference the senator said Secretary Work would continue in the post if the President desires his services after his present term expires.

W. C. BROWN, NOTED RAILROAD OFFICIAL, IS DEAD

William C. Brown, Chicagoan and former president of the New York Central railroad, died yesterday at his residence in Pasadena, Cal., at 71. He had been ill several months.

Mr. Brown when 16 was a wood chopper on the old Western Union railroad in Iowa in 1869. He learned telegraphy and when 23 was train dispatcher on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy. He also was employed by the Illinois Central and the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific.

From the general managership of the C., B. and Q. he became vice president and general manager of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern and the Lake Erie and Western.

In February, 1902, he was elected president of the New York Central and Hudson River railroad. Three years later he was made vice president of all the New York Central lines. In 1909 he was made president. Because of his health he resigned after forty-four years of railroading.

Mr. Brown is survived by three daughters, one of whom lives here, the other two in Pasadena. He will be buried in Lime Springs, Ia., where he was born.

FIANCEE BREAKS DOWN AT GRAVE OF M'CLINTOCK

Miss Isabelle Pope of Wilmette, who was to have become Mrs. William N. McClintock next Wednesday, collapsed yesterday as the coffin containing the body of "Billy" McClintock, the "millionaire orphan," was lowered into its grave in Oakwoods cemetery.

The group about the grave was the same that would have participated in the wedding.

Miss Pope, in deep mourning instead of white, leaned on the arm of her father, H. A. Pope, who was to have given her away as a bride in four days. In front of her stood the Rev. Paul A. Naumann, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church, Evanston. From the prayer book in his hand he was reading, not the marriage service, but the burial.

And standing near the coffin were the six young men whom Billy McClintock had asked to serve as ushers at his wedding.

The services, both at the Kenilworth home of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Shepherd, the boy's foster parents, and at the grave were simple and private. At the home the Rev. Mr. Naumann spoke briefly of the "Christian earnestness" shown by the wealthy orphan in his desire to administer well the $6,000,000 or $7,000,000 estate which became his when he came of age last April.

At the cemetery Miss Pope sobbed and nearly fainted as the coffin was lowered into its place.

The services are to be attended by committees from the Chicago Bar association and from the Iroquois club, of which he formerly was president. The club's committee includes Judges Henry Horner and John M. O'Connor, former Gov. Edward F. Dunne, former Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, Francis X. Busch, William H Sexton, Roswell B. Mason, William Rothmann, Charles J. Vopicka, Stephen A. Cross, William Tracy Alden, Carl Latham, Orva Williams, and Henry G. Miller.

The burial at Rosehill will be private.

Irish Move to Take King's Name from University

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

DUBLIN, Dec. 6.—Eamon de Valera, the Republican leader, who three years ago became chancellor of the National university, attended a meeting of the university senate today for the first time in his official capacity. It appears that the meeting was preliminary to the campaign to remove the king's name from the institution. A royal charter was granted when the university was established in 1909.

BANDIT UNDERTAKERS ARE KNOWN TO WELFARE LEAGUE WORKERS

Many an unprincipled funeral director only fools himself when he gloats over his success in extorting an excess profit of from $100.00 to $500.00 from some unfortunate and needy family. To keep his dishonesty a secret is not so easy. The executives and workers of Chicago's many welfare leagues and societies very often learn of such cheating. It then becomes their duty to save other poor people from his clutches by learning his name and warning them.

But no such protection is provided for the family that is financially independent.

The people who look after Chicago's unfortunate families know better than the average person why so much extortion is practiced by undertakers all over the city.

They can tell you that Chicago has today eleven times more funeral directors than she needs—that the 36,000 funerals held in this city each year must earn and do earn enough profit to support in comfort and even in luxury nearly 700 undertakers.

Grafting undertakers will keep on thriving and this enormous waste of money on the part of Chicago's people will go on just as long as the public continues to engage funeral directors without making an effort to learn whether they are reputable and trustworthy. The curbstone undertaker to whom is entrusted only one funeral each month simply could not survive if he did not add to the cost of the casket he sells a profit of from 200 to 300 per cent.

Skeeles-Biddle stand high in the favor not only of the leading welfare organizations but thousands of citizens who know from having investigated for themselves that our prices are the lowest in Chicago.

The plainly written tags on every casket in our big stock make it easy for you to prove our claim that our prices are from one-third to one-half less than others ask.

As for Skeeles-Biddle Service—You are safe in judging it by the character of our clients. Ask us for the names of people you know whom we have served.

ISSUE OF WORLD COURT TO WAIT, BORAH DECREES

Unlikely That This Congress Will Take It Up.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—What is construed as the knell for the world court issue, as far as the present session of congress is concerned was sounded today by Senator Borah [Rep., Idaho], new chairman of the foreign relations committee. He indicated that he would not favor giving the proposition precedence over domestic legislation.

WILLIAM E. BORAH.
[Copyright: Champaign Photo.]

President Coolidge's reference to the world court in his annual message gave the Democrats new hope that the question would be considered during the short session. In fact, Senator Swanson [Dem., Va.], ranking Democratic member of the foreign relations committee, has announced his intention of attempting to get some action in the matter at this session provided there were signs of sufficient Republican strength to make the attempt worth while.

Coolidge Favors Entry.

The President favors entrance into the world court as it stands with the Hughes reservations and the added reservation included in the message that the United States should not be bound by the advisory opinions of the court not voluntarily submitted to it. Senator Borah is steadfastly opposed to recognition of the court until it is entirely divorced from the league of nations.

Neither does the senator favor taking the matter up in congress until there is a better chance than now exists for its being disposed of before adjournment.

Farm Relief First.

"I am quite willing, as chairman, to help—indeed, I am anxious," he said, "to bring before the senate the world court just as soon as the appropriation bills, which have the right of way, and the agricultural legislation have been disposed of. I am not willing personally to put the world court discussion, which will be prolonged, ahead of agricultural legislation."

LEAGUE OF NATIONS COUNCIL OPENS ROME SESSION MONDAY

ROME, Dec. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—Mello Franco, Brazilian ambassador to the league of nations, who will preside at the session of the league council which opens here Monday, arrived from Genoa today with a large staff from the league's secretariat, including Sir Eric Drummond, the secretary-general.

Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, also arrived. He was greeted at the station with much ceremony by Italian officials.

He will visit Premier Mussolini. Afterwards King Victor Emmanuel will give a luncheon in honor of Mr. Chamberlain.

Convicted of Black Hand Plot; Fined and Jailed

Found guilty of a "Black Hand" plot, Sebastino Castellano, 36 years old, 1118 Cambridge street, a laborer, yesterday was sentenced to six months in the Bridewell and was fined $500 by Judge Finnegan. Castellano wrote three "Black Hand" letters to a friend, Salvatore Farraro, 1222 Vine street, who owed him $25, demanding $1,000 and threatening trouble.

federal government for money borrowed from Indian funds. Some phases of the matter antedated the civil war. I worked out a plan and passed it through the house in less than twenty minutes. After that Holman would send every case of Indian finance to me.

"I never forgot that lesson. Carry conviction not by just talking but by knowing. A short debate and to the point—that's what moves business. In arranging a debate I'd rather have a five or ten minute speech any time than an hour's. On the veterans' bill I was on my feet two hours and a half, but the speech I prepared was only seven minutes long; the rest of the time I was answering questions."

In this connection: There is a stock story up at the capitol that once a person, wishing to flatter Curtis, said, "Senator I so much enjoyed reading your recent speech on"—so and so.

"No you didn't," shouted Curtis, so the story runs, "no you didn't. I haven't made a speech in ten years."

Dry Law Started Him.

Vigorous enforcement of the prohibition law sent Curtis to congress.

Forty years ago the Kansas prohibition law was not functioning in Topeka, Curtis' home town and birthplace. Emphatically the law was not functioning. It had been on the statute books four years, and its sole product was abundant hypocrisy and eighty-eight thriving saloons in Topeka. Curtis had just been elected county attorney. He was no teetotaller, but he was a pitiless legalist—said the law meant what it said.

Picking out the rich law breakers first, he put seventeen of them in jail within a few days, and had seventeen more waiting to be sentenced. In thirty days the last saloon closed. The news excited and delighted Kansas. In their pulpits preachers thanked God for the young man.

Curtis was then (1884) 24 years old and had been admitted to the bar only three years before. He maintained his grand record throughout the four years of his tenure of the attorneyship of Shawnee county, prosecuting 108 criminal indictments and losing only four cases in his first year and one in his second; none in his third and fourth.

Sent to Congress in 1893.

The talk of him for congress became urgent. In 1893 it culminated in his election to the Fifty-third congress. With the exception of two years he has been on Capitol hill ever since.

Having rescued the old Fourth Kansas district [it is now part of the First] from the Populists, he determined to keep it rescued. He came here and he bought two open faced baskets. In one he put all the letters that could be conclusively answered on the day of arrival; in the other all that required the looking up of facts to insure an adequate answer.

But ALL letters were at least acknowledged on the day of arrival. The senator still calls that "my two basket proposition." It entailed an enormous amount of work and running about, but it also caused the gratified electors of the old fourth district to stick to him—with acres of postage stamps.

Also he devised five form letters for the answering of more or less routine questions. And he brought his sister [now the wife of Edward E. Gann, a Washington lawyer] with him from Topeka. She was a treasure to him. In the evening they would go to a theater, then home and get into their working clothes and tackle the day's letters. At one time those letters mounted to 1,400 a day. There were only two Republican congressmen from Kansas then and as soon as Republicans living in other Kansas districts—and even in Oklahoma—found out that "Charley" Curtis answered letters they turned to him for help and advice on a multitude of their troubles.

Amid the senator's matter of fact recital of all this I found beautiful the way he spoke of his sister—it was so simple and earnest. "My sister," he said—and looked musingly back over the years—"I don't know how I could have got along without her!" She stood by until 1912 when she married. Seventeen faithful years.

How to Get Ahead.

Then he told me how a man can get on in congress. Very simple. Work!

"If a man here," he said, "works he gets up, irrespective of the region he comes from. Let him tend to his duty and stay on his job."

He has little use for the legislator who lectures. "Very nice," he said, "to trot up to New York and get $200 for an address before some society. A man can run that up to $500 or $600 a month. A very nice thing to pick up! But it isn't staying on the job. I always turn down those invitations."

Curtis' memory for names and faces—the right name with the right face—is one of the traditions of congress.

Once a man from Elk county, Kas., breezed up to the senator and said: "Charley, you don't remember me, but I'm"——

"Yes, I do. You're George Harlan of Elk county, but you used to live in Chase county."

Curtis was right—and he had not seen George Harlan in eighteen years.

Like almost everything else in Curtis' success, this faculty is the result of a system devised and worked at. He pays attention. He links a man's name and face with an incident and then mulls over the incident intently. In his first campaign for congress he visited every school district in eight counties and studied faces and names for seventeen weeks. So closely that when he went back to those places he could call by name every man he had met.

He used to hunt and fish, but told me he had not "for twenty odd years."

Then how do you keep fit?"

"Walk. I walk thirty to forty blocks—long blocks—every day. Mostly at night. A good, leisurely walk, taking it easy and not overdoing, but getting home covered with perspiration. All this just before bedtime."

He gave me this interesting sidelight on the late Henry Cabot Lodge, whom he now succeeds in the majority leadership, with whom he was in close relations for six years. "I ended," he said, "with an entirely different idea about Lodge than I began with. I found he wasn't cold blooded or selfish. He had a great big heart and was susceptible to argument. But you had to make the first approach.

Lodge Was Receptive.

"He was entirely different when he knew you. Then he would discuss and compare notes. He was always anxious to do what he thought was the right thing to do, but he avoided conferences. It would have been better for him if he had employed them more."

In closing: The words here filed about Charley Curtis took me two days to extract from Charley Curtis. The first day—the day he emerged as majority leader — when I asked for a retrospect he crusted me off, saying, "O, hell, Bennett, that's been written so many times!"

But not what he gave me the second day, I'll swear, for I dug into the clippings about him away back to 1907, when he came into the senate at the age of 47. In them are not the facts he gave THE TRIBUNE.

THERE is no finer gift for your home than the H. C. Bay Reproducing Grand. It is the gift supreme—for it is something the whole family will enjoy. It brings to you the music of the great masters—played just as they play it before vast audiences of musicians. It develops a keener appreciation of the best music. In itself it is a thing of beauty—an addition to your home of which you will always be proud.

H. C. Bay

gives you everything you desire at a price you can afford—Tone—Quality—Finish—Beauty. It is electrically operated—the simplest and finest in mechanism—faultless in reproduction. It plays the Q. R. S. Recordo Rolls and all other standard 88-note rolls. At your will you may have the compositions of the great artists or the modern popular or dance music. Played by hand it is equally enjoyable. The H. C. Bay comes in beautiful satin finish, dark brown mahogany case. It is unsurpassed in exquisite cabinet work. When you consider the high prices in the exclusive fine piano class you may wonder why the H. C. Bay is alone at such a reasonable price. The answer is standardized volume production in one of the largest piano plants in the world and the fact that the electric motor and reproducing mechanism are also manufactured in our plant. It is sold throughout the country by reliable dealers at a uniform price.

DECIDE YANKEE CONSUL KILLED GIRL IN BATTLE

Belgrade Police React Love Tragedy.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Dec. 6.—While Henry Dayton lies at the point of death in a Belgrade hospital, detectives today reconstructed the dramatic crime which was enacted Thursday morning in the apartment shared by him and Anna Uzupajte, beautiful Lithuanian girl, who had followed him from Kovno to Belgrade.

On Wednesday Dayton rented a room in the Hotel Bristol with the intention of leaving the woman, the police were informed. On the following morning she asked him if he was still determined to quit her. On receiving an affirmative reply, she complained of the cold and asked Dayton to light a fire.

As he stooped over to set a match to the kindling, the woman poured a vial of vitriol over his back. His heavy pajamas protected him, but before he could rise she fired two shots into his head.

Believe Dayton Killed Girl.

Here the police theory diverges from the story Dayton told. He declared he rushed from the room. The police believe he grappled with the girl, who evidently also was armed with a razor. During the fighting Dayton evidently succeeded in getting the razor from her grasp, but in so doing received a severe gash himself and cut the girl across the wrist, severing an artery.

The police think that Dayton then got hold of the revolver and fired at her, killing her instantly. He then evidently washed the blood from his hands and proceeded to the consulate, there to gasp out his story and fall unconscious.

No Powder Burns on Girl.

The police reject absolutely the theory that the girl killed herself, declaring there were no powder burns on the wounds in the temple.

The police believe Dayton later placed the revolver in the hands of the dead girl.

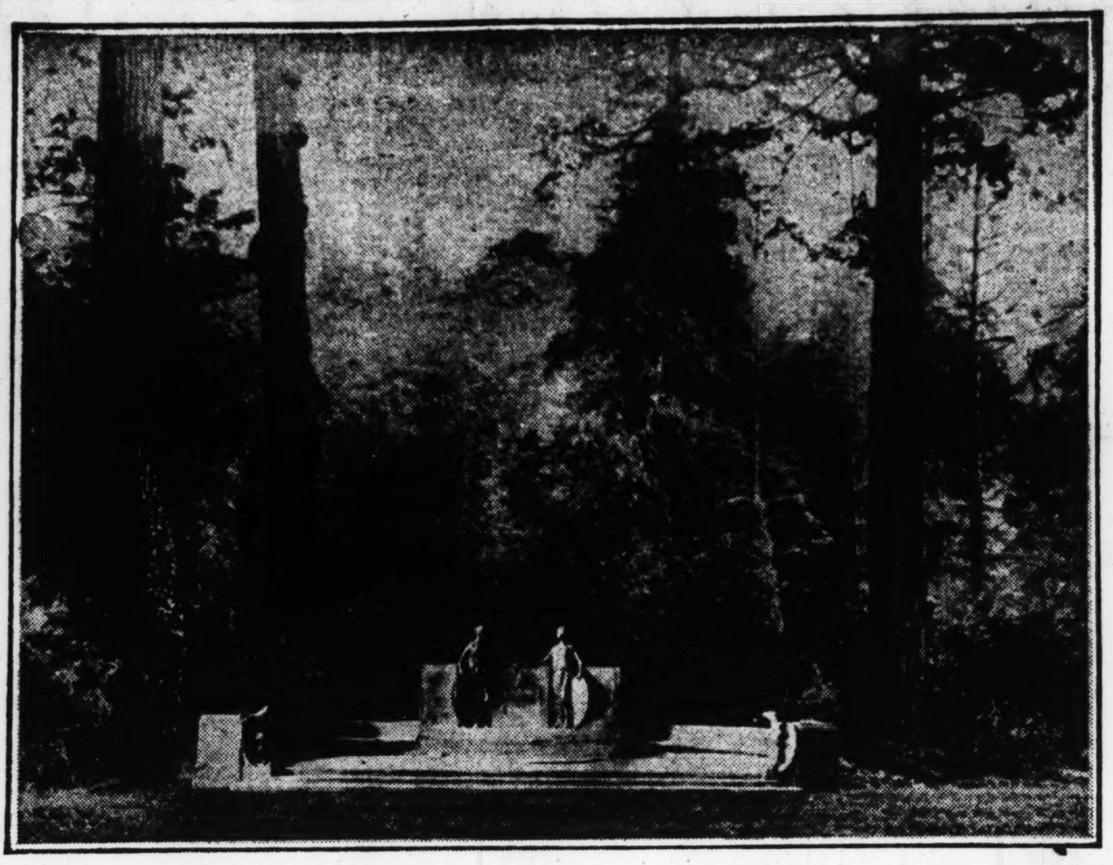
There is no doubt, the police declare, that the girl was the first to fire and that she inflicted the wounds on Dayton with intent to kill after the vitriol failed.

FARMERS HERE FOR CONVENTION; OPENS TOMORROW

Nearly 700 officials, delegates, and visitors are here to attend the sixth annual convention of the American Farm Bureau federation which opens tomorrow morning in the Florentine room of the Congress hotel. W. S. Hill, member of the United States shipping board, and C. M. Hunt of the federal trade commission are the principal speakers. These men were recommended by the farm bureau and appointed by President Coolidge to represent the farmers on the shipping board and trade commission.

Monday night the farm bureau federation will hold an open forum where any one interested in agriculture will be welcome. George N. Peek, president of the American Agricultural council, the organization which is trying to revive the McNary-Haugen "equality for agriculture" bill, will be the main speaker.

REMINDER OF PRESIDENT HARDING



Design by Charles Marega, selected by the Kiwanis clubs as a memorial to President Harding, as it will appear in a Vancouver, B. C., park where he spoke on his way to Alaska. It will bear an inscription from his speech on the unfortified frontier between the United States and Canada.

FINDS $30 IN PAGES OF BOOK BOUGHT FOR 30C

Winchester, Va., Dec. 6.—Spirited bidding today followed the discovery yesterday of $10 and $20 bank notes in books that sold for 25 and 30 cents at the public auction of the contents of the home of the late Misses Shumate, where thousands of dollars have been found in nooks and corners of the premises.

When the last of the three spinster sisters died several weeks ago, executors of her estate found over $10,000 in gold and notes in various recesses, and after what they thought was a thorough search were satisfied they had uncovered all assets.

Within a week, however, more gold and paper, aggregating over $5,000, were discovered, and since then other hidden treasures have been found.

Taylor Wall paid 30 cents for the first book sold at auction yesterday, and on opening it found a $10 note between the pages. Turning over a few more leaves, Mr. Wall found a $20 bill, and from then on there was a general clamor for all books and everything else that could contain valuables. Purchasers of other books also reported finding currency.

Woman Smiles at Bandit, He Rewards Her with $5

"Lady, I certainly thank you for that smile," the bandit remarked as he flipped a $5 reward to Mrs. John Crowh, and ran out of her cigar store at 118 West Elm street with the other $37 he had taken from her cash register. Mrs. Crown told the police she was smiling at the joke on her husband, who had left the shop only a moment before the bandit held her up.

FALL KILLS RADIO WORKER.

Richard Hughes, 64 years old, of 64 East 48th street, was killed yesterday afternoon when he fell twenty feet from a ladder on which he was helping to install a radio aerial.

PICK MEMORIAL FOR HARDING AT VANCOUVER, B. C.

Kiwanis Clubs Select Marega's Design.

Active work on a $35,000 memorial to Warren G. Harding will be started within a short time by the Kiwanis club in Stanley park, Vancouver, B. C., scene of the late President's last address.

The design of Charles Marega of Vancouver was officially approved here yesterday by the International Kiwanis council and the clerical work of collecting 50 cent donations from each of the nearly 90,000 Kiwanians will be started at once. The difference between the cost of the memorial and the money collected will go to defray expenses of dedication.

Huge Trees As Background.

The memorial will be in the form of a combination seat and monument thirty-seven feet long placed in front of towering trees. This was decided on instead of a monument because any monument would be dwarfed by the trees of Canada's Stanley park.

The seat will be within a few feet of the pavilion from which Mr. Harding delivered his last address during his Alaskan trip and will be fronted by a shallow pool of water which will reflect the memorial.

Plaque to Show Harding.

In the center of the memorial, which will be erected from light gray Canadian granite from Granite island, about sixty-five miles from the park, will be a bronze plaque bearing a profile bas relief of Mr. Harding.

On either side will be female figures representing Canada and the United States.

LEGION NOTES

Following the annual banquet of Advertising post Friday the following officers were elected: D. M. Shillinglaw, commander; Samuel P. S. Newton, senior vice commander; Eugene Morgan, junior vice commander; Robert McKnight, adjutant. Brig. Gen. Henry A Reilly spoke.

NELSON TURNS IN 2 YEARS' INTEREST OF $1,543,829

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—A balance of $20,960,555 on Dec. 1 is shown by the report of State Treasurer Oscar Nelson, issued today. Interest earned and credited to the revenue fund since the last report amounts to $65,917, bringing Nelson's total of interest earned since January, 1923, to $1,543,829.

The cash account shows cash and monies in state depositories: Inactive, $15,267,000; active reserve or outstanding, $5,644,319; cash in vault, $31,808; coupons, $4,569; federal funds, $12,858. The outstanding bonded indebtedness of the state Dec. 1 amounted to $112,071,100.

Coolidge Signs Deficiency Bill; Calls for $126,000,000

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—President Coolidge today signed the deficiency bill providing $126,000,000 for administration and initial payments under the soldier bonus act and carrying out the recommendations of the reclamation fact finding commission.

12 INDICTED IN JERSEY FOR RUM LAW VIOLATIONS

New York, Dec. 6.—[Special.]—Indictment of Police Commissioner Harry J. Stearns of Weehawken, William Griffin, a Jersey City broker, and ten Weehawken policemen, including two superior officers, today by the Hudson county grand jury climaxed many developments in Weehawken's bootleg scandal.

Having its origin in an affidavit by a man who admitted he formerly engaged in bootlegging activities, the investigation has spread until now it threatens to reach throughout Hudson county.

"We are after higher-ups now," was the only comment of John Milton, the county prosecutor, who brought the matter before the grand jurors.

Evidence gathered by Father Bennett, the "crusading rector" of St. Lawrence's church, situated in the heart of the affected area, is expected to play an important part in the official investigation.

Only One Week Holiday at Christmas for Congress

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—Members of the house decided today that a one week layoff over Christmas was sufficient, and without a dissenting vote adopted a resolution offered by Representative Longworth providing for a recess from Saturday, Dec. 20, to Monday, Dec. 29. Senate concurrence is needed. House leaders planned to limit the New Year's recess to one day—Jan. 1.

Washington Gardner Hurt in an Automobile Accident

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—Washington Gardner, United States commissioner of pensions, is in a hospital here with three broken ribs as a result of an automobile accident Thursday. His condition is not serious.

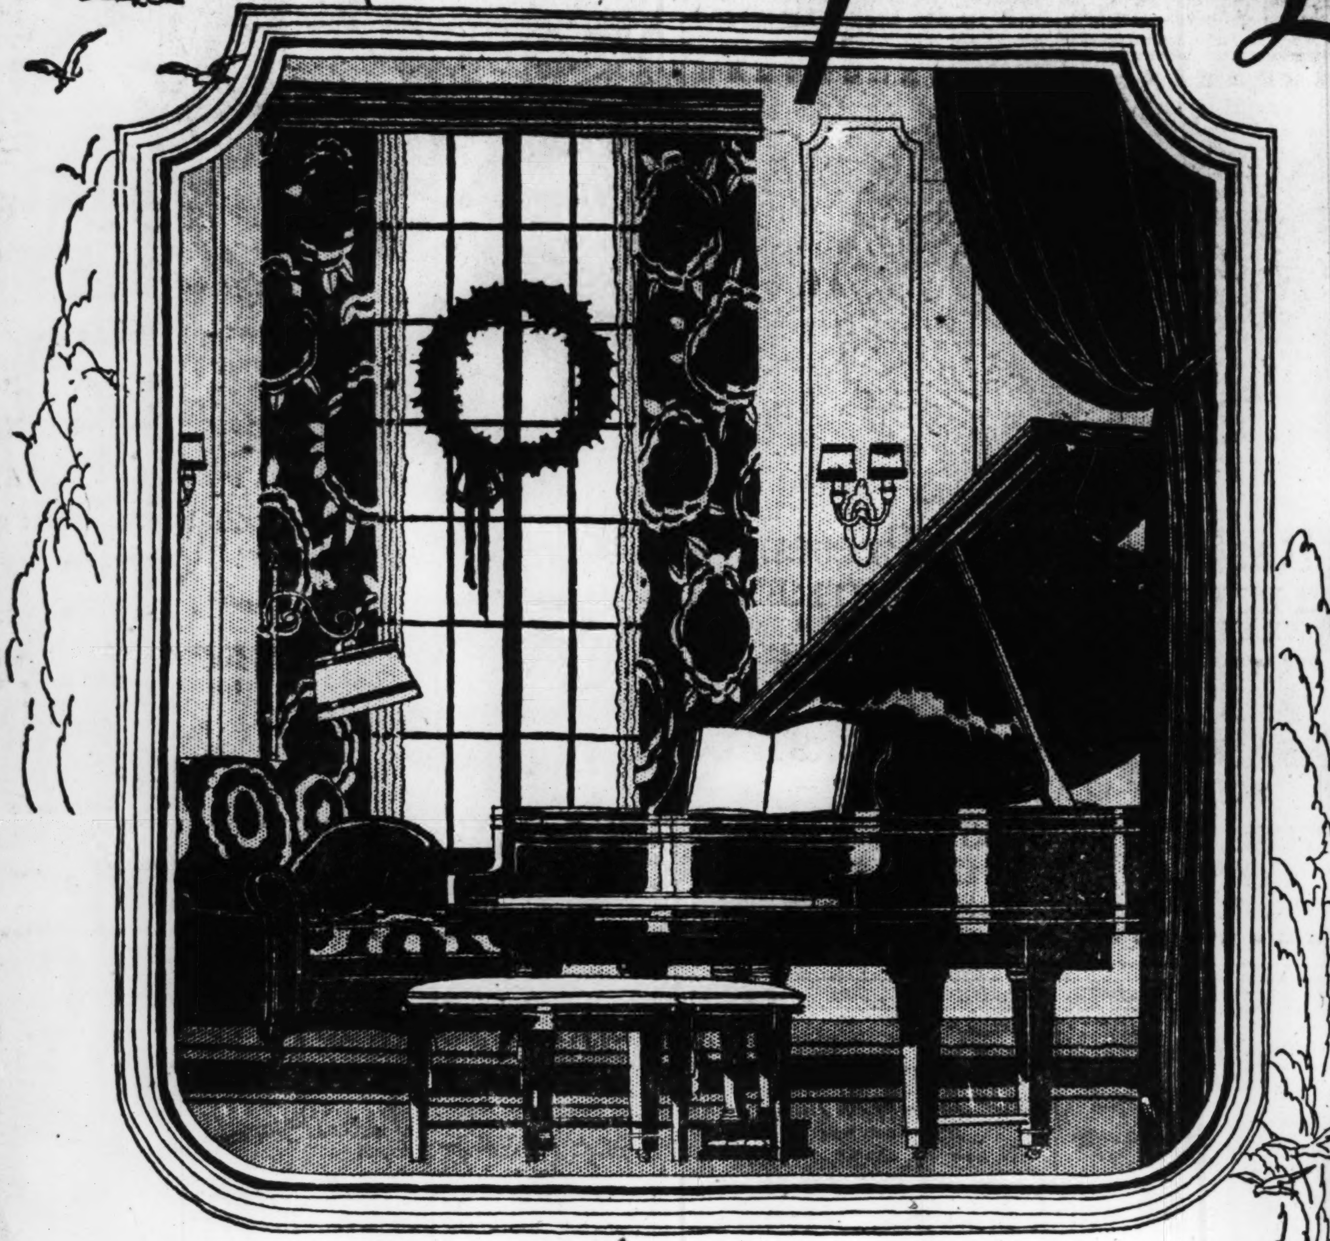
An exhibit of rare appeal at Lyon & Healy's



Bauer

Grainger

Cortot

Paderewski

Hofmann

Ganz

CHRISTMAS shopping among the displays here takes on new appeal. Merchandise of permanent character, gifts in which the entire family can take pleasure suggest a more judicious giving. Instead of buying a number of minor gifts, unite your Christmas funds and make one exceptional purchase. A piano, phonograph, or radio outfit will recall delightfully the thrills of this Christmas. Let us help you in your choice.

Why It Is Easy and Desirable to Buy Here and Now

NOTHING DOWN! On your choice you need pay nothing down. Pay only a nominal sum to cover our cartage costs and the piano will be delivered at once. Freight charges are prepaid within a radius of 100 miles of Chicago.

28 MONTHS TO PAY! On piano selected during this month you may obtain special term arrangements of 28 months in which to pay. (Steinway Pianos are sold on terms of 18 months). Generous allowance on old pianos taken in part exchange.

EXCHANGE PRIVILEGE! Also, any used piano selected will be accepted by us within six months at full price paid toward the purchase of any other piano in our entire stock. Equally attractive arrangements on new pianos.

RENT-TRIAL PLAN! If you do not care to buy a piano right away, we will rent you one at low rates. Perhaps you may decide to buy such a rented piano. If so, we credit 6 months' rental towards the purchase price.

CREDIT CHECK! If you plan to move, let us help. We will take your present piano off your hands, giving a desirable credit check for it. Later you can come in and apply the credit check towards the purchase of any piano in our stock.

ABSOLUTE GUARANTEE! Every piano we sell is guaranteed against any defects in materials and manufacture. We will gladly replace any instrument with which a customer is justly dissatisfied.

Prices Reduced on New Lyon & Healy Pianos

RIVAL WAR LORDS OF CHINA QUIT TO LET NATION LIVE

Wu and Chang Pledge End of Militarism.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune]

PEKING, Dec. 6.—Gen. Wu Pei-fu, Chihli war lord, who was removed as a power in China following his betrayal by his chief lieutenant, the Christian general, Feng Yu-hsiang, and who has been resting at a missionary colony at Kikungshan, on the Honan Hupeh frontier, today officially announced his retirement from military strife. He expressed a willingness to assist in the reunification of the nation.

The civil and military governors of Honan also have resigned and have asked Tuan Chi-jui, head of the provisional government at Peking, to designate successors.

Chang Also Ready to Quit.

Simultaneously Chang Tso-lin, the Mukden war lord, has offered to resign. In a long telegram, Chang declared his desire to see an end to the militarism in China and putting himself wholly at Tuan's disposition.

Feng Yu-hsiang's third resignation has now been accepted since Tuan is able to control all of north China, thus ending the tense situation which has been occasioning alarm in the capital. Plans are being formed to dispose of Feng's troops by sending them to widely separated provinces.

Five tuchuns of the lower Yangtze provinces have been forced to retire because Tuan has established his own machine and selected his own leaders in each province.

Dr. Sun Only Doubtful Factor.

Chang Tso-lin is expected to retain control of Manchuria, with a possibility that his son will control the Shanghai area, while Lu Yung-hsiang, late Shanghai-CheKiang tuchun, will become the military commander of Chihli province. Thus Tuan Chi-jui, Chang Tso-lin, and Lu Yung-hsiang clinch their control of China.

Sun Yat-sen, the south China leader, alone remains a doubtful factor. He has deferred his arrival in Peking until Monday or Tuesday, when a great red demonstration is planned. Owing to Tuan's successful coup, Sun's bolshevik hopes seem dashed.

ROCKEFELLER BACKS COMPANY TO BUILD GARDEN TENEMENTS

New York, N. Y., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—New York is to have another demonstration that it is possible to build good, low priced homes on high priced land.

John D. Rockefeller Jr., it is announced today, is behind a movement headed by the Empire Mortgage company to bring the first "garden tenements" to Manhattan—a block of ideal wage earners' homes to be erected on Avenue A, between East 60th and East 66th streets, which will face on a garden and playground for children, in which every room will get sunshine and fresh air, where every family will have one or two bathrooms, where heat and hot water will be provided, and where the rent may be as low as in some tenements in New York's slums.

The experiment has proved successful on lower priced land in Long Island City, where the Metropolitan Life Insurance company has built fifty-four buildings containing 2,125 apartments, which have been rented at $9 a month a room, with bathroom, heat, and hot water free. It also proved successful in Bayonne, N. J., where the Associated Industries built still better buildings.

ARCHFIEND TELLS HOW HE GNAWED VICTIMS'THROATS

Gives Grewsome Details at Murder Trial.

HANOVER, Germany, Dec. 6.—[By United Press.]—Bleached skulls and bones fished from the muddy waters of river Leine were exhibited in court here this afternoon at the trial of Fritz Haarmann, accused of the murder of twenty-seven youths.

There were 285 pieces in all, especially thighs and skulls, and the prosecutor claimed they belonged to the victims of the "human vampire," whose case is the most revolting in German criminal history.

One by one the skulls were held up in front of the cowering prisoner, who fidgeted nervously and denied they were those of youths he had lured to his den on the river bank and killed.

Haarmann Gets Indignant.

Haarmann maintains that he smashed the skulls of his victims and sawed their bodies to pieces after biting their throats. He is emphatic upon this point, as though it would be useful in his defense, and got indignant when the prosecutor doubted him.

Without hesitation the "vampire man," who was by day a smug, prosperous appearing citizen assuming the rôle of good samaritan and by night an ogre who gnawed his victims' throats, identified exhibits; a bloody camp bed and a blood stained bucket.

Implicates Others.

The prisoner, alternately displaying braggadocio and terror, today told how Hans Grans, whom he accuses of complicity in the murders, selected victims for him who were well dressed. Youths between the ages of 15 and 18 always were chosen, he insisted. After the murder, the victim's clothing was sold.

So numerous were Haarmann's victims that they are referred to in court by number. The prisoner told this afternoon of the death of the twenty-fourth boy. Grans, he said, had insisted that this youth must be killed because they must have the victim's good new suit. The young man was kept in the hovel five days, much to Grans' disgust because it was expensive feeding him. He was killed on the sixth day.

"While I was chopping up the corpse," Haarmann testified, "Hans stuck his head in the door and asked: 'Where's his suit?'"

Didn't Kill No. 14.

Haarmann insisted that Grans and another man named Hugo Witowski procured most of his victims for him. Grans denied this. In one instance, where a victim of the dread trio was only 10 years old, Haarmann said the child really was killed by the other two, as he "only killed victims between the ages of 15 to 18."

Regarding the fourteenth victim, Haarmann said he had told Grans and Witowski they were "crazy" when they tried to argue him into the belief he had killed the boy.

Yale Bootlegger Caught with Goods on Campus

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 6.—Charged with possession of liquor for sale, and trespass on Yale property, Howard Hovey, who, the police say, is known as the university bootlegger, was arrested last night on the campus. He had a suit case containing six quarts of whisky, it is stated.

KAMMERER SANE, ALIENIST SAYS AS SLAYER SOBS

Testimony that John Kammerer, slayer of a family of five, was and is sane, was given yesterday by Dr. R. H. Hinton, superintendent of the state hospital for the insane at Elgin. Dr. Hinton was the last witness before the closing arguments in the case. The expert's testimony was used by the state to offset the testimony given on Friday by Dr. H. S. Hulbert, alienist, that the slayer was insane. Hulbert was the only person to testify that Kammerer had confessed his crime.

While Dr. Hinton was in the witness chair, Kammerer wept so loudly Judge John K. Newhall had to call a halt in the proceedings.

WHITE PLAGUE CURE GETS O. K. OF CHICAGOAN

Dr. Clemensen Praises "Health Gold."

BY JOHN AHL-NIELSEN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DR. PETER CLEMENSON.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 6.—Dr. Peter C Clemensen of Chicago, who is in Copenhagen studying Prof. Holger Moellgaard's tuberculosis cure, sanocrysine, gave THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE a statement today on his opinions.

"Sanocrysine, or 'health gold,' as the name is translated literally, is a remarkable product," he declared. "I have been through the laboratories where it is made and found that it fulfills the claim of a famous Swedish scientist, made a few years ago, that he could produce negatively charged salt gold which would be an absolute cure for tuberculosis. German chemists have been trying for years to find the exact formula for this compound, but it remained for Prof. Holger Moellgaard to solve the delicate problem so important to humanity."

Has Seen It Work.

When asked if he had seen the cure work, Dr. Clemensen replied:

"Yes; I have seen positive evidence of cured cases at Dr. Secher's clinic at Bispeberg hospital in Copenhagen. As you know, Dr. Secher was the first physician to try sanocrysine on human beings. At present I am observing some forty cases under treatment. Sanocrysine seems to be a remarkable cure for tuberculosis, but cases of advanced pulmonary disease, where there is little lung tissue left, cannot be benefited."

When I inquired if he meant to bring sanocrysine to Chicago, he replied:

"You bet I will. Not alone Chicago, but everywhere in America. I believe Dr. Moellgaard has solved the problem. The introduction of sanocrysine into American practice will put new life into our sanitoriums, as the treatment is only effective in hospitals and other institutions where the patients are under constant observation. You may add that I have got proofs of my personal observation of the treatment by Roentgen photos, so I am sure the cures are successful."

Does Not Prevent Disease.

Dr. Clemensen is convinced that the cured patients will stay cured. He asserts the cure does not prevent new infection, but in such cases sanocrysine can be used to stop the disease as often as it returns.

Dr. Moellgaard is now in Oxford, where he is delivering lectures this week. Dr. Secher and Dr. Clemensen will meet him there and continue their study.

RADICAL LABOR IN MEXICO VENTS IRE ON GOMPERS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, Dec. 6.—Radical labor of Mexico continued its bitter attacks against Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and the local labor unions at today's session of the Pan-American labor congress in session here.

Circulars calling Mr. Gompers a direct agent of imperialistic United States and Secretary of State Hughes the high priest of American imperialism were distributed. The leaflets charge the American Federation of Labor dominates Mexican labor unions.

Would Be Czarina

Grand Duchess Victoria Feodorovna of Russia, who has arrived in New York for a visit with Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt.

GRAND DUCHESS IN U. S.; GUARDED BY BOMB SQUAD

Self-Styled Czarina Is Vanderbilt Guest.

New York, Dec. 6.—Victoria Feodorovna, grand duchess of Russia and kin to the members of virtually every ruling house in Europe, arrived in the United States today, the guest of socially prominent families.

Five minutes after the liner Paris had dropped anchor at quarantine three bomb squad detectives had clambered aboard and joined the royal party. They will remain with the grand duchess throughout her American visit, guarding against a possible attempt to carry out anonymously written threats that she had come here at her own peril.

The grand duchess explained that her visit had no significance politically and declined to discuss the recent action of her husband, the Grand Duke Cyril, in proclaiming himself heir to the throne of the Romanoffs. She insisted that her visit was in response to an invitation sent long before the grand duke had issued his proclamation at Coburg, where he now is with their three children.

Police Guard Asked.

The police guard was provided at the request of George Djamgaroff, secretary of the Monday Opera club, through which the invitation to the duchess was extended. He had received several anonymous letters, he told the police, containing threats against the visitor's life.

With M. Djamgaroff at the pier was Mrs. Henry P. Loomis, president of the Colonial Dames of America. Others in the royal party, also exiled monarchists, were the widow of Gen. Orloff, who was assassinated several years ago; the widow of Admiral Makaroff, commander of the Black sea fleet of the Russians during the world war, and Admiral Petroff of the Russian imperial navy.

A somewhat angular woman, tall and dressed simply to the point of severity, the grand duchess welcomed newspapermen who invaded her suite. But she deftly turned aside all references to anything political, Russian or otherwise, and declined to discuss whatever notions she might have regarding the return of the monarchy to Russia—an event which probably would place her on the throne as "the little mother of all the Russians."

Guest of Vanderbilts.

Present plans will take the royal party to Washington and Philadelphia. In New York she will be the guest of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Sr. and Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, while in Washington Mrs. John Hays Hammond and Mr. and Mrs Robert Lansing will be her hosts. In Philadelphia she will be the guest of Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer and Mrs. Gardner Cassett.

The grand duchess is a cousin of King George of England. Her father was the son of Queen Victoria of England who became the grand duke Alfred of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, and her mother was the only daughter of Czar Nicholas I. of Russia. Her sister is Queen Marie of Roumania.

Delavan Smith Estate Tax in Indiana $8,966

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 6.—Announcement was made today that the Indiana inheritance tax against the estate of Delavan Smith of Lake Forest, Ill., former publisher of the Indianapolis News, had been fixed at $8,966.

CROWE WOULD HAVE WOMEN ON CRIME JURIES

Women must be allowed to serve on Criminal court juries if crime is to be cut down in Chicago, State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe told the Irish Fellowship club meeting at the Morrison hotel yesterday.

"I think women would have a salutary affect in the Criminal court," the prosecutor said. "They would be more willing to impose severe sentences, especially in cases involving crime against women and children."

Mr. Crowe said that Illinois' system of delays in meting out punishment to criminals is largely responsible for the crime in Chicago.

In 1919, he added, there were 231 men out on bonds charged with major crimes. All had been indicted more than three years; one, a murderer, more than nine years. All were acquitted save one, and he got three days in the county jail.

Auto Injuries to Keep Small in Bed Ten Days

Kankakee, Ill., Dec. 6.—[United Press.]—Suffering intense pain from an injured hip, covered from head to foot with cuts and bruises, sustained in an auto crash near Pontiac, Ill., last night, Gov. Len Small will be confined to bed for ten days, Dr. W. A. Spoker, attending physician, announced today. Neither Leslie Small, the governor's son, nor Mrs. A. E. Inglesh, his daughter, who were in the coach, is severely injured.

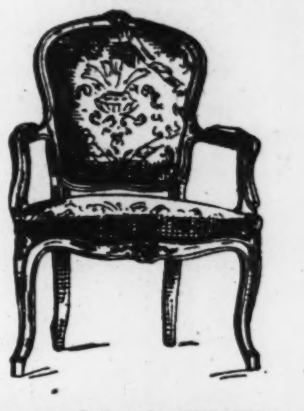
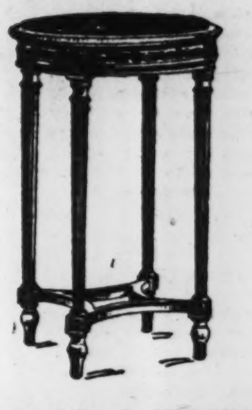
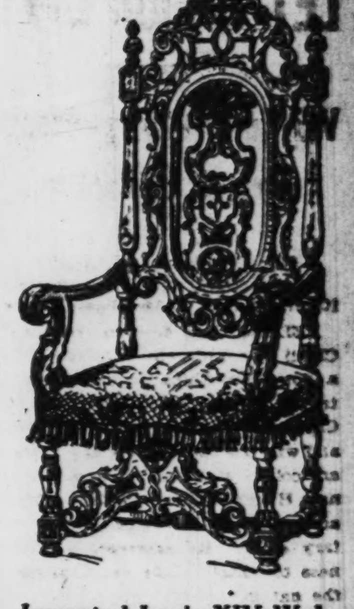
Scholle's Good Furniture for Christmas



Imported Louis XV Walnut Chair, covered in Brocaded Velvet. $126.00



Imported Louis XVI Walnut Lamp Table with Black and Gold Marble Top $95.00

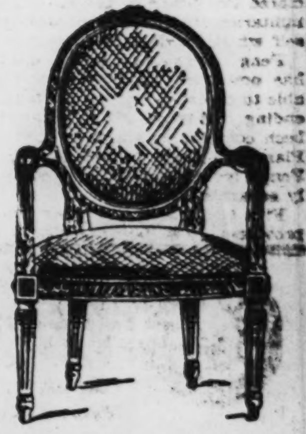


Imported Louis XIV Walnut Arm Chair, covered in Linen Frieze with Ball Fringe $250.00

IF you're looking for something unusual for Christmas gifts, you'll be interested in the news we have for you.

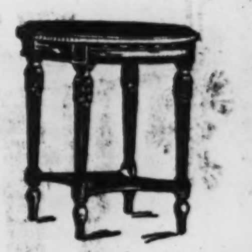
A new large shipment of French and Italian furniture has just come from the European source from which we have had this type of furniture during the past 25 years.

There's a good deal of "French and Italian" furniture in the market which may be entitled to that name; but it isn't entitled to a place in our store nor in your home. The quality of these French and Italian pieces here offered is the quality you expect of the Scholle Furniture Company. We do not permit the glamour of a foreign title in merchandise to take the place of good construction, or good finish.



Imported Louis XVI Walnut Arm Chair in Brocaded French Velvet. $155.00

The arrival of these beautiful goods is timely; because they are peculiarly fitting for holiday gifts. You see a few of them illustrated here; but there are hundreds of others to show you when you come in.



Imported Louis XVI Smoking Stand with Black and Gold Marble Top. . $53.00

And, of course, we have many very beautiful things that are good sound American wares, large and small things; all of them Scholle quality; all of them moderately priced.

We add a list of specially interesting items:

CIVIC LEADERS FIND HIGH PRAISE FOR DEVER'S RULE

Laud His Drive Against Booze Forces.

Warm praise was given Mayor Dever in the fiftieth annual report of the Citizens' association made public yesterday.

The section of the formal statement made to the organization over the signatures of Augustus S. Peabody, president, and Shelby M. Singleton, secretary and attorney, relating to the mayor's administration in general, was as follows:

MAYOR DEVER.
[Walinger Photo.]

"As a result of frequent contact with the city government we have been impressed with the noticeable improvement that has been effected in the morale and in the work of most of the city hall departments since the beginning of Mayor Dever's administration.

Faced Enormous Task.

"The illicit use of the whole machinery of the municipality for political purposes during the eight years of the preceding administration had resulted in such a rot of morale that the restoration of the city service to a state of decent effectiveness is an enormous task.

"We have been particularly impressed by the work done by Commissioner of Public Works Sprague in galvanizing and reorganizing the street department, whereby the volume of street work has been largely increased, and improved methods are being used in waste removal; by the able handling of the city's law business under the direction of Corporation Counsel Busch; by the greatly improved functioning of the school board under President Moderwell; by the progress made in reorganizing the fire department, which is now buying fire hose at less than half the price which it formerly paid; by the improvement in the administration of the civil service law, whereby the number of temporary employes has been reduced by 1,700 during the year; and by the increased efficiency of the police department.

High Praise for Dever.

"Mayor Dever's firm adherence to his policy of law enforcement in the face of the bitter opposition of the gangsters of his own party, is a fine example of high courage and of fidelity to his oath of office.

"In his fight to rid the city of gunmen and other forms of organized crime the mayor is especially entitled to have the whole hearted support of every decent citizen."

Secretary Singleton also announced that George E. Cole continues as honorary president and Mr. Peabody as president. Leslie F. Gates and Lewis C. Walker are vice presidents, and Moses E. Greenebaum is treasurer.

BRENT DISSATISFIED WITH FINDINGS OF OPIUM CONFERENCE

GENEVA, Dec. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—Bishop Brent of the American delegation did not conceal his dissatisfaction tonight with what he called the "lameness and insufficiency" of the conclusions arrived at by the first opium conference. A statement from him to that effect will probably be distributed to all the delegates at Monday's plenary session.

BISHOP BRENT.
[Und. & Und. Photo.]

Bishop Brent tried to have a plenary session called today so that he could speak his mind before his departure for the United States. It was found impossible to convene a gathering at such short notice. The bishop declared that he would endeavor to present his views on the conclusions of the first conference to the French and British governments before sailing.

Representative Stephen G. Porter, the chief American delegate, made it known tonight that he would read Bishop Brent's statement as soon as the conclusions of the first conference are embodied in an agreement and are placed before the second conference.

Miss Frances Keep's Estate Lists $1,400,000 in Stocks

Oil, steel, and public utility investments make up most of the $1,400,000 estate of Miss Frances R. Keep, late sister-in-law of Watson F. Blair, 720 Rush street, it was revealed yesterday when an inventory of the estate was filed in the Probate court.

Radium Is Restoring Health to Thousands

The wonderful curative power of Radium has been known for years. However, the benefits of this precious healthgiving substance have in the past been only within the means of persons of wealth.

Since the invention of Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad, any man or woman, poor or rich, can afford this treatment which offers so much relief from suffering and disease.

Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad is worn next to the body day and night. It pours a constant stream of radioactive energy into the system while you work, play or sleep, helping to build up weakened nerves and tissues to a strong, healthy condition. It creates a vigorous circulation of blood, thus removing congestion, which is the real cause of most diseases.

To prove just what this remarkable treatment can do for you, we will send our appliance on trial with the understanding that we will not charge you a cent if it fails to give satisfactory results. This offer is open to any person who has pain of any kind, nerve weakness, high blood pressure, stomach, kidney or liver complaint, bladder trouble, or disease of the lungs or heart.

No matter what your ailment or how long you have had it, we will gladly let you try the appliance at our risk. Write today for free literature giving complete information. Radium Appliance Co., 1490 Bradbury Bldg., Los Angeles, Calif.

MORTIMER FACES QUIZ TOMORROW ON FORBES TALE

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Government and defense attorneys prepared yesterday for a strenuous week in the Forbes-Thompson veterans' hospital bribery case in Judge George A. Carpenter's court.

Elias H. Mortimer, confessed accomplice of the men on trial, will be cross-examined tomorrow morning by Attorney James H. Easby-Smith of Washington, who has been studying the case for more than a year. Many pitfalls have been set for Mortimer, but the government attorneys expect him to prove a dangerous double-edged buzzsaw for the defense.

Forty or fifty more government witnesses are under subpoena, but the testimony of some of these may be stipulated and the others are expected to be brief. The attorneys are anxious to conclude the case before the holidays. Col. Charles R. Forbes will be the chief witness in his own defense.

In Chicago Col. Forbes finds his long awaited opportunity to put on his complete defense. It is claimed for him that he never had a fair chance before the senatorial investigating committee.

Mortimer has talked before two congressional committees and has appeared in court once. The defense will seek to show that he was a professional bootlegger on a big scale in Washington, and that he has told conflicting stories about Col. Forbes.

The attempt to break Mortimer's story will center about the list of hospital sites and plans and the date and manner of the alleged bribery of Forbes in Chicago.

An alibi is expected for Col. Forbes on the day fixed by Mortimer for the exchange of $5,000 in the Drake hotel. Col. Forbes claims he left the hotel early in the morning and did not come back until evening. Mortimer's story places him in Mortimer's suite with Mrs. Mortimer in the afternoon. Col. Forbes has claimed he spent the day at the Speedway and other Chicago hospitals and had been to see some people who had offered him $20,000 a year to take a new job.

Teacher Federation O. K.'s Hunt for More Revenue

Members of the Chicago Teachers' federation yesterday approved of the board of education's recent action in joining with the teachers' organization in its fight to bring the "tax dodger" to time and thereby increase the school revenue. The federation commended the appointment of Attorney Henry M. Ashton to represent the board of education at hearings before the board of review.

JAILED FOR HAVING BOOZE.

Eau Claire, Wis., Dec. 6.—O. W. Nichols was fined $200 and sentenced to sixty days in the county jail by Judge Henry McBain, after pleading guilty to illicit possession of liquor. It was his second offense. T. F. Piper, soft drink proprietor, was fined $100 for the same offense.

AGED MAN HURT BY HORSE KICK AT STOCK SHOW

Mrs. D. A. Orth's Mare Wins Saddle Stakes.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

The closing hour of the horse show of the International Live Stock exposition was marked by the only serious accident of the week. Joseph Cowling, 79 years old, of Oshkosh, Wis., was kicked in the face by White Oak, a horse which had just taken fourth prize in the hunter class. Mr. Cowling was knocked unconscious and it was feared he had suffered a fracture of the skull. He was taken to the German Deaconess hospital under the care of Dr. J. C. Edler, 4140 South Halsted street.

It is believed the horse became frightened by the throng of spectators which he encountered as he was being led from the ring to his stall.

Mrs. Orth Takes Honors.

Mrs. Daniel A. Orth, 5639 Sheridan road, Chicago, won the high honor in the contest for the $1,000 champion saddle stakes with her chestnut mare, Violet Hemming, forcing the hitherto undefeated Moon Magic, a Kansas City gelding, owned by Herbert M. Woolf, into second place in the closing horse events. Emily McCready, another local entry, from Mrs. Gertrude B. Hardt's stables, won third, and the Rajah, O. H. Gray's gray gelding, fourth.

John R. Thompson won three firsts in last night's events. He won first and fourth places in the $500 champion heavy harness stake. Mr. Thompson took first with Clyde Iris, a brown mare shown to a four wheel vehicle, and fourth with Leading Article. Model Gem, winner in the other events of the evening, captured second place for the George A. Heyl stable. Third was taken by Seaton Saxon, owned by Mrs. J. K. Dering.

Exciter Wins Saddle Stake.

In the $1,000 champion saddle stake, O. W. Lehmann's entry, Exciter, won first. Ruth Ann, George Calvert's chestnut mare, came in for second prize; Marcheta, from O. H. Gray's stable, third, and Mardip, Mrs. Glen Dipmore's entry, fourth.

In the pony class other than Shetland, Fire Fly, owned by George A. Stone Jr., won the blue ribbon, second going to Tony Mix, another Gray entry. Jack o' Diamonds of Broadview Farms, Inc., was third, and Sweet Briar, nominated by Noble D. Wolf, Chicago, fourth.

The first honor in the $500 champion pony stake went to John R. Thompson's Axholme Venus. Brilliant, a Gorham and Simpson pony, won second, with third going to Dinarth Winall, a bay mare from George A. Heyl's string, and fourth to Cedar Crest farm's Dardanella.

Heavy Six-Horse Team Events.

The Union Stockyards won first in the heavy six-horse team event. Manitoba Cartage and Warehouse company's Floradoras rumbled out of the ring with second place, Wilson and company's Sextet taking third.

The ladies' horses in harness class driven to six phaeton was won by John R. Thompson Jr., who drove Leading Article and Farina Regal. Second went to Model Gem and Society Queen, George A. Heyl's entry; William E. Dee third, with Seaton Priscilla and Seaton Buster, and Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary, from the Charles G. Duffy string, winning fourth.

Leona Farms won both first and second in the ladies' hunter and jumper class, the blue ribbon going to Wood Girl, ridden by Mrs. J. A. Blackwood, and the red one to Timber Topper, ridden by Miss Ida Scott, captain of the Chicago women's polo team. Gaelic, Dr. Walter Venn's entry, got third, and Mrs. Blackwood's Argonna fourth.

In the closing spectacular and thrilling event of the show that ended five battles for various championships with a total of $4,000 in stakes, Hemlock, owned by E. J. Lehmann, Chicago, won first in the $1,000 champion hunter stake. Mr. Lehmann also won fourth with White Oak. Great Scott, owned by O. W. Lehmann, took second, and Sparkle, Edward G. Fuller's entry, third.

SMOKE BARS CHICAGO AS IDEAL OPERA CITY, SAYS HELEN STANLEY

MRS. HELEN STANLEY.
[Copyright: U. & U.]

Every cubic foot of murky smoke which belches out of Chicago chimneys means another frog in the throat of the sopranos, the contraltos, the tenors, and bassos who come to the city to sing in opera or concert. That at least was the way Mme. Helen Stanley, former star of the Metropolitan Opera company, explained things yesterday as she sat in her suite at the Congress hotel and talked of the relativity of vocal music and atmosphere.

"Chicago will never be an ideal operatic center until it rids its air of the smoke which makes every singer's throat tighten and tickle," she declared, and cited the predicament of the opera company some time ago, when so many singers had colds that performances had almost to be postponed.

"Damp seacoast air is difficult to sing in," said Mme. Stanley, as she prepared to go on with practice for her concert at the Studebaker theater this afternoon. "High altitudes also give the singer trouble. But your smoke here is the worst of all."

STAR CONTRIBS TO PAY HONORS TO B. L. T., FIELD

The Allied Arts association will give a dinner tomorrow to honor the memories of Eugene Field as director of the Sharps and Flats column in the Daily News and of Bert Leston Taylor (B. L. T.), who founded the Line o' Type column in THE TRIBUNE.

Among those who will tell of their contributions to the column will be Slason Thompson and Francis Wilson, who were among Field's closest friends, and Charles G. Blanden (Laura Blackburn), J. U. Higinbotham (J. U. H.), Frank M. Morris, Mrs. Anne Higgins Spicer (Anchusa), Richard G. Atwater (Riq), Laura Lee Randall, and Prof. Henri David, all of whom contributed to The Line.

Richard Henry Little, the present conductor of The Line, will speak, and Mrs. Marian Chase Schaeffer will read selections from the writings of Taylor and Field.

Mrs. Roosevelt Sails to Unveil Cuban Monument

New York, Dec. 6.—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the former President, sailed today for Cuba with the official party of the Roosevelt Memorial association, headed by Henry J. THE ART OF GIFT-MAKING

The true gift is flavored with the thoughtfulness of the giver. A gift should delicately convey a sympathetic understanding of the friend's preferences, and a due regard for them. Time and nice judgment are required to make a true gift. Writing a check, even though it be in several figures, often leaves the recipient cold. It reveals laziness and indifference. Real friends are worthy of true gifts, into which you put a bit of your own personality, and express theirs.

STRANGE STORY OF SENATE WAR IN RHODE ISLAND

Fist Fights, Bomb, Exile of 23 Republicans.

Providence, R. I., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—No more bitter political warfare has ever been waged in Rhode Island than that between the Republicans and Democrats, beginning in January, 1923, and continuing to the present time. Democrats, electing a governor, lieutenant governor, state treasurer, attorney general, and almost half of the membership of each branch of the general assembly, in 1922, have been the aggressors.

The Democratic attack is now dulled as a result of their complete rout on Nov. 4, last, and the fight, though destined to continue until next January, has been stripped of violence.

The small senate chamber in the capitol, Rhode Island's marble palace, and one of Stanford White's finest works, has been the chief battleground of what neutral men have called "a disgrace to Rhode Island" and "civil war."

Long Filibusters Staged.

Filibusters lasting from five to fifty hours, with senate officers seated for forty-two hours; crowds of jeering spectators; a free for all fight in front of the rostrum, in which senators, sheriffs, and even women spectators joined, and a gas bombing have marked the meetings.

Stagnation of legislation, blocking even the annual appropriation bill, prolonging the 1923 senate session to six months, and the 1924 session to twelve months, and the self-exiling after the bomb outrage of twenty-two Republican senators in Massachusetts, have been results.

Setting loose of deadly bromine gas in the senate on June 19 last, after a filibuster of forty-two hours without a recess, was the climax of the two year struggle. Three Republican senators, Arthur A. Sherman, president pro tem; R. G. McMeehan and Frederick B. Cole, had to be carried to the hospital.

Riotous Session, Then Bomb.

It was this session in which the Democratic minority of sixteen, backed up by Lieut. Gov. Felix A. Toupin, presiding, intended to force the Republican majority of twenty-three to pass a resolution calling for a constitutional convention for the revision of the 1842 constitution.

"Gas has been planted in the senate in an attempt to suffocate Toupin," Gov. Flynn, Democrat, told reporters a few minutes after he had rushed to the senate and found the broken test tube containing the bromine mixture wrapped in a newspaper and hidden in the folds of a drapery beside the rostrum.

Whether the "gas bomb" outrage was perpetrated by Democratic or Republican sympathizers or by some over enthusiastic practical joker has never been proven. After a month's investigating, an affidavit was secured from a Thomas Lally of Brooklyn, N. Y., who had been hired to guard Republican senators. He said he had been asked by the chairman of the Republican state central committee, William C. Pelkey, to plant the bomb.

Says Another Guard Did It.

This, he deposed, he refused to do, whereupon William ("Toots") Murray agreed to do it.

A grand jury then in recess was reconvened. It returned indictments for conspiracy to assault the lieutenant governor and disrupt the senate against the three men. The trial opened Oct. 6, but all indictments were dismissed when the attorney general failed to produce Lally.

In the filibusters the Democrats held the floor by yielding it one to another at two hour intervals. No Republican was ever granted recognition by the lieutenant governor. During their two hour periods the Democrats read from Shakespeare, from committee reports, and anything else to kill time, abused the Republicans and accused them of klan sympathies and suppressing the people.

Sentors Flee from State.

These tactics, the Democrats declared, would be continued until the election of Nov. 4 unless the constitutional convention resolution was passed. They made good their threat, but the Republican majority fled from the state on June 20 and left the senate powerless to pass legislation. They thus made themselves immune to arrest on warrants from the presiding officer.

"Deserters!" charged the Democrats.

"Exiles!" replied the Republicans.

Twenty-three Republicans comprised the fugitive group. Sanderson, however, returned to attend each of the sessions to question the absence of a quorum, so the Democrats could not legally pass their favorite bills, as they had done once before at a so-called rump session.

The exiled senators have remained at their hotel, forsaking business and home ties for more than five months. One has died since he went away. Eleven of the absentees sought reelection and got it. They with their colleagues will return to Providence in January for the 1925 assembly.

Rhode Island is back in the full control of Republicans and for two years at least the state is assured of orderly senate sessions.

KORETZ ASSETS MAY REPAY HALF TO HIS VICTIMS

Convict 9463 Begins Prison Routine.

While Leo Koretz was being inducted into the prison routine at Joliet penitentiary yesterday, preparatory to beginning his sentence for promoting the Bayano oil bubble, Maurice Berkson and Joseph B. Fleming, counsel for the receiver of his estate, pored over the records of the swindler's twenty years of operations in an attempt to bring order out of chaos.

The financial wizard kept few records while conjuring the $2,000,000 or more from his friends and relatives, and destroyed most of those when he fled Chicago in panic a year ago. And this fact, the lawyers say, will make their task of distributing the salvage among his creditors all the more difficult.

Still Seek Hidden Assets.

"We've been forced to pare down some of the claims," said Mr. Berkson. "But I believe the victims will eventually recover about 50 per cent of their losses."

Assisting the attorneys is Joseph P. Connolley, a young barrister of Halifax, Nova Scotia, who accompanied Koretz to the penitentiary on Friday night.

Connolley is confident Koretz has turned over every penny he had left when captured two weeks ago, but officials handling the case have not abandoned the hope of turning up hidden assets.

Koretz, now convict No. 9463, held his emotions in check as he went through his routine at Joliet prison. The most trying experience for him was a trip to the prison barber shop to have his hair clipped.

Plans for Atonement.

"I come here willingly," was his parting word to Connolley at the prison gate. "I did wrong and know it. I brought disgrace upon my wife and children and outraged the confidence my friends had in me. The least I can do is to make atonement—and make it quietly, to spare my family as much as possible."

Jap Sentry Tries to Arrest Siamese Prince as Spy

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TOKIO, Dec. 6.—Prince Prajadijok, brother of the king of Siam, who has been touring Japan, was unable to resist the temptation of photographing the inland sea within the fortification zone of Itsukushima, despite police protests. A sentry, not knowing the prince, attempted to arrest him, but was stopped by the master of ceremonies accompanying his highness. The prince sailed from Nagasaki yesterday.

VILLAGERS' WAR OVER MODEL BOY BROUGHT TO END

One Side Repents, the Other Retreats.

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—Peace has descended on New Carlisle, Ind. The civil war which has split the town for months has ended. It is a peace without victory, for one side has admitted its error and the other has retreated, leaving the field in possession of the foe.

Chance Crouch, 14, was looked upon with pride by many mothers and fathers at New Carlisle, and was pointed out to their children as the "ideal boy." "Chan" also stood high in the favor of the school girls of the village and parties were incomplete without his presence. In classroom he was the ideal pupil. His conduct was excellent, his manners above question, his appearance neat. He kept away from the other boys and there was resentment, perhaps some jealousy.

Forced to Fight.

Returning home from a picture show one night last June "Chan" was stopped by four youths and told to fight any one of them he chose. He objected, because, he said, of his Sunday clothes. So he was forced to fight and lost the decision.

Young Couch's father caused the arrest of the four boys. It brought ill feeling and the people of New Carlisle took sides. Finally the village was a hotbed of battles.

Moved from Village.

The Couch family moved to Culver, but still the feud went on in court and outside. Yesterday, as the grand jury assembled, the four boys appeared in court, pleaded guilty, and were released, their future liberty depending on good behavior.

Bennett Rogers, Virgil Smith, James Kern, and Noble Swanson, the accused, will go back to the schoolroom Monday. The "model boy" will not be there—he's a pupil at Culver.

Steamer Burns; Crew of 22 Afloat on Ocean on Raft

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

CAPETOWN, South Africa, Dec. 6.—A frantic search of the Indian ocean is being made for twenty-two men on a raft, without food or water. They are the captain and crew of the interisland steamer Cigale, which caught fire and was abandoned. The thirty-five passengers escaped in two lifeboats, which arrived safely at Reunion.

STEAL CHRISTMAS CARDS.

Christmas cards, fountain pens and compacts valued at $750 were stolen early yesterday by burglars who entered the drug store of J. F. Meyer in La Grange, Ill.

NEUTRODYNE
stands clear and alone

ARE you one of the thousands who, wondering what radio set to buy, are caught in the confusion of radio names and claims?

Radio, the wonder of the age, has been revolutionary. It has passed through the experimental stages faster than any other industry. Out of this have come four main circuits or systems of radio reception. The first three of these were originally designed and perfected to receive and emphasize the staccato dot-and-dash of radio telegraphy.

Neutrodyne followed broadcasting

In 1920, the broadcasting of music and speech as a free public service for entertainment in the home was begun. Immediately the electrical engineers sought to adapt the three existing systems to the new conditions.

In 1922, L. A. Hazeltine, Professor of Electrical Engineering at Stevens Institute of Technology, saw the inherent difficulties in the existing circuits. He took the factors as represented by the new conditions and mathematically worked out an entirely new system of broadcast reception.

With nothing but Professor Hazeltine's figures to work from, a receiving set was built, and marvelous to report, it worked perfectly the very first time it was tried. Distance, tone, ability to pick out any station anywhere, were right there in the first set built. It was a tremendous triumph for pure science.

The principles established by this first Neutrodyne are the identical ones embodied in every Neutrodyne set which has since been built.

Neutrodyne designed to receive broadcasting

The Neutrodyne stands today as the only radio receiver specifically built for the reception of modern broadcasting.

In order to protect the public from fraudulent Neutrodynes, the Hazeltine Corporation was formed, and Professor Hazeltine entrusted his great idea to just fourteen hand-picked, licensed manufacturers. These fourteen radio builders are grouped into one association, known as the Independent Radio Manufacturers, Incorporated. No other manufacturers may use the genuine Neutrodyne principle!

All present-day receivers, with the sole exception of the Neutrodyne, are adaptations of radio-telegraph receiving systems.

Neutrodyne superiorities

The definite advantages of the Neutrodyne are, first, Selectivity. You set the dials at predetermined points and hear only the one station you have selected. All others are rejected.

Clarity is the second point of Neutrodyne superiority. Neutrodynes create no squawks or whistles to disturb you or your neighbors. If all receivers were Neutrodynes, radio reception would be entirely free from squeals. Neutrodyne also guarantees perfect tone quality. Reproductions are faithfully realistic, producing the high notes of the violin, the low guttural twang of the bass viol, the roll of the drums. Human voices, sung or spoken, sound human.

The third Neutrodyne advantage is Distance. If the radio waves from a distant city are reaching your neighborhood, your Neutrodyne will convert them into voice or music. Neutrodyne owners know that what they cannot hear, no one else can. If "distance lends enchantment," you want a Neutrodyne.

The fourth and perhaps greatest of Neutrodyne features is absolute Dependability. Neutrodynes never disappoint. If you invite guests to a radio party—your Neutrodyne will not fail you. Apologies such as, "It worked all right last night," are not heard in Neutrodyne-equipped homes. Yes, there really is a receiver that always works—it's Neutrodyne.

MISS ISABELLE ROBBINS BRIDE OF C. W. ISAACS

Violet and flaming orange velvet dresses for the bridesmaids and a silver brocade bridal gown lent the wedding of Miss Isabelle Robbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Robbins of 1100 Lake Shore drive, to Charles W. Isaacs Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Isaacs of St. Louis, an air of richness yesterday afternoon. It blended appropriately with the smart and fashionable crowd which filled the Fourth Presbyterian church, where the ceremony was performed at 5 o'clock.

Pearls Only Jewelry.

The bride's gown was simply made and her only jewelry was a double choker of pearls around her neck. Her face veil of cream tulle fell from a coronet of rose point, and a billowy cloud of the tulle fell over a wide, heavy court train of the silver cloth. Three long calla lilies carried in one hand composed the bridal bouquet.

Mrs. John Christie Caldwell, the matron of honor, wore violet velvet, a silver turban with a lavender uncurled ostrich plume swung from one side. She carried three giant yellow chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids, Miss Emily Isaacs, Miss Margaret Hambleton, Mrs. John R. Winterbotham Jr., Mrs. Francis Manierre, and Mrs. Cyrus Edson Manierre, were in similar frocks of orange, with deep brown turbans with matching plumes, and carried stalks of lavender chrysanthemums.

Nieces Are Flower Girls.

Two nieces of the bride, Marjorie and Kay Goodman, daughters of Mrs. Kenneth Sawyer Goodman, served as flower girls and were dressed in cream colored chiffon dresses with tiny round orange hats. Each carried a bouquet of button chrysanthemums.

A reception at the Robbins residence followed the service.

WOMEN TO TAKE GREATER PART IN CHURCH COUNCIL

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—The report of the committee on policy for the next four years, adopted today by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, provided for a larger representation of women in the administration and on the executive board and declared the fundamentalist-modernist controversy in some of the churches was evidence of the possibility and value of such an organization as the federal council.

The recognition of women was made stronger by an amendment introduced by Mrs. John Ferguson, president of the council of women for home missions, New York, which made emphatic what was said to have been in the report by implication.

Women Told to Go Slow.

A suggestion was also made to the women not to enter into any new organization except in local communities until the entire subject of women's relation to the federal council and the larger church women's societies might have full consideration.

A resolution of a sensational character designed to abolish chaplains in the army and navy and substitute a non-military ministry was introduced by the Rev. C. C. Morrison of Chicago, editor of the Christian Century. The resolution was referred to the business committee but its introduction presaged a live discussion on the war question, which comes up Monday morning with William Jennings Bryan as the principal speaker.

All Creeds to Gather.

A resolution was unanimously adopted calling for a gathering of the denominations represented in the federal council in a national congress two years hence when the largest possible representation of the various twenty-eight denominations should assemble and have a chance for an open discussion of the questions usually presented to the federal council through reports from commissions.

The statement in regard to fundamentalist-modernist controversy says: "The doctrinal discussions which have shaken some denominations and which have attracted wide general discussion have had, in the judgment of some, the unexpected effect of drawing the churches together in the sense of common problems and common experiences. The denominations have been facing similar, if not identical, issues and have realized the community of their life and problems."

PERSHING IN PERU AS YANK REPRESENTATIVE AT INDEPENDENCE FETE

LIMA, Peru, Dec. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gen. John J. Pershing, carrying the title of special ambassador extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Peru, arrived here today at the head of the United States delegation, which will attend the centennial of the battle of Ayacucho here on Dec. 9. This event is celebrated as the anniversary of Peruvian independence.

GEN. PERSHING.

The retired chief of the staff of the American army received an ovation when he entered Lima. The city was in gala attire, triumphal arches and electrical illuminations having been erected. The arrival during the week of special embassies was followed by a series of formal receptions at the government palace. The members of the various delegations are all accredited as special ambassadors.

FARMER KILLED IN AUTO CRASH.

MUSCLE SHOALS BILL ON WAY TO COOLIDGE'S O. K.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—Indorsement of the Underwood Muscle Shoals bill by the administration is expected on Monday, providing certain recommendations submitted to President Coolidge today by Secretary of War Weeks are incorporated in the measure.

The President's opinion on the bill will probably go by letter to senate leaders. If Senator Underwood agrees to the changes it is predicted the bill will be passed before the end of the week.

Just what changes the administration wants were not made public today. Secretary Weeks, who has had army engineers working on the Underwood bill for several days, called on President Coolidge with copies of the report this morning and conferred at the White House for several minutes.

On his return to the war department he said the President had not advised any changes in either his report or his recommendations.

It is understood that one of the proposed changes deals with the financing of the Muscle Shoals project in case the power plants are not sold to private interests.

EIGHT-IN-LINE

It is conceivable that two motor cars of different make may be pretty much alike mechanically. And in fact, there are three cars—ELCAR Eight-in-Line and two others—which may fairly be considered comparable in ability, appearance and quality.

But in price they are not alike. ELCAR costs thousands less than one and hundreds less than the other. On this comparison is based our belief that ELCAR is the better value. We have ready a folder giving for your comparison the important specifications of the three cars, and their prices. Send for it today or get one at the nearest ELCAR showroom.

Nash Beats All Cars but Ford

in Chicago and Cook County November Registrations

Nash November Business for Entire Chicago Territory, Including Illinois, Northern Indiana, and Eastern Iowa, Shatters All Monthly Records

---

When November registration figures for Cook County and the City of Chicago were made available, they showed that Nash ran past every other car, except Ford, in total number of registrations.

During these same thirty days, sales for the entire Chicago territory, embracing Illinois, Northern Indiana, and Eastern Iowa, soared to a new high point.

October had just wound up the biggest month of business we ever attained—when November started stepping.

Then the mounting demand drove the November volume past all other Novembers, past even the great October, and onward and upward to the highest monthly mark in all our history.

One after the other, and by the thousands, buyers are finding out for themselves that Nash is offering the greatest motor car values in the industry.

During this week all Nash dealers throughout the entire Chicago territory are staging special exhibits.

Come and see the Advanced Six and Special Six models that are creating this unprecedented sales record.

CUBS SELL LEO COTTER, BUT FAIL IN TRADE WITH GIANTS

Louisville Club Gets First Baseman for Cash.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

New York, Dec. 6.—[Special.]—President Veeck and Manager Killefer of the Cubs turned one deal this afternoon in the baseball market, but at a late hour hadn't succeeded in putting over the big trade they have in mind.

BILL KILLEFER.

They managed to sell another one of their surplus players, but found it much more difficult to buy or trade. Leo Cotter, who did most of the first basing last year after Ray Grimes was injured, has been sold to the Louisville club of the American association. As the deal now stands, it is just a straight sale, though President Veeck said that there might be a ball player accepted as payment later on. One thing is sure, Mr. Cotter is to go to the Colonels.

Cotter Was a Regular.

Mr. Cotter was to have been put out last year soon after the training trip ended, but was retained because Ace Elliott broke his leg just before the season opened. Then when Grimes was injured in the early part of the season Cotter hopped right in as regular and did his stuff on first base for the rest of the season.

He never was strong enough at the bat to suit Manager Killefer, and when the deal with Pittsburgh was turned after the season ended, bringing Charley Grimm to the Cubs, there was little need to keep Mr. Cotter.

The papers in New York today all discussed a proposed trade between the Cubs and Giants, and while it is quite apparent that a deal is on the fire, it looks as if it may have to cook for a couple of days yet before it will be ready to serve to the public. If it goes over, it is likely to be quite startling and perhaps will be most pleasing to the north side fans in Chicago who believe that Mr. Veeck and Mr. Killefer will win a pennant for them next year if only they can add a right handed slugger to the squad.

Reds Bid Against Cubs.

Mr. Veeck and Mr. Killefer declare that if they get the man they are after they expect to be buying new glass all summer for the broken windows in the flat buildings outside the Cubs park.

The Cincinnati club seems to be the chief rival to the Cubs in the buying, selling, and trading that is going on here. The Reds are after a first baseman mainly, but they want help in other spots, too, and Jack Hendricks, manager, is continually snaring victims off the hotel lobby floor and leading them up to the suite of his boss, Mr. Garry Herrmann, burgomeister of Cincinnati.

Garry received a consignment of his specially prepared sausages and hams yesterday from Cincinnati. When a magnate gets well filled with Mr. Herrmann's hams and sausages, he is liable to give him a first baseman for nothing and might even throw in an outfielder.

Ebbets Is Confident.

Charles Ebbets, the squire of Flatbush and president of the Brooklyn club, seems content to sit back and smile this winter, because after the fine showing the Robins made last year—after his infield was properly assembled—he feels that it will be able to win the pennant in 1925.

At the same time Barney Dreyfuss of the Pirates thinks he is all set because of the trade he made with the Cubs whereby he got George Grantham. They are expecting wonderful things from George when they get him in the outfield and they may be right.

John McGraw, who just got off the boat this week and hasn't yet fully recovered from the rough trip from Europe, says the Giants are better than ever. So there you are. As yet the Phillies, the Braves, and St. Louis Cardinals have entered no claims on the next pennant.

Sisler, Cobb Seek Deals.

The American leaguers are rather in the background here, though George Sisler and Ty Cobb are roaming about and trying to do business, while the others appear content to sit still with what they have. St. Louis wants to trade Shocker but is demanding a lot for him. Cobb wants a second baseman and reports are he would sacrifice [illegible] young first baseman, if he could land a star. Tris [illegible] Cleveland, hasn't arrived on the scene yet, but is coming with ideas of trades. The Red Sox feel they are all set since they bought Welch, young shortstop of Seattle.

Connie Mack hasn't been seen. Griffith and Harris feel their world's champs are O. K. and the White Sox officials apparently haven't laid out their trading campaign but are expected to appear in a day or two and offer a lot of propositions.

SENATOR DEMANDS A PROBE OF BRIBING CHARGE IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 6.—A thorough legislative investigation of an alleged attempt to obtain $100,000 from Emil E. Fuchs, part owner of the Boston National league baseball club, for the purpose of bringing about passage of a bill permitting professional baseball on Sunday, was demanded today by Senator Eben S. Draper of Hopedale, in an order filed in the office of the clerk of the state senate.

The order was a result of a report from New York in which Judge Fuchs was quoted as saying that an attempt had been made to have him contribute to a "slush fund."

Earlier in the day it became known that another state senator, William I. Hennessey of Dorchester, had written to District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien demanding a grand jury investigation of the charges attributed to Judge Fuchs.

In a statement made over the telephone from New York to the office here of the Boston National league club, Judge Fuchs said he had made no accusation against any public official and that he regretted that his name should be connected with the report.

According to the original statement attributed to Judge Fuchs, a man purporting to be a lobbyist at the Massachusetts state house approached him in New York several days ago and made a demand for $100,000 to be used in bribing members of the Massachusetts legislature to pass a professional Sunday sports bill. Such a bill was recently filed by initiative petition bearing more than 26,000 certified signatures.

According to the order filed by Senator Draper, the proposed investigation would be conducted by a legislative committee of three senators and six representatives. Authority to summon witnesses and take testimony under oath would be provided and the report of the committee would be required not later than Feb. 1, 1925.

Its scope would be to investigate "an attempt or attempts to extort money from professional baseball or other interests for the expressed purpose of bribing members of the general court to pass a bill permitting professional baseball on the Lord's day.

WIFE SUES COY, EX-YALE STAR, FOR A DIVORCE

New York, Dec. 6. — Word came from Paris today of a suit for divorce filed there against Ted Coy, famous plunging Yale full back and captain, by his wife, Sophie D'Antignac Meldrim. They were married at Asheville, N. C., in 1913.

Ted Coy is one of the select coterie of football men mentioned when "all time" selections are considered. He was the preëminent backfield man, punter, and drop kicker of his day, and a unanimous all-American selection. His specialty was retrieving a lost cause by heroic and unstoppable line bucking. He twice beat Princeton after the Tigers were leading, directed by "Tad" Jones, now Yale head football coach, and then quarterback.

Coy was graduated from Yale in 1910.

PLUNGING LEVIS LEAD HASKELL TO 55-0 VICTORY

Muskogee, Okla., Dec. 6.—To the tune of war cries from the throats of Indians from a score of tribes, the Haskell warriors from Lawrence, Kas., massacred the light Oklahoma Baptist university team from Shawnee here today, 55 to 0.

With the line plunging Levi brothers furnishing the mainspring of the offensive power and the "two horsemen," Roebuck and Stidham, 19-year-old 220 pound tacklers, sweeping aside the Baptist line like paper, the Indians plowed through at will. They also kept their fake and pass formations hidden from the eyes of Oklahoma Aggies scouts here to look them over in preparation for the Aggie-Indian game next week at Dallas.

4 Notre Dame Men Named on All-Western

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Caliber of football in the western conference having been below the usual standard, it is necessary to look elsewhere when material is chosen for an all-western honorary eleven. When such a survey is taken it is only natural to take Notre Dame players into consideration. The Notre Dame eleven is generally acknowledged to be the strongest and most versatile team in the country, and one which is rightfully entitled to the national championship.

As has been the case for years, there were players of great ability on minor college elevens, but their worth never was fully appreciated because they did not receive the support to do the things which members of the larger elevens accomplished so thoroughly. Even coaches have repeatedly said their teams would be complete if they had this or that player of certain minor college elevens.

The task of selecting an honorary western conference eleven was comparatively easy compared with the attempt to choose the best players in the middle west. In many cases warriors can be named without a bit of hesitation and some of them should be almost unanimous choices for all-American elevens. They have proven their worth so many times there is little question as to their ability.

All Games Considered.

As stated in a previous article, players cannot be chosen because of brilliant performances in one contest. Players who have been of the most value to their teams must be chosen and their playing in every game considered from all angles. The chosen warriors must be equally efficient, offensively and defensively, and each of the three honorary elevens must be fortified in every department of offensive football. They should be players who can execute more than one style of attack and the backfields should be composed of players who can do most anything known to football.

It was the ability of Notre Dame players to do practically everything a good football team should do which enabled Coach Knute Rockne's eleven to complete its season undefeated. Members of that team possessed gridiron sense. They had coördination. They knew the sequence of plays. They made the breaks by forcing the issue, and in practically every game they were a dangerous scoring machine regardless of where the oval rested.

Notre Dame Boys Alert.

The Notre Dame eleven, which will meet Leland Stanford in an important intersectional game in Pasadena, Cal., on New Year's day, is much smarter, collectively, than any team in the middle west if not in the country. The players know the rules and they are quick to take advantage of anything. They are alert, follow the ball in a cunning fashion and tackle and block in a most aggressive manner. Despite the number of stars on the team, they have excellent team play and get into every formation with a determination which generally brings about the desired results.

For these reasons it is necessary to place four members on the honorary All-Western first eleven. One would not have to stretch the issue to place more on the first team, but other universities and colleges were represented by players who merit the honor of first choices. While their teams did not win sectional titles in some cases, their general play all season was convincing enough to show the football world they are players of the first water.

Comment was made on the western conference players selected for the All-Western when the Big Ten honorary elevens were chosen. No effort will be made in this article to elaborate further on their gridiron qualifications except to say they are rightfully entitled to their positions in the opinions of well versed football men who have seen them perform.

Stuehldreher Best in Years.

Harry Stuehldreher of Notre Dame is picked unhesitatingly for the quarterback position and made captain of the first eleven. It has been years since such a capable all-around player has performed on a western gridiron. He is a fearless player, a general beyond criticism, and a forward passer of accurate ability. Defensively he is one of the best safety men in the country and a sure handler of punts.

In all Notre Dame's games Harry has been an important factor. Not only did he do his share of ball carrying, but his keen direction of attack and his uncanny knack to discover opponents' weaknesses made him a menace to Notre Dame's victims this fall. Coaches and scouts who saw him perform in his big games were liberal in praise for this player, who most certainly merits All-American consideration.

James "Sleepy" Crowley of Notre Dame is an excellent running mate for Harold Grange in the backfield. In fact, Crowley runs in much the same fashion as the Illinois streak in that he runs into tackles, uses the hip

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

COLLEGE ATHLETICS.

ONLY a few years ago it was the vogue for college faculties, at least a majority of them, to criticize growing interest in athletics and to deprecate resultant newspaper publicity. Advocates of restrictive measures found ready listeners.

When architect's plans for the present concrete stands at Stagg field were presented about ten years ago the seating capacity was cut drastically because of the prediction of an influential faculty man: "There will be no intercollegiate football within five years."

Now colleges are building immense stadiums to care for football crowds and encouraging intercollegiate athletic competition to the utmost.

Have those former anti-athletic faculty members changed their views? Not all of them. Those who have not, however, now lurk in the shadows waiting for some untoward event to renew their arguments.

Boards of trustees or boards of regents —whatever the name of the governing body—have learned that athletic success is not only the best means of advertising their institution, but also is the most effective means of retaining their hold on alumni whose sports enthusiasm often is capitalized in financial campaigns for educational buildings.

Alumni can be rallied around a football team as they cannot around a debating team. Imagine a "homecoming" for the debating team. Respect for physical prowess is inherent from the origin of man.

There is no question of the publicity. Notre Dame undoubtedly is a fine educational institution, but would it be known from coast to coast without Rockne's successful gridders? The same may be asked of Centre college of Kentucky, Georgia Tech, University of Southern California, and a host of others.

With a weather eye cocked for possible evils, we think college boards of trustees and progressive college presidents are off on the right foot.

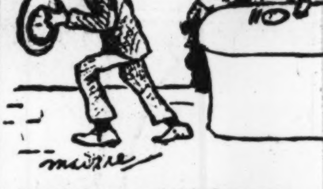
A Cooked Romance.

She sat two tables from me,
  Eating chicken a la King;
Her watch was gold and diamonds,
  As were necklace, pin, and ring.
A coat of rich chinchilla
  Draped itself around her seat;
Her dress was like good poems—
  As they should be—short and sweet.



I pushed my sandwich from me
  (Nothing left but crusts and fat),
My last year's coat I donned, and passed
  The table where she sat.
I coughed, and she looked up . . .
  How well I knew that home-brewed look!
"Your ham and eggs is ready, sir"—
  My queen was just our cook. EIZIAM.

In Which We Play Bridge.

As the only available male in our neighborhood that particular night, we recently were drafted to substitute for a regular in a bridge club where they play bridge. If we played deuces wild as we play bridge, we'd be in the hands of a receiver.

The dinner was bountiful and Morpheus disposing. The rooms were warm and impelling to drowsiness. So we limped, figuratively speaking, through to the final four deals, partnered with a lady whose score previous to our advent suggested first prize. On the final deal there was spirited bidding between our partner's clubs and our opponent's diamonds, with us a sleepy onlooker.

Our partner led ace of clubs and we dropped our singleton fourspot. She led the trey. We had no more clubs, so we discarded a heart. You see, we thought clubs were trumps. They weren't. She looked up in surprise, and queried, "Haven't you any diamonds?"

"Certainly," we replied, looking comfortable at the four in our hand, queen high.

"Well, what are you saving them for?" she retorted—a bit petulantly, we thought. We don't know. We don't know yet. But we feel reasonably sure we will not be asked to substitute in that bridge club again.

ROCKNE'S GANG AND ARMY CLASH IN N. Y. OCT. 17

New York, Dec. 6.—The Army-Notre Dame football game will be played next year on Oct. 17 at the Yankee stadium, Ray McCarthy, football director for the New York American league baseball club, announced today.

Penn State and Georgia Tech will open the stadium football season on Oct. 10, and negotiations are under way for a major contest on the American league field every Saturday during the campaign, McCarthy added.

Penn State Soccer Team Undefeated for Six Years

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 6.—Defeating the Annapolis midshipmen by a score of 2 to 0 here today, the soccer team of Penn State college further advanced its remarkable record of six seasons without suffering a loss. Today's game was finely contested, the Nittanys registering their two tallies in the first half.

Yale and Harvard Dual Track Meet on June 15

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 6.—Yale and Harvard will hold their annual dual track meet at Yale next spring on June 15 in connection with the Yale commencement festivities, it was announced today.

Finn Stars to Race in Meet Here Jan. 16

Paavo Nurmi and Willie Ritola, the great Finn athletes whose running was the feature of the recent Olympic games, will appear in a special match race with Joie Ray as the feature of the annual handicap track and field games of the I. A. C. to be held in the Coliseum on Jan. 16.

Announcement of the positive date and signing of the Finns was made yesterday by Charles A. Dean, chairman of the athletic committee of the Tricolor club. Dean asserted a little trouble was encountered to have the runners released from engagements in the east, but these obstacles were overcome when it was shown the foreigners were wanted in Chicago.

Program Out Tomorrow.

According to Chairman Dean, the three cornered race will be held over a distance from one to three miles. A ten lap track will be used and it is possible part of the course used at the Broadway armory will be available. The dashes and hurdles will be held over a sixty yard straightaway, while there will be plenty of room in the infield for the jumps and weights.

The regular program of handicap events open to all athletes will be held. Plans will be ready tomorrow and will be sent to all universities, colleges, athletic clubs, and individuals in the middle west. Chairman Dean expects to make it one of the most successful affairs of its kind ever held in Chicago.

THEY ALL WANT NURMI

New York, Dec. 6.—Paavo Nurmi, great Finnish runner and Olympic champion, who is due here the first of next week for his first American invasion, will receive a host of invitations for indoor meets when he arrives. He is a passenger on the Celtic, which is expected to dock on Tuesday.

Nurmi is coming here under the auspices of the Finnish-American Athletic club, in whose games at Madison Square Garden Jan. 6 he will make his debut. Following that he will participate in the Illinois A. C. games at Chicago.

Others seeking his services are the Millrose A. A. at Madison Square Garden, Jan. 27 and 28; Boston A. A., Jan. 31; Wilco A. A., Brooklyn, Feb. 7; and Philadelphia for Feb. 9. Baltimore, Washington and Toronto also are anxious to see the "flying Finn" in action.

LIPTON LEAVES, GAY, GLIB, AND STILL AFTER CUP

New York, Dec. 6.—Sir Thomas Lipton, Irish baronet, whose attempts to lift the America's cup have made international yachting history for twenty-five years, left for home on the Leviathan today.

The genial sportsman departed flinging the same merry quips at reporters which marked his arrival. His parting shot was a request for a trolley car to take his across the great open spaces of the liner to his stateroom.

Sir Thomas added nothing to his previous announcement that he intended to challenge next year for the America's cup, the test to be made in 1926. His challenger, not yet built, will be called the Shamrock V.

MAROONS AND PURPLE FACE STIFF 1925 CAMPAIGN

Illinois Fails to Book Game with N. D.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Although both coaches expressed a willingness to play a game of football next fall at the informal meeting of Big Ten coaches at the Auditorium hotel yesterday, there will be no clash between Illinois and Notre Dame on the gridiron in the fall of 1925.

BURT INGWERSEN.

Coach Rockne of Notre Dame, who was about the most popular coach at the session, stated flatly on Friday night he would arrange a game with Illinois on Oct. 10, after it got around the lobby that Zuppke of Illinois had challenged Rockne to a game. During the night, however, both mentors thought it over and agreed that such a game coming so early in the season would have a serious effect on the remaining struggles.

Zuppke asserted in a kidding way, however, that so long as Rockne would lose his first and second teams this year, the third eleven would not draw a crowd at Champaign. Rockne said he would meet Illinois with his third team and give the Orange and Blue a mighty hard game at that. Finally both shook hands and a game may be arranged in 1926.

Tables Turn for Rockne.

In previous years when Rockne attended such schedule meeting he had to stand around on the outside and wait until the coaches had filled their schedules to see if it was possible for his team to get games with conference elevens. Yesterday just the reverse was true. Coaches of Big Ten elevens sought games with Notre Dame and when most of the slates had been drawn Notre Dame had been scheduled for struggles with two big Ten teams. A three year contract was drawn with Northwestern. The first game will be played in South Bend next fall on Nov. 21, while the other two will be decided in the proposed new Purple stadium.

Rockne also stepped into the breach and helped out Bill Spaulding, the Minnesota mentor, who was unable to book many conference games. Unless there is a switch in the schedule, this struggle will be decided in Minneapolis on Oct. 24, with a return game at South Bend in 1925.

Maroons and Purple to Play.

All chance of a break between Northwestern and Chicago was avoided when Ohio State agreed to meet the Maroons on Stagg field Oct. 10, the date which Stagg had intended to offer the Purple. As a result of the switch Northwestern and Chicago will clash on Oct. 17. If the new stadium at Evanston is ready the game will be played there. If not, it will be decided on Stagg field.

As expected, some of the teams had trouble to arrange the desired number of contests. Purdue, Indiana, and Iowa experienced the most difficulty. Coach Burt Ingwersen of the Hawkeye eleven would neither affirm nor deny that negotiations are being carried on for a home and home series with the University of Southern California, while Nebraska is a possibility on the Iowa schedule next fall.

Stagg Books Kentucky.

A. A. Stagg of Chicago announced his slate, which includes three intersectional struggles. Kentucky will open the season on Oct. 3, while Pennsylvania and Dartmouth are the other teams from other sections to be met. In addition, Purdue, Ohio State, Illinois and Wisconsin will be met. The Penn and Illinois games are the only contests away from home.

Illinois will meet Tulane university of New Orleans in an intersectional clash at Champaign on Nov. 14. Butler will be used to fill in the open date, Oct. 10, which Zuppke claims he offered to Rockne of Notre Dame. Michigan will be met on the home gridiron on Oct. 24 in the big home coming struggle, and Zuppke will take his team to Iowa City and Columbus for the annual struggles with the Hawkeyes and Buckeyes.

Wisconsin Books Strong Teams.

Michigan took on a stranger in Indiana, which will be met at Ann Arbor on Oct. 10. The Wolverines will meet Wisconsin at Madison on Oct. 17 in the home coming struggle for the Cardinal, while the clash with Illinois on Oct. 24 will be home coming at Champaign. The Navy will be played at Ann Arbor on Oct. 31 and Minnesota will close the home season on Nov. 21.

Coach Jack Ryan of Wisconsin signed a two year contract with Purdue, the first game to be played in Madison on Oct. 24. Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa and Chicago are other Big Ten teams on the Badger schedule, while Coach Ryan asserted he is dickering for an intersectional game, but refused to name the prospective opponent.

Good Purple Card.

Northwestern arranged a good schedule. It includes Chicago, Michigan, Purdue, and Notre Dame as opponents, while some of Minnesota's foes will be Wisconsin, Notre Dame, Iowa, and Michigan.

Most of the coaches left for home last night, but the majority of them will gather in New York on Dec. 29 for the annual meeting of the National Coaches' association. Some were dissatisfied with their schedules, but in the main the program should be just as attractive as those arranged in other years. The large number of intersectional contests will add more interest to the season.

WALTER CAMP, HERE, DESCRIBES FAULTS OF PACIFIC COAST TEAMS

WALTER CAMP, father of American intercollegiate football, passed through Chicago yesterday on his way from the coast to his home in New Haven. On the coast he saw the struggle between Leland Stanford and California, which resulted in a 20 to 20 tie Camp was a guest of Big Ten coaches and athletic directors at the Auditorium hotel yesterday. The well known gridiron authority was called upon for a few remarks, which had to do with the big coast game.

Camp asserted that fully 90,000 persons, the largest gathering which ever saw a game of intercollegiate football in America, attended that struggle. He asserted the coast showed a decided weakness in a defense for the forward pass and paid just a little too much attention to the stunts put on before contests and during the intermission. He asserted in the far east and middle west there is a more grim determination to accomplish one's purpose and he believes the attacks in general are harder and more concentrated.

Camp left last night for the east and refused to comment on his All-American elevens which will appear in the near future.

QUESTION COAST RACE PROMOTER ON MISSING COIN

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—George Bentel, promoter of the much discussed Thanksgiving day Ascot Speedway race, left the district attorney's office, apparently shaken this afternoon following questioning regarding charges that he has held out $40,000 prize money due the auto drivers. From Deputy District Attorney D. H. Clark it was learned that Bentel has promised to report to him again Monday regarding prospects of raising $40,000 to pay off the claims of men finishing the race from third to tenth position.

"The grandstand gate was insufficient to pay such large amounts of prize moeny," Bentel stated. "Most of the drivers disqualified themselves under the rules of the race, anyway. I'll admit the race didn't go 250 miles as it was programmed, but the cars they used wouldn't have stood up for 250 miles of a road race, so we had to cut it short."

Clark stated that if it is proved Bentel showed the drivers a $40,000 check from the Universal Film corporation just before the race, as an argument that the prize money was thereby guaranteed, he would allow complaints against Bentel and J. E. Brown, secretary of the speedway association charging a felony.

HOLD TURFMAN FOR SLAYING

New Orleans, La., Dec. 6.—"Whitey" Rawlins, race horse owner, was being held by the Gretna police tonight for the killing of "Cajin" Roy, former Negro jockey, whom Rawlins shot near the Jefferson park race track today.

Rawlins said the shooting grew out of trouble he had with the Negro ten years ago in Tia Juana. When he met Roy today for the first time in three years, he believed the Negro was going to attack him and fired in self defense, he told the police.

Woman Bowler Spills 640 Pins in Three Games

Dubuque, Ia., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—Rolling a 640 score in a three game series this afternoon, Mrs. Alma Dietrich set a new record for local woman bowlers. She hit the pins for counts of 224, 214, and 202.

4 N. D. PLAYERS NAMED BY 'ECKIE' ON ALL-WESTERN

check, and then pivots loose from tacklers. He runs with plenty of drive and when tackled takes short, rooting steps to gain the extra ground. He was seldom thrown back during the season.

Crowley Hard Tackler.

In addition to his ball carrying ability, Crowley is an excellent forward passer and just as effective receiving the tosses. He is also a past master in faking plays and an excellent blocker. This was especially true when other members of his team made the forward tosses. On defense he tackled hard and sure, and with Grange as a running mate a terrific running attack could be planned, and this offense would be hard to check.

Elmer Layden, one of the four horsemen of Notre Dame, is placed at full back. This player is entitled to the position because of his all around ability. He can punt and boot goals from the field. He can hit the line, as was shown in the latter stages of the Northwestern game, and he can run the ends or drive off the tackles. He is fast enough to form interference for either Grange or Crowley. Defensively, he is an ideal player to back up a line because of his keen ability to size up opponents' attacks and move to the danger points just as quickly. Layden is one of the best punters in the country. His efforts combine height and distance, and above all, are generally well placed.

Wier Leading Lineman.

Ed Wier, who captained the Nebraska eleven to a successful season, is placed at left tackle without a bit of hesitation. He is the outstanding player in the Missouri Valley conference and recognized by nearly all as one of the leading linemen in the country. He is aggressive. He is hard to box and, above all he drives so hard that it was not an uncommon sight to see him smear plays before they got under way. This was especially true of the Illinois and Notre Dame games.

On kicks, he was down the field with the ends and seldom failed to rush the forward passer. He was a natural leader, a gentleman on the field, and a most important factor in the success of Coach Fred Dawson's eleven this fall. In fact, Nebraska has a habit of producing splendid tackles and Wier's name must be added to those who have already helped to make Cornhusker football history.

Lingenfelter of Drake, which lost its claims to the Missouri Valley conference championship by bowing in defeat to Ames, is placed at left end. He was of the type of player who charged with the ball on defense and seldom failed to turn the play to the inside. He was expert in receiving forward passes and seldom failed to cover kicks properly. In several of Drake's games this player recovered fumbled punts which enabled Drake to remain in the lead for the title until it met defeat in its final conference game. He was just the type needed for the present game.

Walsh a Game Youth.

Adam Walsh of Notre Dame is placed at center. He is without question the best pivot man in the middle west and one of the leaders in the country. He was an excellent leader and captained this year's Notre Dame team to the national championship. He played a roving position on defense in most cases, but knew when to go up into the line when opponents gained through any points in the forward wall.

On offense his passes were clean and sure. After passing the oval accurately, Walsh did his share by going through to cut down the secondary defense. He had a nose for the ball and recovered many fumbles during the year. He was game to the core, as was shown in the Army game, when he played with broken bones in both hands. His grit also asserted itself in the Carnegie Tech struggle when he played with a badly bruised hip which prevented him from taking the proper stance in passing the ball. He is another player who should command All-American consideration.

Aside from Stuehldreher, Parkin, and Orebaugh, who are placed on the first three elevens, other quarterbacks whose work during the season merits mention are Bloodgood of Nebraska, Patterson of Penn college, Entringer of Columbia, Karr of Simpson, Lamb of Lombard, Hall of Illinois, Rockwell of Michigan, and Lorber of Indiana.

Many Good Backs.

Lunz of Marquette and Edwards of Michigan were excellent linemen and Huntzinger of Notre Dame a good end. Among some of the good backs were Griggs of Butler, Gaffney of De Paul, John and Norton Behm of Ames, Pond of Missouri, Britton of Illinois, Mercer of Simpson, Schutte of Minnesota, Harris of Wisconsin, Friedman of Michigan, Hunt of Ohio State, Sloate and Marks of Indiana, Harmeson of Purdue, Miller of Notre Dame, and Scantlebury of Iowa.

Harry Stuehldreher is made captain of the first eleven and would direct his team's attack. He could be used to forward pass and run with the ball. Grange and Crowley would be available for running attacks or slants off the tackles, while Layden could advance the oval on any sort of play aside from doing the punting and field goal kicking. The line and ends would be a match for any in the country, while the second and third elevens are equally fortified in all departments of offensive and defensive football.

CLEVELAND IS VICTOR.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 6.—The Cleveland hockey team made it two straight wins from St. Paul by defeating the visitors by a score of 4 to 0 tonight, all the goals being scored in the second period. Jamieson scored twice and Hilton and Bennett once each.

ARMY ELEVEN SINKS GOBS IN FIERCE BATTLE

One of the flashiest players at Grant Park stadium yesterday was Taylor, half back on the Fort Sheridan team, which defeated Great Lakes, 15 to 0. His work was a large factor in the victory scored by the army. Above he is shown tearing through the navy's line for a gain of 12 yards in the second quarter.

Touchdowns—Taylor, Wurst. Goal from field—Wurst. Referee—Morton [Michigan]. Umpire—Lipski [Chicago]. Field judge—Felt [Michigan]. Head linesman—Joyce [Center].

Middies of the Great Lakes Naval Training station grid squad cruised to their defeat at Grant Park stadium yesterday, floundering before the heavy artillery of Fort Sheridan's powerful machine, 15 to 0. The sort of football played by the gobs was better suited to a firm turf than to the sloppy field on which the game was played, while the crashing, plunging offensive used most by the army gained consistently against the sailors' line.

Using Wurst as their chief offensive threat, the doughboys plowed through the midshipmen for nearly double the number of first downs gained by the men o' war. Right off the bat the army made a superlative threat when Ewell nabbed the navy's kickoff and dashed the full length of the field to plant the ball behind the goal posts.

The play was called back and the army penalized for holding. Then, starting on their own 15 yard line with a 35 yard end run by Ewell, the soldiers crashed the full length of the field, failing on fourth down to pass over the navy goal from the 2 yard line.

Shortly afterward, Wurst opened the scoring by booting a place kick from the navy's 30 yard line. The sailors then put up a powerful offensive, using the brilliant Parkinson in their chief threats, but without registering. A break gave the army the ball on the navy's 10 yard line in the second quarter, from where Wurst and Taylor bucked, the former taking the ball over. Wurst missed his kick from placement.

Again in the third period the cadets scored when a pass, Taylor to Wurst, netted a touchdown. Wurst's kick was blocked. In the fourth frame the navy opened with a scintillating open running and passing game, despite the wet field, and when the Fort Sheridan second team took the field toward the close of the game the sailors were going toward a score, landing on the army's 5 yard line as the game ended.

The battle was hard fought and was unusually interesting, in spite of the bad weather conditions. Thousands of service men from the rival posts were in the stands, the gobs putting up an especially notable showing, arriving at and leaving the field in parade formation.

40,000 See Trojans Beat Syracuse Eleven by 16-0

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 6.—[By Associated Press.]—The west scored a victory over the east in the first intersectional football game played on the Pacific coast this season when the bulky University of Southern California team defeated the Syracuse university squad here today before 40,000 fans, 16 to 0.

Although the Trojans' field goal and first touchdown were made possible by "breaks"—two blocked punts—the western team clearly outplayed its eastern opponents. One of the deciding factors was the superior charging ability shown by the U. S. C. line.

Score Twice on "Breaks."

U. S. C. scored twice in the first period. Four minutes after the kickoff Bayley attempted his first punt from his 20 yard line. While he was juggling the ball a Trojan lineman charged him and the ball rolled free, Gorrell, U. S. C. left guard, falling on it on the 11 yard line. After two plays Hawkins booted the ball over from the 13 yard line.

A few minutes following the second kickoff, Syracuse was again on the defensive and Bayley's second punt was blocked, this time by Center Cravath. Left End Hobbs Adams grabbed the ball and ran 38 yards to a touchdown. Hawkins' attempted goal kick was blocked.

Touchdowns—Adams, Hawkins. Point after touchdown—Hawkins. Goal from field—Hawkins. Referee—Varnell [Chicago]. Umpire—Thorp [Columbia]. Head linesman—Griffin [Iowa]. Field judge—Birch [Earlham].

Syracuse warded off further scoring until the fourth period, when a 34 yard pass by Green was snagged by Hawkins just across the goal line. This time Hawkins' effort to score by a goal kick was successful.

McBride's Toe Fails.

John McBride's magic toe, which humbled Columbia with three field goals on Thanksgiving day, was unable to get the range of the Trojan goal posts today. He tried one kick from the 22 yard line in the first period and another from the 34 yard line in the fourth period. The first was wide and the second blocked.

The fast but light Orange team appeared taken by surprise by the strength and speed of its Blue Jerseyed opponents. The Syracuse line was unable to prevent the Trojan forwards from shifting through again and again to break up plays. McBride and Capt. Simmons were the most consistent ground gainers for the defeated team. McBride's passing was particularly brilliant.

Starobin, the big Orange tackle, who has been mentioned on several of the mythical all-American elevens, failed to show superiority over Norman Anderson and Thomas, the U. S. C. tackles. Hobbs Adams, left end, Capt. Hawkins, Kaer, and Earle in the backfield, played brilliantly for the western team.

MIZZOU GETS VALLEY O. K. ON TRIP WEST

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 6.—Approval of the Missouri Valley conference to the contemplated football game between the University of Missouri and the University of Southern California at Los Angeles on Christmas day was granted at a meeting of conference members here today.

Faculty members not of the athletic departments of institutions in the conference gave their consent to the postseason game. A conference ruling required the consent of all the members before such a game could be played. Washington university of St. Louis was active in promoting the indorsement of the trip.

The Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical college at Stillwater was admitted as a member of the conference at today's meeting. This brings the number of schools in the conference to ten. Last year the application of the Stillwater college was tabled.

Eight football games, all conference contests, were scheduled for next year by officials of the University of Kansas. The annual Kansas-Missouri game will be played at Lawrence on Nov. 21, the Saturday before Thanksgiving, thus breaking a custom that has existed for many years. Both Kansas and Missouri favored the change in order to permit athletes and students to spend the holiday at home.

CATHOLIC PREP LEAGUE HONOR ELEVENS NAMED

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

Upsets, the unexpected strength of teams at one time considered mediocre and reversal of form of at least two elevens marked the Catholic league football season, which sang its swan song Thanksgiving day. A great collection of parochial stars were developed in the campaign just closed and the elite of these brilliant individuals have been selected by THE TRIBUNE for its all-Catholic honorary eleven.

Since any one is unable to see every high school eleven in action in the short season, the aid of coaches has been enlisted to justify the annual mythical selection. In this way an unbiased eleven can be chosen, giving every candidate for the honor due consideration.

Three Champs on Team.

De La Salle academy walked off with this year's title, and had to have real talent to accomplish this feat in a circuit composed of strong teams. Preseason dope did not favor Coach Norman Barry's boys to finish its schedule undefeated, but each game meant just one more scalp for the south siders, who displayed great gameness in acquiring the league title.

Although the league champs had a well balanced team, there were only three outstanding De La Salle players of all-Catholic quality. Mount Carmel, one of the strongest elevens, is given two places on the honor team, while St. Rita, St. Ignatius, St. Mel, De Paul, Loyola and St. Philip each have one.

Downs Picked as Captain.

Playing with one of the weakest teams in the circuit did not prevent Downs of St. Philip to demonstrate that he is one of the best backs of the year. His ability has won commendation from many parochial coaches as an inspiring leader, which qualifies him for the captaincy of the mythical eleven.

Another good back, O'Brien, is given the other half back job. He is as flashy as his running mate, but played with a championship team, and was one of the main cogs in the De La Salle play. In every game O'Brien displayed excellent open field running, hard plunging, accurate passing, and defensive ability.

Delaney Best Full Back.

The full back position is awarded to Delaney, the Mount Carmel plunger and defensive mainstay. He is given the edge on Blanchard, the De Paul flash, who was not able to keep up his consistent playing due to injuries. Big, strong and heavy, Delaney was a source of worry to every line he faced.

At quarter back, Huppert of De Paul is given the call. Injured in midseason, he was slightly handicapped, but proved a clever field general, a good man to return punts, and an excellent safety player.

Mackle of De La Salle and W. Mooney of Loyola stand head and shoulders over other parochial ends. It was seldom that a sweeping end run went around them. Both were good receivers of passes, afforded good interference and were equally strong on defense and offense.

At the tackle positions, Locke of St. Rita and Skalitisky are picked. Both were the two best defensive cogs in the respective lineups. The De La Salle player is selected for his ability to block punts and arise to meet any situation. In the last game of the year, Skalitisky converted a fumble into a touchdown by playing his usual wide awake game.

Scott, St. Ignatius, and Higgins, St. Mel, represent two of the leading guards. There is little they did not know about their positions. Ability to pass accurately and being strong offensively and defensively earned Nash of Mount Carmel the place at center. His work was consistent all through the season.

CATHOLIC TITLE CAGE GAMES TO BE HELD HERE

The second annual tournament to decide the Catholic interscholastic basketball championship of the United States will be held at Loyola university March 19, 20, 21, and 22, it was announced yesterday.

First prize, now held by Spalding institute, Peoria, Ill., winner of last year's tournament, is the Cardinal's cup, a silver trophy offered by George Cardinal Mundelein.

Peoria won the final, defeating Marquette academy of Milwaukee, 21 to 7. Several other prizes for runners up, the team showing the greatest sportsmanship and the team traveling the longest distance, are to be awarded.

West Virginia Wesleyan Eleven Trims Kentucky

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 6. — West Virginia Wesleyan's football machine downed the University of Kentucky by a 24 to 7 score here today in a game marked by spectacular plays. Frecka, speedy Wesleyan half, made two of the winners' touchdowns by gathering punts in his arms and dodging through the field in runs of ninety and seventy yards to the goal line.

COACHES SEEK CHANGES IN GRID RULES FOR 1925

When the football rules committee meets in New York City this winter coaches of western conference elevens will offer a few suggestions for changes in the code. These suggestions will be taken east by A. A. Stagg of Chicago, a member of the committee.

The Big Ten mentors are a unit in asserting the kickoff should be made from the kicking team's 40 yard line instead of the middle of the field as the present rule reads. Such a change, the coaches claim, will result in more runbacks of the kicks and do away with the putting of the ball in play on the 20 yard line after touchbacks.

Seek New Pass Rule.

The coaches also favor a change in the rule regarding the defense being offside. Instead of it being first down and ten yards to gain when the defense is offside, some coaches believe the next play should be first down and five yards to gain. Others are in favor of moving the yard sticks and making it first down and ten to gain.

Another point which merits consideration pertains to the interception of forward passes and fumbled punts. In these connections some of the mentors argue that the intercepting team should not be permitted to bring the ball back further than the original line of scrimmage. They say first down and possession of the oval is enough under such conditions, and that if these alterations are made games will be won and lost on their merits.

Want Punts Caught.

Others favor some sort of a rule which will make it necessary for punts to be caught. The punt handling in the middle west has been poor in recent years. The ball has invariably been permitted to strike the ground and roll about, with the catching eleven making weak attempts to recover it. If a rule is injected making it imperative to catch the punts whenever possible the game will be more interesting, and possibility of contests being decided on flukes done away with. Some favor the old rule of making it a free ball the moment the oval strikes the ground. This rule was in effect some years ago.

EAST NIPS WEST IN GRID GAME BY 13-12 SCORE

Cleveland, O., Dec. 6.—[United Press.]—Football stars from eastern colleges triumphed over western college gridmen, 13 to 12, here this afternoon in an east-west grid game.

The western team, coached by Knute Rockne, fought a close battle with the eastern eleven under direction of "Doc" Spears, West Virginia, but lost out through inability to add the final points after touchdowns were made.

Nardacci, West Virginia, starred for the east and Devine, Iowa, for the west. Each scored two touchdowns.

OPEN SUNDAYS AND EVENINGS

YOU can enjoy all the comforts of an enclosed car with greater safety at a small expense and without the cumbersome looking, vision-interfering, makeshift curtains and similar enclosures. To equip your car with FULL-VISION ENCLOSURES it takes only two days.

So Neat It Harmonizes with the Lines of Fine Cars

The FULL-VISION ENCLOSURE is the only one made entirely of steel, glass and rubber. Each pane of glass is weather-tight and rattle-proof being set in a rubber cushion. The outside edges of each steel frame are finished with extending feather-edge rubber. This rubber fills the space between frame and body, frame and top and frame and frame. The frames never come in contact with the car or with each other, yet, they are perfectly weather-tight and rattle-proof.

All doors open. FOUR Large Ventilators easily controlled. No change required in touring top. Enclosure weighs about half as much as an average passenger. It can be readily removed for summer storage and put on in a few hours. It stores flat against the wall, requires little space.

Don't take chances with human life driving with storm curtains or types of enclosures which obscure vision. Remember—a few days' illness from exposure will cost you more than this enclosure. Prepare in advance for disagreeable weather.

We have manufactured more enclosures than all other enclosure manufacturers in Chicago. Telephone or call for circular giving full details.

HUSKERS, M. A. C. SEEK ADMISSION INTO CONFERENCE

Applications for membership in the western conference by the University of Nebraska and Michigan Agricultural college were the most important pieces of news given out by Prof. O. F. Long, secretary of the faculty committee of the western conference, which held its annual meeting at the University club yesterday.

The applicants did not want immediate action taken and the conference committee did not take any action. Both, however, will be considered at such time when it is deemed advisable to enlarge the association. Prof. Howard C. Huston represented the Michigan Aggies and William J. Hotz the University of Nebraska.

No Limit on Practice Games.

Following a request of basketball coaches that the number of preliminary games be increased from three to five, the committee passed a resolution placing no limit on such contests. It was decided, however, to confer with the athletic directors during the year as to the advisability of cutting the number of conference games from twelve to ten. This cannot be done this year, as schedules have already been drawn.

The committee decided to adopt the National Collegiate swimming rules, which permit a swimmer to compete in only two individual events aside from the relay race. Under the old conference rulings, a contestant could take part in three individual events aside from the relay.

Indoor Meet at Evanston.

The annual indoor track and field championship of the conference will be held in Patten gymnasium, Northwestern university, on March 13 and 14. The swimming titles will be decided at the University of Chicago gym on March 12 and 13. The tennis championships were awarded to Chicago and will be held on May 21, 22, 23, and 25. The outdoor track and field championships went to Ohio State and will be held in the mammoth stadium on June 5 and 6. Another attempt was made to make this a closed meet, but it was voted down. The annual cross country run was given to Iowa and will be held on the Saturday before Thanksgiving day.

The committee, during an all day session, transacted business of importance to the association only. Prof. J. F. A. Pyre of Wisconsin was elected president for the ensuing year and Prof. O. F. Long of Northwestern was named secretary.

SOUTHERN BODY ELECTS OFFICERS, PASSES RULES

New Orleans, La., Dec. 6.—Dr. S. V. Sanford of the University of Georgia was reëlected president of the Southern intercollegiate conference at the closing session of that body here today. The next meeting will be held at Athens, Ga., on Dec. 4 and 5, 1925. Other officers elected were: George O. Ferguson, Virginia, vice president, and W. D. Funkhuser, Kentucky, secretary and treasurer.

The executive committee elected is composed of A. R. Hobbs, North Carolina; H. C. Byrd, Maryland; P. L. Reed, Florida, and M. T. White, Tulane. The committee on colleges is J. F. Broussard, Louisiana State university; J. B. Crenshaw, Georgia Tech; N. W. Daugherty, Tennessee, and H. N. Edmonds, South Carolina.

The conference voted to place all college athletics under conference rules. The amendments to abolish professional coaches and not to allow coaches on the field of play during intercollegiate contests were laughed down and tabled by the delegates.

An important amendment adopted was that no school shall pay the expenses of its athletes during the preliminary training season.

An effort to limit athletes only to play during the four years necessary for graduation was defeated after much argument. This would have eliminated post graduates and wrecked some of the college teams. The rule of one freshman year and three varsity years was retained. Next year's tournaments were allotted as follows:

Basketball at Atlanta, Feb. 27 and 28 and March 2 and 3.

Track at Sewanee on May 15 and 16.

Cross country at Virginia Polytechnic institute on Nov. 21.

The proposal to hold a boxing tournament was voted down.

TRIBUNE TROPHY AWARD WILL BE ANNOUNCED SOON

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

Announcement of the winner of the silver football, THE TRIBUNE Trophy awarded to the Big Ten palyer of greatest value to his team in 1924, possibly can be made next Sunday, probably the Sunday following. In the latter event, it will be a nice Christmas present for the player so honored.

The award, as previously announced, will be made on the composite choices of Big Ten coaches and officials who worked in Big Ten games. So far officials have been more prompt in sending in their selections than the coaches, several of whom went east after their own season closed and probably had a mass of accumulated work for their annual meeting yesterday.

System Explained.

Coaches will be given ample time to make up their minds for failure to vote might deprive a candidate from their school of the trophy and honor if the balloting is close as it is at present.

Inquiry has been made as to the method of considering the replies from coaches and officials. Coaches were asked to name the player of greatest value to their own team, and one other player of greatest value among the other nine conference teams.

Presupposing each coach knows more about his own team, the player who is named by a coach of greatest value to that coach's team will receive two points. His other selection will receive one point.

Trophy on Display.

Officials were asked to name first and second choices. Such choices will receive two and one points respectively. Commissioner of Athletics John L. Griffith and the writer will rate with the officials.

Unusual interest in the award continues as evidenced by many letters received urging claims of the various candidates.

THE TRIBUNE Trophy, a sterling silver football, about two-thirds the size of the regulation pigskin, resting on an ebony base with suitable silver plate for the necessary engraving, is on exhibition in the Madison street window of THE TRIBUNE business office at Madison and Dearborn streets.

M'NAMARA TEAM WINS NEW YORK SIX DAY GRIND

New York, Dec. 6.—[Special.]—Reggie McNamara, veteran Australian rider, and Peter Van Kempen of Holland were winners of the thirty-seventh six day bicycle race, which came to a close at Madison Square Garden tonight. Second place was captured by the "infants" of the grind, the popular Bobby Walthour Jr. of Nutley, N. J., scion of the great hero of six day races twenty years ago, and his Italian partner, Franco Georgetti.

The two teams were tied in miles and in laps, their totals being 2,368 miles, 5 laps, but McNamara and Van Kempen held a commanding lead in points, their total being 1,057, against 543 for Walthour and Georgetti.

One lap behind and in third place came the two Belgians, Buysse and Goosens, while Kockler and Stockholm finished in fourth place, Benezatto and Taylor in fifth, and Belloni and Deruyter in sixth. The tail end of the procession was brought up by Stockelynch and De Wolfe, Goulett and McBeath, and Gastman and Lawrence.

It was McNamara's third victory in the garden and Van Kempen's second. The final standing:

	Miles.	Laps.	Points.
McNamara-Van Kempen	2,368	5	1,057
Walthour-Gerogetti	2,368	5	543
Buysse-Goosens	2,368	4	103
Kockler-Stockholm	2,368	3	359
Benezatto-Taylor	2,368	3	248
Belloni-Deruyter	2,368	3	221
Stockelynch-De Wolfe	2,368	2	639
Goulett-McBeath	2,368	2	327
Gastman-Lawrence	2,368	2	55

SCRAP FOR SWEET CHARITY

TOMMY GIBBONS. KID NORFOLK.

Here are the two boys who will mix gloves at Madison Square Garden, New York, Tuesday night. The bout, which will be for the benefit of the New York American Christmas fund, is scheduled to go fifteen rounds, the same number Tommy stepped against Mr. Dempsey. Kid Norfolk is colored light heavyweight champion of the world.

GIBBONS IS FAVORITE OVER KID NORFOLK

New York, Dec. 6.—Tom Gibbons and Kid Norfolk finished the strenuous part of their training today for their fifteen round match at Madison Square Garden next Tuesday night as the feature of the annual Christmas fund benefit show.

A crowd of several thousand watched Gibbons in his final workout and critics were unanimous in proclaiming the St. Paul light heavyweight to be in perfect fighting trim. Tom put the finishing touches to his ring work by boxing five rounds with Jim Montgomery and Al Roode, two heavyweights, after which his Negro rival, Norfolk, exhibited his wares in a brief sparring session.

Both principals are close to the required weight, 175 pounds. Gibbons scaled 176½ after his workout and said he would have no trouble getting rid of the extra pound and a half before he weighs in before the state athletic commission Tuesday afternoon. Norfolk already is under 175.

Gibbons continued to rule a marked favorite among critics but a strengthening of support for Norfolk has been reflected in shortening of odds within the last few days.

N. DAME ELEVEN CARDS 9 GAMES FOR 1925 RACE

Coach Knute Rockne of Notre Dame, who will take his team to the Pacific coast to meet Leland Stanford in a post season game on New Year's day in Pasadena, yesterday completed his 1925 gridiron season. While Rockne will lose the backbone of this year's eleven, he expects to develop other players who will be versatile enough to give opponents interesting struggles in 1925. Following is the slate as announced yesterday by Rockne:

Oct. 3—Lombard at Notre Dame.
Oct. 10—Beloit at Notre Dame.
Oct. 17—Notre Dame vs. Army at New York City.
Oct. 24—Notre Dame at Minnesota.
Oct. 31—Notre Dame at Georgia Tech.
Nov. 7—Carnegie Tech at Notre Dame.
Nov. 14—Notre Dame at Penn State.
Nov. 21—Northwestern at Notre Dame.
Nov. 26 [Thanksgiving day]—Notre Dame at Nebraska.

Edgar Apperson

The Only Man

OF all the famous names of pioneer automobile days—Apperson, Haynes, Maxwell, Winton and Duryea—only Edgar Apperson remains as an executive actively engaged in the business of the company he founded.

As a result, at the Manufacturers' Dinner, a feature of the New York Automobile Show Week, he will be acclaimed as Dean of the World's Greatest Industry at fifty-seven.

The New Apperson embodies all the achievements of his 32 years of continuous manufacture. Mr. Apperson's most recent contribution is the construction of the only car in the world that has no obstructing levers in the driver's compartment. See these new models with the mechanical gear shift [not electrical] on the steering wheel and the emergency brake on the instrument board.

BOXING CARD AT MILWAUKEE IS ATTRACTIVE

When Mickey Walker, the world's welterweight champion, and Jock Malone of St. Paul meet in a ten round no decision contest in Milwaukee tomorrow night, hundreds of Chicago boxing fans will be seated around the ringside. Judging from the number who have already purchased tickets over 700 fans will make tre trip on special trains.

The ring sharps look upon the contest as one of the best arranged in the Cream city in months. They point to the records of the principals and their two previous fights to vindicate this statement. They know both are fast and clever and that there will be action in every round. They also know the mill will be held in the spacious auditorium where bouts are conducted under the rigid rules of the Badger state boxing commission.

Their Third Tangle.

It will be the third meeting of Malone and Walker. Their first clash took place at Boston about a year and a half ago and Malone won the referee's decision. They met the second time at Newark and opinion of critics at the ringside was that Walker had the edge but not a great one. Both bouts were beyond criticism, according to reports, and another great battle is expected tomorrow night.

Harry Greb, the middleweight champion, has agreed to meet the winner at a later show and Harry has agreed to weigh 163 pounds in the afternoon on the day of the contest. Bennie Leonard, the lightweight titleholder, is also anxious to meet the winner. At any rate, Promoter Frank Mulkern has two attractive opponents for the winner of tomorrow night's contest.

Malone Clever Boxer.

While Malone is not the puncher of the Walker type, he is considered clever enough to keep out of harm's way. Jock is one of the best boxers in the game and his managers expect him to pile up enough points to win the verdict handily.

Lentz Choice of Navy Eleven for 1925 Captain

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—Midshipman Augustus W. Lentz of Jersey City, N. J., left guard on the Naval academy football eleven, was elected captain for next season at a meeting of the team tonight. Playing for a short time at Rutgers before entering the Naval academy, Lentz has filled the guard position in most of the big games during his three years at Annapolis. Lentz is 6 feet 2 inches in height and weighs 218 pounds.

PITT HOCKEY TEAM WINS.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 6.—The Pittsburgh Western group hockey team made it two straight victories over Eveleth by winning tonight's game, 2 to 0.

RALPH JONES PROFESSIONAL BASKETBALL SHOE
Designed by an Expert

Here are six of the reasons why the prominent teams and players are demanding the Ralph Jones Professional Basketball Shoe.

1. A real Molded Suction Sole that grips the smoothest floor.
2. Made extra heavy under the ball of the foot, where the hard wear comes.
3. The cut is such that the foot will not slip forward and jam the toes.
4. The narrow heel will keep the heel from slipping, the cushion effect preventing callouses.
5. The sole is convex rather than rocker type, with a large contact surface, which insures secure footing.
6. Not heavy, nor is it so light that it will not give service as well as act as a cushion protecting the ankle, knee and hip joints.

Write for Booklet

Excerpts from "Basketball from a Coaching Standpoint" by Ralph Jones, which will give you valuable pointers on the game. It will be mailed to you without charge.

You should be able to secure these shoes through your usual source of supply, but if unable to do so, do not accept a substitute, but write direct to The Servus Rubber Company, Rock Island, Illinois, who will inform you where they may be obtained.

As a Christmas suggestion, there could be nothing more welcome or acceptable than a pair of Ralph Jones Professional Basketball Shoes.

RECORD MADE BY CENTENNIAL IN TRIB SHOOT

The outstanding feature of the third week of shooting in the city championship rifle tournament for a leg on THE TRIBUNE trophy was the team score put up by the old Centennial club. Breezing along to the tune of 932, they not only established a record for the association, but topped the champion Irving Park aggregation, in a tie this week with the Ridgeville and Hawthorne teams, by 48 points, and rushed into the lead by a commanding margin of 32 points.

V. A. Partz, present city champion, continued his consistent scoring with a 190, and retains the lead among the individuals by five points over C. E. Nordhus of the Ridgeville club. Three other men, Nordhus, Lively, and Huebner, turned in 190s.

Several corrections in last week's scores were made by Executive Officer Nordhus, Irving Park being reduced 11 points, Centennial 5 points, Chicago Rifle club team No. 2, 1 point, and Hamilton club's second team total increased 1 point. Standing of the teams to date follow:

	Third week.	Totals
Centennial Rifle club	932	2,784

SCRIBES HET UP OVER VALUABLE PLAYER AWARD

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 6.—A resolution adopted by the St. Louis chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America, asking President Heydler of the National league to publish the details of the balloting by which Arthur "Dazzy" Vance, Brooklyn pitcher, was voted the most valuable player of the league, was made public here today.

While no reference is made in the resolution, it is understood the local baseball writers were disappointed at Rogers Hornsby's failure to receive this year's award. This is indicated in an open letter addressed to President Heydler and published in a local afternoon paper, which requests Mr. Heydler to bring the matter before the National league meeting next week.

In the open letter attention is called to the fact that Hornsby, second baseman of the local National league team, has led his league mates in batting for the last five seasons, and that this record should have received some recognition.

In concluding the resolution, the baseball writers ask Mr. Heydler that steps be taken to "modify the rules governing the best player award, so that details of all future balloting as well as that of the recent award be made public."

Woods and Waters by Bob Becker

CREAM OF ILLINOIS SHOOTING WILL COME THIS MONTH.

With the closing of the Illinois duck season but a few weeks away the shotgun fans are counting on some wonderful shoots between now and the first of January. Only those who have hunted along the Illinois river in December know of the world of birds usually found down there during this month and how they sweep over the fields along the river in search of food It makes no difference if the ponds are frozen over. If there is food on the ground [and the clubs and farmers see that plenty of grain is scattered around] down come the mallards and bang go the guns. Last year the best day's sport [according to Bill, our duck expert friend on the Illinois river] came on Dec. 31. This year he is looking for the same kind of snappy shooting right up to the close of the season.

The greenheads are quick to learn where the wheat and corn can be found, and the boys who daily toss out many dollars' worth of this feed soon have the birds coming to their pens by the thousands. A few evenings ago we stood in one of Bill's submarine blinds near the river just to watch the hungry birds come in, and it was worth a trip to the river country to see them work into the feeding grounds. About 4 o'clock the wagon came along to discharge the sacks of shelled corn and wheat. The grain was scattered in the shallow pond. On the shore were many more bushels of corn on the cob. As the sun, a big red-gold ball, sank into the west, the birds began to appear in the sky. Soon flock after flock of mallards swung around above our heads, as they prepared to drop down to this pond for a night's feasting. We were not shooting, of course, and, standing motionless in the blind, the birds came down without fear within a few feet of us. When we walked away in the twilight, thousands of ducks were whirling round and round above the corn fields and the pond with a few slipping to the ground on every swing of the feathered circle.

Once the birds get hep to these small ponds as feeding and loafing places they are loath to leave them even when scared. The other morning Bill and I went to one of these pot holes. Walking through the corn we first spotted two pintail drakes on the bank of the pond, where lots of corn was scattered around. We flushed these pintails, along with forty or fifty mallards, without firing a shot.

But four mallards stayed behind. They didn't want to leave. Three of these jumped up when we stepped out on the edge of the pond, and bang, bang, bang went the guns. But one drake refused to go even after that shooting, and until we walked closer to him he wouldn't make a move. Yes, sir, the Illinois river country is now "mallard land," and from now until the first of the year there are going to be some great hunting days

JUNIORS AGREE NOT TO GAMBLE ON GOLF

BY JOE DAVIS.

Forty prospective champions, members of the Illinois Juniors' Golf association, last night pledged themselves to play golf according to the rules and not to gamble on their games. These pledges were made at the end of the first annual dinner and meeting held at the Fort Dearborn hotel, when President Samuel Gilbert presented each member with the insignia of the association.

Mr. Gilbert, founder of the organization, recounted its progress and told of its objects, not the least of which is encouraging the boys to play the game in the spirit of true sportsmanship.

Gilbert Reëlected Prexy.

Although at some future period the boys will elect their own officers, it was deemed advisable to continue for a time under the present management, and Sam Gilbert was unanimously elected president and treasurer.

Letters of regret, which also contained words of encouragement, were read from K. M. Landis, Charles O. Pfeil, president of the Western Golf association; A. C. Allen, treasurer, and Robert A. Gardner, president of the Chicago District Golf association.

Clary Given Cup.

Among the speakers were Chick Evans, A. T. Packard, Eugene Barry, and Charles H. Perrine, principal of Lake View High school and chairman of the principals committee. Mr. Perrine hoped the time would come when the athletic instructors would teach by the aid of golf clubs and tennis bats some of the muscular movements now used taught by the aid of wands.

Mr. Gilbert stated that a fathers and sons tournament would be staged in the spring and that an indoor tournament would be held next Saturday night at Bob MacDonald's indoor school.

The Founders' cup, which has to be won three times, was presented to Francis Clary. Pat Ennis, the runner-up, also had his name engraved on the cup.

The association has a membership of eight clubs, including Budlong Woods, Big Oaks, Evergreen, Greenview, Galewood, Harlem, Mid-City and Oak Hills.

Heavy reservations have been made for the annual dinner and meeting of the Illinois Seniors' Golf association Tuesday night at the Chicago Athletic club. While the bulk of the members are of Chicago registry, more interest is being developed throughout the state. Eventually it is hoped to enroll most of the eligible members in Illinois, and also to hold interstate tournaments. Alexander H. Revell, first president of the association, will retire and will be succeeded by Arthur S. Hook of Oak Park.

Yellow Jackets Hang Up 27 to 6 Pro Grid Win

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—Frankford Yellow Jackets moved one peg nearer the national professional championship by a resounding victory over Shenandoah, prominent Anthracite league gridiron combination, today in a battle staged on Frankford's ground. The Northeastern triumphed by the margin of 27 to 6.

Lockhaven Preps Win Title in Pennsylvania

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—Coach S. W. Wolf's Lockhaven High school football machine, after two unsuccessful attempts, finally carried off the Pennsylvania Interscholastic conference gridiron championship here today in a post-season grapple when it defeated Harrisburg Tech, 13 to 0.

Reynolds Named Captain of St. Xavier Grid Team

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 6.—George Reynolds, quarter back, was tonight chosen captain of the St. Xavier college football team for 1925. Football letters were awarded to twenty-three members of the 1924 St. Xavier college gridiron squad.

MAPLE A. A. SEXTET COPS.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 6.—The Maples A. A. hockey team of Boston tonight defeated the Boston A. A. sextet, 5 to 3, in the opening contest of the eastern division schedule of the United States Amateur Hockey association.

Cleveland's Bulldogs will have their national pro football title at stake this afternoon when they meet the Chicago Bears at the Cubs' park. By winning this battle the Bears will capture the championship, but if it winds up in a tie the Bulldogs will retain the honor. The kickoff today has been advanced to 2 o'clock.

This is the first time in many years the Bears have had a chance to capture the national crown before their own friends, and will make every effort to upset the champs.

Big Crowd Expected.

The largest crowd here in the history of pro football is expected to attend, many delegations coming from cities which have clubs in the National Grid league, like Green Bay, Cleveland, Rock Island, Toledo, Milwaukee, and Racine.

Three of the Bulldog linemen were formerly with the old Staleys—End and Coach Guy Chamberlain of Nebraska, Guard Jerry Jones of Notre Dame, and Guard R. Smith of Illinois and the Navy. Two of the Bears who play today once wore Bulldog uniforms—Half Back Kendrick of Texas A. and M., who helped Moran coach Center college two seasons, and End Mullen of Illinois.

Strong Bear Team.

The Bears will use their entire strength during the battle. Joe Sternaman of Illinois and Red Bryan of Chicago will have a crack at quarter. At halves will be Dutch Sternaman, Larry Walquist and Lanum of Illinois, and Kendrick of Texas A., and Knop of Illinois will play at full.

At ends will be Hanny of Indiana and Mullen and Halas of Illinois. Healy of Dartmouth, Blacklock of the Michigan Aggies, and Scott of Wisconsin will be at the tackles; Anderson of Notre Dame, Jim McMillen of Illinois, and Le Fleur of Marquette at guards, and Trafton of Notre Dame at center.

FAST BATTLES EXPECTED TODAY IN K. C. LEAGUE

With Calumet and Auburn Park councils furnishing the headliner, twelve games will be run off in the Knights of Columbus Basketball league on courts in the north, south, and west sections today. The Calumet-Auburn affair is creating unusual interest and rivalry between south side followers of the two quintets, which were finalists in last year's championship series.

Both fives have been strengthened with the addition of former college stars. Calumet will employ the services of Hofmeister, Purdue letter man, while Auburn Park has signed Riordan, who sported Notre Dame colors at one time.

Other games of almost equal attraction will be played on the north and west sides. The south section tilts are staged at the Eighth Regiment armory, the north side encounters at the Broadway armory, and the west section at the K. of C. community center, 4727 West Madison street. Games start at 2:15. Following is today's schedule:

South section—Dowling vs. Loyola, Hyde Park; Perez vs. Englewood; Auburn Park vs. Calumet; McHale vs. La Rabida.

North section—Marquette vs. Hennepin; De Soto vs. University; Ravenswood vs. Columbus; St. Cyr vs. Brownson.

West section—Feehan vs. Tonti; Setters vs. O'Connell; Damon vs. Hildebrandt; Carroll vs. Barry.

"Y" BASKETEERS GETTING READY FOR A BIG YEAR

Chicago Y. M. C. A. college cagers are practicing daily to get in trim for the 1924-'25 schedule. The squad of twenty-five will be cut to fifteen before the first game, Dec. 10, with American college. The new men, Varnes and Nelson of Minnesota, and Maser of Chicago are showing up as likely members of this year's team. The season's schedule is as follows:

Dec. 10—American College, here; Dec. 17, Kent Junior college, here; Dec. 19, Bradley, Peoria.

December 26 to January 10 the team will take its annual Christmas trip covering about 2,000 miles, playing in southern Canada and northeastern states.

Jan. 13, Chicago Tech., here; Jan. 16, Lake Forest, here; Jan. 21, Lewis institute, there; Jan. 27, De Paul university, here; Jan. 30, Lake Forest, there; Feb. 4, De Kalb Normal, there; Feb. 7, Carroll college, here; Feb. 13, Western Normal, Kalamazoo; Feb. 14, Grand Rapids "Y" there; Feb. 18, Lewis institute, here; Feb. 20, Carroll college, there; Feb. 25, Chicago Tech., there; Feb. 28, De Kalb Normal, here; March 6, De Paul university, there.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted by the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question $5 was awarded to Daniel L. Banfield, 708 Douglas street, Litchfield, Ill.

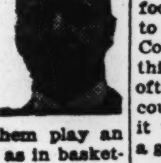
The Question.

Do you think that there should be some provision, made in football (as there is in baseball and basketball) to break tied scores?

Where Asked.

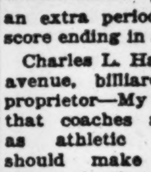
Washington and La Salle street.

The Answers.

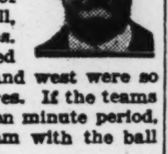


C. R. Schlegel, 356 East 57th street, public accountant—Yes, there should be a provision to overcome so many college games ending in a tie score. In my opinion, all games should start earlier than 2 o'clock, and if the game should end in a tie score, let them play an overtime game, the same as in basketball or in baseball.

Dan Le Bar, 4457 North Central Park avenue, superintendent—I have seen football games end in a tie score with the ball in play on the 3 yard line, and if the rule were the same as in baseball or basketball, the chances are that many a game would end in a victory for a team that is deserving of a victory, and for this reason I should think they could play a ten minute period to break the tie.



William H. Feigenbutz Jr., 1521 Oakdale avenue, salesman—I would suggest that the officials make some kind of a provision to overcome tie scores in football contests. If the game were played like baseball, the teams could play an extra period and thus prevent a score ending in a tie.



Charles L. Hart, 3765 North Racine avenue, billiard room proprietor—My belief is that coaches as well as athletic officials should make some change in the rules of football, as in baseball, to break all tie scores. College games played this fall in the east and west were so often ended in tie scores. If the teams could play an extra ten minute period, it would give the team with the ball a good chance to win.

Edward J. Ficther, 3740 North Leavitt street, secretary—Yes, my idea would be for the football officials in a conference to make provisions in case of a tie. They would change the time and start earlier so that they could play a little longer to break a tie score, and in the event that neither side succeeds in scoring, the referee and umpire would postpone the game to a later date.

Big Ten Cage Officials See Tryout of New Rules

Big Ten basketball officials and coaches met at Bartlett gymnasium, the University of Chicago, last night to witness a demonstration cage tilt in which the rules of the game were exemplified. Two teams from Coach Nels Norgren's gymnasium classes furnished the fire works.

SIX MARKS FALL AS ENGLEWOOD LEADS H. S. SWIM

In a session of furious paddling in the Harrison Tech tank yesterday, during which six city high school swim records were bettered, Englewood's well balanced team led the list of qualifiers for the finals of the tenth annual indoor swimming meet of the Chicago schools. In the junior division Senn placed one or more men in every event and practically clinched the title.

Although the times made in the six record shattering events do not stand officially, the work of the leading performers augurs well for the establishing of several new marks in the finals which will be held in Bartlett gym Saturday.

Breaks Plunge Record.

The opening event saw the first mark fall when Hoey of Tilden sent his huge bulk plunging through the water to the opposite end of the tank in 29 1-5, more than 6 seconds faster than the old record set by Sankstone of Senn. The second event brought a repetition of the first, Walker of Englewood completing the 40 yard swim in :19 4-5, and sinking a record which has stood since 1918.

In the lifesaving events, a yearly feature of the swim, the old marks in the 20 yard cross shoulder carry and the 20 yard head carry fell to Rabens of Senn and Peterson of Lindblom, respectively. The speedy Oker, star of the Parker squad, clipped an even second from the back stroke mark, and Peterson of Lindblom lowered the record in the 100 yard breast stroke.

Relay Mark Goes.

Two marks were bettered in the junior events, Sekera of Harrison finishing the 20 yard cross shoulder carry in :20, and the Senn relay squad clipping 3 seconds from the old record.

The powerful Englewood squad, which took first honors in the annual prep school swim in the I. A. C. pool last week, again gave proof of its prowess. The purple swimmers walked away with the relay and qualified ten men for the finals, thus giving the dopesters ample reason for believing that the team will have another title hanging from its belt next Saturday night. THIRY TO REFEREE TALABER-POPE TITLE MAT BOUT

With the selection of Emil Thiry as referee for all matches, arrangements for the 202d coast artillery's all-star middleweight wrestling program at Broadway armory tomorrow night was completed yesterday.

Lou Talaber, champion, who will defend his title against Eddie Pope, the southern champ, in a finish match, two out of three falls, agreed to Thiry as referee after Charles Lavine, his first choice, made it known that duties elsewhere would prevent him from acting. Pope readily agreed upon Thiry, and the arrangements were completed.

The first match will start promptly at 8:15 tomorrow night, Col. Charles J. Kraft, commander, and Capt. B. Peshmalyan, athletic officer, announced. The Talaber-Pope clash will start promptly at 10 p. m. The doors will be opened at 6:30.

RAIN MAY STOP AUTO TITLE RACE SET FOR TODAY

Culver City, Cal., Dec. 6.—Final practice for tomorrow's 250 mile championship automobile race, postponed from Thanksgiving day, was held today. However, prospects for another postponement loomed as rain started falling last night, with the prediction that it would continued over Sunday.

Announcements of the fracture of speed records which have been emanating daily from the pine bowl since practice started were still forthcoming yesterday. This time the word was passed that Bennett Hill, who several weeks ago established a practice record of 128 miles an hour at the new Charlotte, N. C., track, had turned the mile and a quarter Culver City tureen in 34 seconds, an average of 132.3 miles per hour.

A. A. U. PUTS O. K. ON IOWA PREP HURDLE RECORD

Iowa City, Ia., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—Official word from the American Amateur Athletic union received here says that the low hurdle mark set by Frank J. [Bab] Cuhel here last spring has been recognized as a national scholastic mark. Cuhel covered the 220 yards in :24 3-10, bettering the mark that had not been beaten since Corey of Chicago ran the distance in :24 4-10 in 1913. On the same day he sprinted over hurdles in :15 6-10, a mark that was then lower than the world mark, but which has since been bettered.

LEWIS DEFENDS TITLE AGAINST ROMANO DEC. 16

When Ed "Strangler" Lewis, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, defends his title against Mike Romano, the Italian title holder, at the Coliseum on Dec. 16, a battle of head locks will result. Both are considered the most efficient in applying the torturous hold and neither will overlook any opportunities to use it.

Although it will be the fourth meeting of the pair, the Italian has shown to better advantage on each successive occasion. In fact, Billy Sandow, manager of Lewis, asserted last week in Chicago that Romano is the most dangerous of the contenders. Billy claims Romano knows how to apply the head lock more effectively than most wrestlers, and he has the hip check down to perfection.

Lewis has defeated the Italian in their three meetings, but in some cases the falls went nearly two hours. In their last meeting Lewis won two of three falls. In the deciding fall the champion could hardly stand when he put on the final hold and Romano had to be assisted from the ring. Both were completely exhausted from their efforts, but Lewis had just a little too much stamina.

Lincoln Park Heads Plan Series of Skate Tourneys

Dates and plans for the ice skating tournament to be conducted by the Lincoln park commissioners have just been announced by Harry Klatzco, superintendent of the park. The skating program is to be the first of a series of events during the winter.

Open meets for boys and girls residing in the district north of the Chicago river and east of its north branch will be held Jan. 10. Three districts have been created: District 1, north of Chicago river, south of Center street, district 2 north of Center street and south of Irving Park boulevard, and district 3 north of the boulevard and south of Howard avenue. Meets for the first district will be held at Lake Shore park, Chicago avenue and the lake; district 2 meets at Hamlin park, Hoyne and Barry avenues, and district 3 meets at Welles park, Montrose and Lincoln avenue.

Events will include races of various distances for both boys and girls, for various age groups. Winners of first, second, and third places will be eligible to compete in the championship meet Jan. 17, which will be staged on north pond in Lincoln park. Awards of gold, silver and bronze buttons will be made to district winners and gold, silver and bronze championship medals will be given winners of the championship events.

All amateur skaters residing in the district designated will be eligible for the races. Entries close Jan. 1 with the department of playgrounds, the commissioners of Lincoln Park, Clark and Center streets. Entry blanks may be obtained at the Lincoln park office or any of the small parks offices, according to W. C. Pearson, chairman of athletics.

Small parks skating championships also are planned for six parks. Chase, Welles, Hamlin, Stanton, Seward, and Lake Shore parks will conduct tournaments for boys and girls, and the best three skaters in each class will be selected. Entries close Jan. 14 at the Lincoln park office. Award of a team trophy to the park winning the most points, will be made in addition to the individual championship medals

HENRY TAKES TOP SCORE IN PARK SHOOT

The 50 target regular Saturday shoot at the Lincoln park traps at 16 yards yesterday was won by H. B. Henry with a score of 48 out of the possible 50. F. Carter, F. Swift Jr., S. Letts, H. O. Brotherton, and A. Cunningham, each scoring a 45, tied for second honors in the event. The doubles shoot, 50 targets at 16 yards, was won by H. M. Rowley, who had a high score of 41.

This morning at 11 o'clock the Lincoln park traps rifle squad will meet the Milwaukee Gun club in a team match at Lincoln park.

Boxer Dies Following Knockout Heart Blow

Lewiston, Me., Dec. 6. — Alfred "Young" Tanguay, 19 year old bantamweight boxer, died today at a hospital here as the result of hemorrhages which followed a bout in Portland a few weeks ago. Tanguay was knocked out in the bout by a blow over the heart.

Only $130 more than an open car

this luxurious four-door
Marmon Sedan

See The New MARMON

"It's a Great Automobile!"

New policies, new strength and a new plan have produced a New MARMON. The famous MARMON chassis has not been altered in any fundamental way. The great-hearted MARMON engine retains all of its fundamental qualities. But to both chassis and engine have been added refinements and improvements which add even new luster to the MARMON name. With these attainments have been combined the supreme efforts of America's master body builders.

Added to these achievements, great in themselves, MARMON has set a new precedent in values. The New MARMON Sedan, selling for only $130 more than an open car, is the lowest priced of all fine closed cars.

Do not judge this car by its price. It is not to be confused with the justly popular "coacn" types. It is luxurious in every detail. It is rigidly built. It seats five passengers. It has four wide doors—deep, comfortable seats and generous leg room.

If asked to estimate the price of the New MARMON Sedan you would undoubtedly say, "around four or five thousand dollars." That is the natural impression. Judged from any angle, it has the air of a custom-built car of the most costly type. Yet it sells for only $130 more than an open car.

See the New MARMON Sedan, compare it with other makes, and share in the great public discovery that here at last is supreme quality at moderate cost.

New Marmon Sedan and New Marmon Four-Door Brougham Coupe, $3295—New Marmon Open Cars, $3165. New Marmon De Luxe Closed Models, $3455 to $3975. All prices f. o. b. Indianapolis. Tax extra.

County Leaders Look for Way Out of Highway Tangle

Must Abandon Widening Program or Finance Chicago System.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

Cook county people own and operate approximately 350,000 automobiles.

To run all of these cars at one time tax payers require exactly 875 miles of 18 foot highway pavements, each car being allowed twenty-five feet of space in two steadily moving lines of traffic.

Today exactly 351 miles of eighteen foot paved roads exist in Cook county.

Chicago owned cars—about 90 per cent of the county registration—are expeced to leave and return to the city by but seven highway entrances, eighteen feet wide.

All county road funds are exhausted. Building the 351 mile system depleted $8,000,000 derived from three county bond issues and about $2,000,000 paid by the state of Illinois.

The state has promised to build only 215 miles of new roads in Cook county from bond issue funds, which will swallow all vehicle license fees for approximately thirty years to come. About 30 per cent of the entire state bond issue is paid by Cook county car owners.

But seven new entrances to Chicago will be added, even if all mileage of the new state roads are built.

The $100,000,000 state bond issue, as it stands, will neither widen the terminal highways nor relieve congestion where they enter Cook county and Chicago.

SOME ONE with a better imagination than Cook county commissioners, experts of the crack county highway department, and Chicago transportation authorities is needed to solve Chicago's transportation future from the above facts.

Two weeks' devling into every angle of the highway money supply and state road building plans by all of these agencies has brought them to the ultimate impasse in county highway affairs. Yesterday they reached the conclusion that the county has but two paths to follow—abandon all plans for further improvement and the necessary widening of its terminal trunk lines or arrange at once to finance its own ten year program entirely apart from the state's building plans.

Reports and data so far available from the joint transportation survey made by the county and the United States bureau of public roads last summer and fall show that immediate widening of the main roads to forty feet and construction of new transport gateways is vital to both present and future economic success in Chicago, according to Maj. G. A. Quinlan, county superintendent of highways.

"This data will soon be completely available," he declared in answer to inquiries about specific roads. "It simply backs up the belief of every thinking motorist in the county that our road system must be redesignated right now if it is to be any good to us at all. The survey will show in infinite detail the exact points where congestion is ruining the efficiency of our roads, what the congestion includes, where it comes from, where it goes and why; but we don't need all this detail to prove that the county's transportation system is less than half what it should be.

"The fact that only about 40 per cent of the automobiles bought and paid for by people in Cook county can possibly use our roads during the same hour pictures the situation as it stands today. When we consider that these same roads are real terminal bases of a state highway system valued at more than $160,000,000 and are in constant use by people from every other county in the state as well as our own people, we are certainly justified in viewing with alarm! We need more roads and wider roads and need them now. There is no promise of adequate relief from the state of Illinois or other sources. Chicago and the county must meet the situation alone."

Careful estimates following a study of state bond issue road construction maps show that only forty-four miles of roads can be built by state contracts next season in the Chicago zone. These are roads designated under the old $60,000,000 bond issue and, under the law, they must be completed with the $100,000,000 funds before any work is done on the new bond issue system. This mileage, in immediate prospect, includes the following:

Paving of route 46, which follows the La Grange, Mannheim, and 79th street roads, total 23.85 miles; two miles of Franklin avenue; 1.10 miles of route 19, the Northwest highway; 6.4 miles of route 22 in 14th street, Chicago Heights, and the Dyer-Glenwood road; 7.60 miles on route 4, the Joliet road southwest of Lyons; and 3.40 on route 42, Sheridan road.

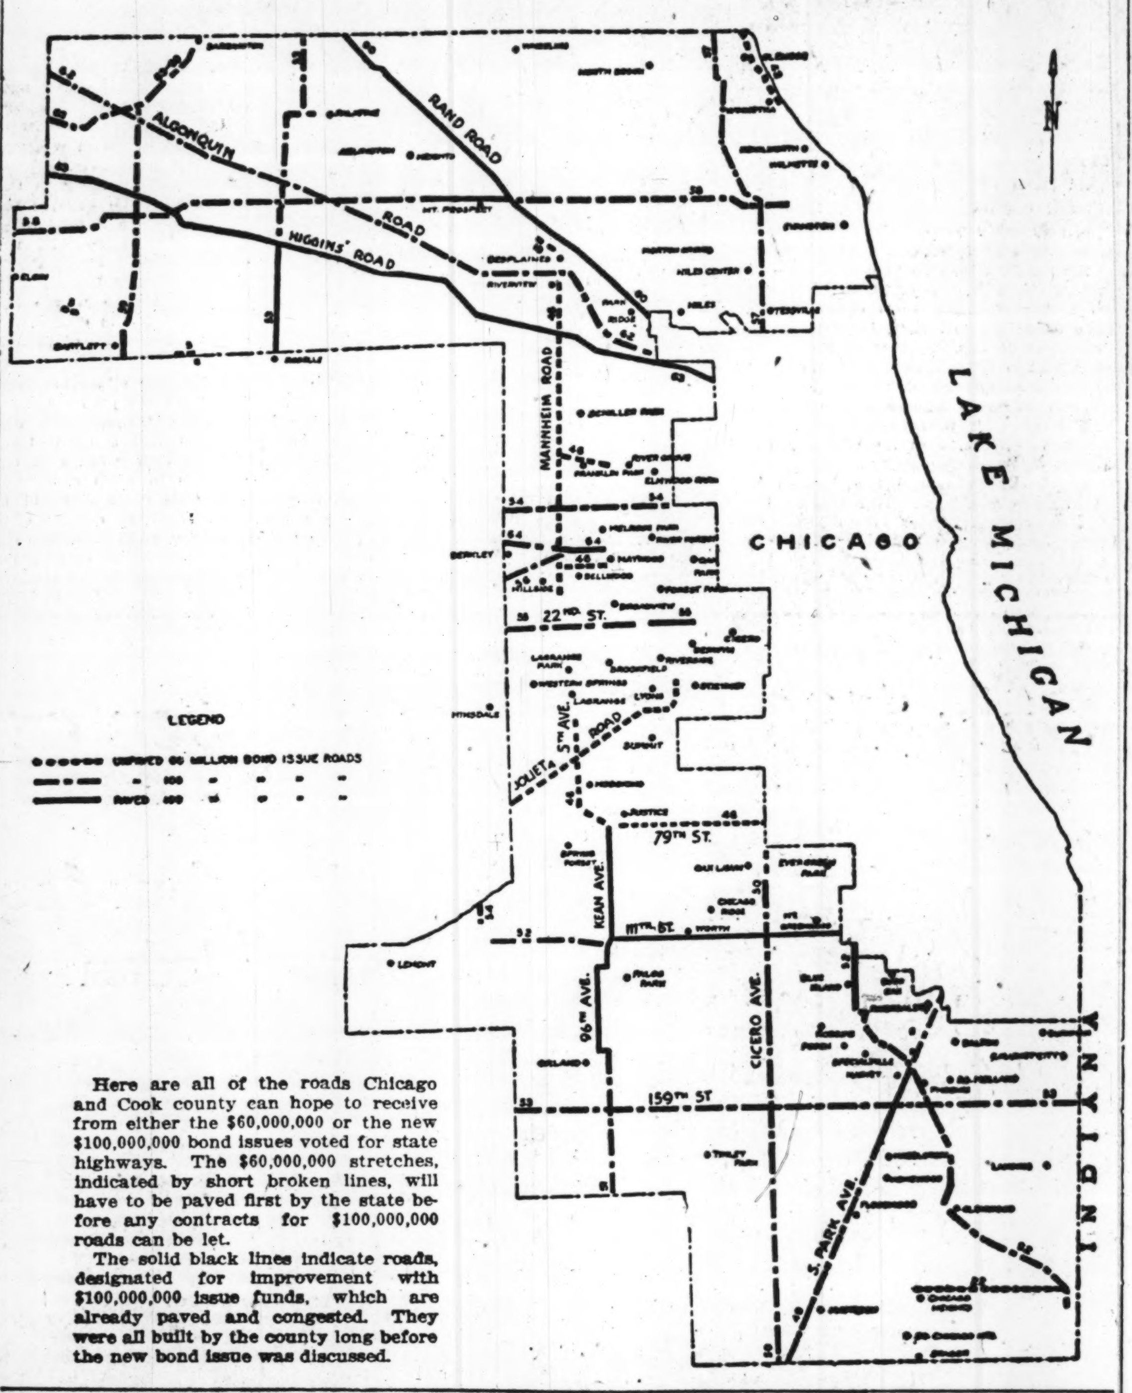
But one of these state improvements, that on 79th street, is considered of real traffic value, and no widening is planned.

Under the $100,000,000 bond issue the county is promised a total of 243.70 miles of roads. Of this total, 72.15 miles are already paved and congested, leaving 171.55 miles of new pavements as shown on the accompanying map. Four of these promised roads, South Park avenue, Cicero avenue, Kean avenue, and 22d street, are considered important in the county traffic scheme. The others are considered secondary highways emptying their loads into existing main roads.

Better Each Year.

The Lincoln highway, extending from New York to California, is 3,142 miles long. Among the different types of roads on the highway are: Concrete, 505.1 miles; brick, 110.9; macadam, 450.3; graded gravel, 1,334; natural gravel, 187.5; graded earth, 387.3; natural earth, 74.6; paved city streets, 220.5.

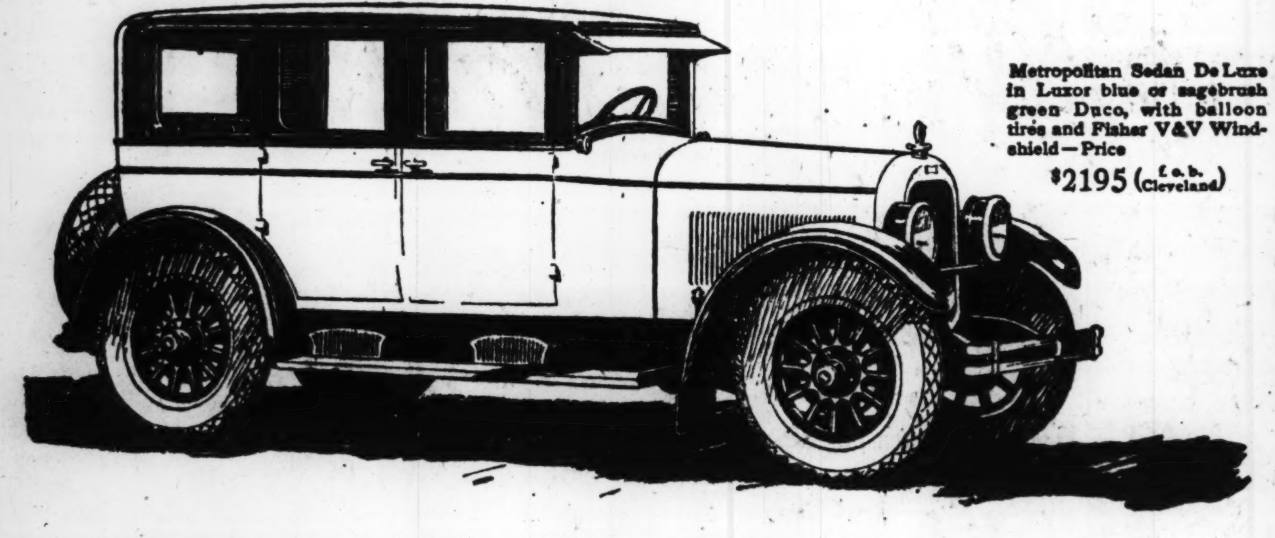
COOK COUNTY'S SHARE IN $160,000,000



Here are all of the roads Chicago and Cook county can hope to receive from either the $60,000,000 or the new $100,000,000 bond issues voted for state highways. The $60,000,000 stretches, indicated by short broken lines, will have to be paved first by the state before any contracts for $100,000,000 roads can be let.

The solid black lines indicate roads, designated for improvement with $100,000,000 issue funds, which are already paved and congested. They were all built by the county long before the new bond issue was discussed.

Here Beauty and Performance Meet



Metropolitan Sedan De Luxe in Luxor blue or sagebrush green Duco, with balloon tires and Fisher V&V Windshield—Price

$2195 (f. o. b. Cleveland)

NOTHING could be more logical than the preference women are showing for this newest Chandler.

Its body, by Fisher, is characterized by an aristocratic beauty and a minute perfection of detail that satisfies the subtlest feminine demand for luxurious surroundings.

And in its performance, they discover those qualities that all women instinctively expect in their personal car:

Unfailing dependability, flawless smoothness, and a wealth of power such as the famous Pikes Peak Motor alone can provide—

Easy steering—sure brakes—

And the simplified, noiseless, unfailing gear changing made possible by the Traffic Transmission—an exclusive Chandler feature.

It is no exaggeration to say that the woman who drives this newest Chandler sedan gains an entirely new idea of motoring satisfaction.

(The Traffic Transmission is built complete in the Chandler plant under Campbell patents)

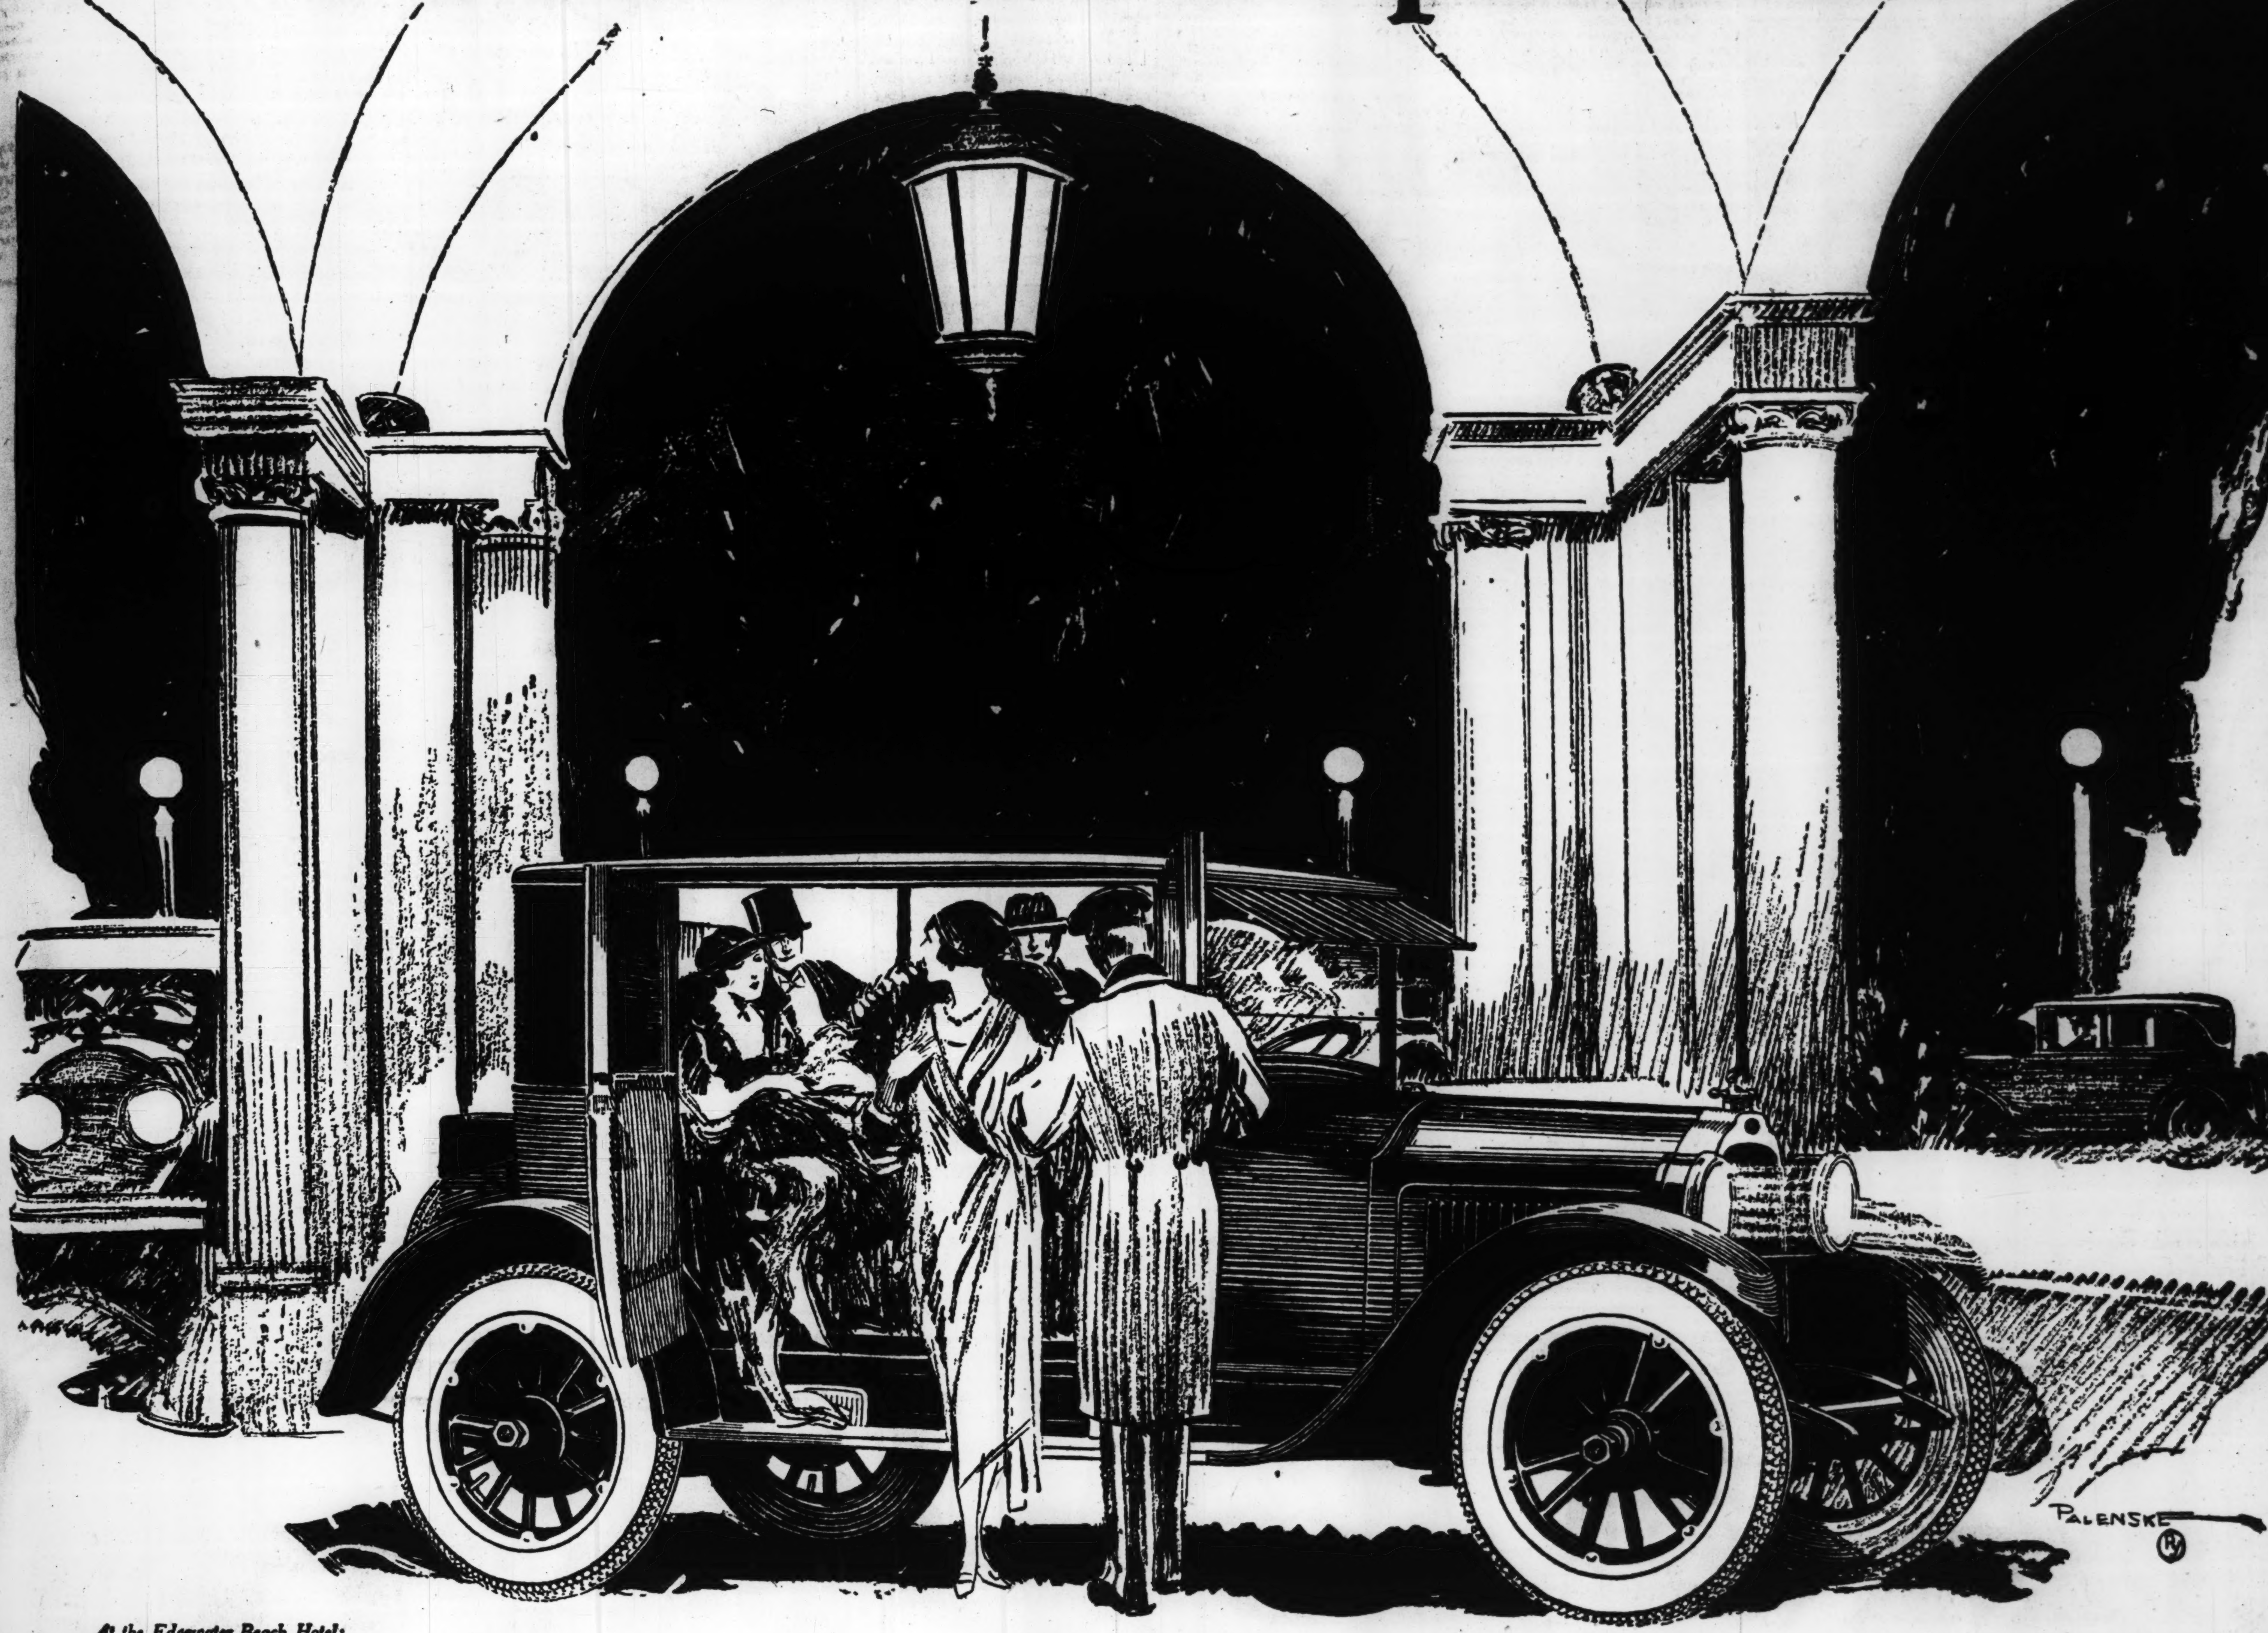
A KNIGHT for pleasure



At the Edgewater Beach Hotel; at all the big Chicago hotels; at every favored rendezvous for dinners, dancing and social affairs, many of the smartest guests arrive in Willys-Knights—hence arrive in style.

WHEN discriminating Chicagoans—in social and business life—take to a car the way they are taking to the Willys-Knight Coupe-Sedan, it speaks very highly of the car's beauty, luxury and value.

In the first place, the Willys-Knight is a very convenient car. Doors both front and rear eliminate crawling and stumbling over tilted seats or the feet of other passengers. This ease of entrance and exit appeals very strongly to folks who are heartily tired of driving and riding around in cars lacking comfort.

AND WHEN a motor car of the Willys-Knight Coupe-Sedan's distinction also offers owners the only type of engine that actually improves with use—an engine that grows even quieter, smoother and more powerful after thousands of miles of driving—it naturally attracts people who are weary of automobile engines that grow noisier and noisier.

AND WHEN you realize that the Willys-Knight sleeve-valve engine never needs valve-grinding—and never chokes up with carbon no matter what grade of gasoline is used—you can well understand why the average Willys-Knight owner would never again own anything but a Willys-Knight.

AND WHEN you further realize that the new Willys-Knight is the only car in the United States that is equipped with the famous Lanchester Balancer—a new invention that gives Willys-Knight complete freedom from the engine vibration so common in many cars—you can easily appreciate the exceptional pleasure of riding in a Willys-Knight.

AND WHEN you discover, as others discover, that Willys-Knight owners keep the same Willys-Knights two and three times as long as most cars are kept—and that many Willys-Knight owners report 50,000 miles and more without spending a dime for engine repairs—perhaps you will decide, as others are deciding, to get acquainted with the Willys-Knight.

See this Willys-Knight Coupe-Sedan at the nearest dealer's showroom. And after you have had a good look, take a good ride. Know the car and you'll know why it's popular.

European Motors Lose Glamour in Yankee Comparison

Erskine Makes Analysis After Viewing Shows Overseas.

FOR some years it has been the fashion among American motorists to speak of the "European car" as some sort of super-product embodying attributes and graces far above those built into the vast production stamped "U. S. A."

American manufacturers have taken little official note of this popular misconception. Comparative sales figures have been considered sufficient proof for them of Yankee supremacy. Now for the first time one of the leading American manufacturers, A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker corporation, has drawn a specific comparison between the great mass of American and European automobiles. Here are his views, in part, following his careful study of all the overseas products at the recent Paris and London automobile shows:

"With the exception of two or three manufacturers in both France and England, all producers of motor cars are assemblers who purchase their bodies and parts from different makers of such things; and, consequently, there are a host of such makers competing for this business. The ownership and operation of foundries, forge shops, stamping plants, and body factories by car producers is quite limited.

"Numerous manufacturers sell more chasses than they do complete cars, and retail buyers of chasses purchase their bodies from the body makers direct. Then again, the Paris and London shows contain many cars of foreign make, whereas our New York and Chicago shows house only cars produced in the United States.

"The number of body, motorcycle, bicycle, and parts and accessory manufacturers in the United States is much smaller than in either France or England, and of these only parts and accessory manufacturers are permitted to exhibit at our national shows. Our motor car companies are, furthermore real manufacturers to a greater degree than in any other country.

"Another marked difference between the automobile industry in Europe and America is in the size of cars produced.

"Perhaps three-fourths of all European makers produce small cars. Many of these cars are of short wheelbase and of treads as narrow as 46 inches against the American standard of 56 inches. Small tires and low road clearance are common, as are open cars seating two and three people, with quite flimsy tops.

"Small bore motors with high compression, under speeds of from 3,000 to 4,000 r. p. m., prevail. Owners are accustomed to climbing hills in second gear which American cars breeze over on high.

"Andre Citroen, the Ford of France, has five plants in Paris which are now producing 300 cars per day and are being enlarged to produce 500 per day. He is producing over half the cars sold in France. His product consists of a five horse power car, the three seater of which sells for 11,800 francs, and a ten horse power priced at 16,500 francs. He will sell perhaps 50,000 cars this year. Renault ranks next with an output of about 35,000. The total French output will approximate 100,000 cars.

"Morris-Cowley is the Ford of England. His small car, 11.9 H. P., four seater, sells for £195, and his 14 H. P. for £285. This concern is probably producing one-half of the cars made in England. Numerous other concerns in France, England, Belgium, Italy, and Germany are producing small cars.

"America produces nothing comparable to these European small cars, as the reasons which compelled European manufacturers to make them do not exist in America.

"Europe was forced to build them because of the basis of taxation, which generally is a high tax on horse power. The French tax is 36 francs per horse power on cars of 10 horse power and less, 44 francs per horse power for those from 10 to 20 horse power, and 52 francs per horse power for those above 20 horse power. The Belgian tax is 30 francs per horse power and the English £1 per horse power flat. France has also a 10 per cent luxury tax on the retail price. These taxes compare with something like 25 cents per horse power in the United States.

"The mathematical formula used by practically all countries to determine horse power rating is admitted by all engineers to be grossly inaccurate, and yet the governments use it as a tax basis. Without attempting to describe the formula, it can be said that the actual horse power of an engine can be determined only by test and cannot be arrived at by formula because it involves not only bore, stroke, and speed, but the additional factors of compression ratio, valve size, valve lift, timing, weight of reciprocating parts, and the nature of ignition; also manifold design, density of gas, and frictional resistance.

"Citroen advertises 20 horse power as the effective power of his 5 horse power car. Morris-Crowley advertises 30 horse power as the effective power of his 11.9 horse power car.

"They actually get the higher power from these small engines by running them fast under high compression, but buyers pay tax on the formula rating. American cars, like the Ford, Chevrolet, and Overland, have much bigger, slow speed, normal compression motors, whose buyers must pay much higher taxes. Consequently the European small cars have a big advantage.

"Large European cars with slow speed, normal compression motors, comparable to American made motors, come within the luxury class, and buyers pay about the same taxes as American cars of the same kind carry.

"These American cars are marketable in Europe in competition with the local product, while our small cars which appeal to buyers of limited means suffer by comparison. All European countries except England have a tariff on motor cars, which is 45 per cent in France and Italy, and American manufacturers have this disadvantage. Gasoline is from 50 per cent to 100 per cent higher in Europe than it is in our country."

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

TEN striking new models, all on the standard Marmon chassis, but refined and improved beyond anything turned out by the company in the past, make up the automobile row attraction offered this week by the Smith Sauer company, 2436 Michigan avenue, Marmon distributor. The new models are the result of the big plant reorganization and development which has come since the appointment of G. M. Williams as president of the Nordyke and Marmon company last May.

Hudson, persevering in its pioneer activities, last week definitely established coach prices as less than those for open cars. J. R. Histed, general manager of the Hudson Motor company of Illinois, sees in this move proof of the prediction that inclosed automobiles are to be the standard style of the future.

L. B. Southerland, general manager of the Chicago branch of the Cadillac company and a leader in the affairs of the Chicago Automobile Trade association, has resigned the managership of Cadillac, according to announcement made yesterday. He has not revealed his plans for the future, but it is understood that he expects to continue in the automobile merchandising field and will engage in business for himself in Chicago.

How Chrysler Sweeps All Tradition Aside

No one need fear that he will not be rewarded who gives to the world something distinctively superior to that which has preceded it. And nowhere is recognition so swift and reward so munificent as in America. Chrysler Six came into a seemingly crowded motor car market and almost immediately swept its way into unprecedented acceptance as a quality product. That which ordinarily takes years to achieve was won almost over-night. Why? Because the Chrysler brushed aside outworn traditions in engineering, in design, and in performance, and gave to the world advantages it could instantly see and feel and experience. It squarely confronted problems of height and weight and size, solving them according to the crying needs of the moment rather than the needs of five years ago. It brought to bear both scientific exactness and artistry—endeavoring to embody in the new car elements of grace and elegance no one else had attained. That is why the Chrysler has taken the country by storm—why it still stands and will long stand alone—why if you want what the Chrysler gives, the Chrysler alone can satisfy you.

The Touring Car, $1395; The Phaeton, $1495; The Roadster, $1625; The Sedan, $1825; The Brougham, $1965; The Imperial, $2065; The Crown-Imperial, $2195; The Royal Coupe, $1895. All prices f.o.b. Detroit subject to current government tax.

Complete Equipment

Including spare tire and cover, front bumper, disc wheels, automatic windshield wiper, motometer and bar cap, cowl lights, rear vision mirror, heater, dome light, gasoline gauge on the dash, kick plates, combination stop and tail light.

AUBURN LEADS AGAIN!

On the heels of our announcement of the lowest priced 8-In-Line on the American market we announce a smashing value in our Six Sedan.

Not a close-coupled body to cramp your knees—Nor a two door car that compels the driver to stand in the snow while the rear seat passengers get in or out—

Not a motor car roughly upholstered in denim—

Not a closed body that offers nothing but protection from the elements and makes you wonder when it will fall apart—

Not a body with windows of ordinary window glass—

But a real six cylinder, four door Sedan built for appearance as well as protection—

Genuine plate glass windows—

Plenty of leg room for any six footer—

Upholstered in wool broadcloth your wife will not be ashamed of—

Equipped with every item necessary for comfort and convenience, inside and out.

To see what a real value this is, inspect it at your local dealer's—Ride in it and drive it—You will not be asked to buy!

These cars are in production now. Your order placed soon will insure prompt delivery which will probably not be possible later.

The reason? Simply this—Presto-Up Garages have exclusive patented features which they alone possess. Guaranteed no-sag doors, painted both sides. Patented roof trusses make strongest roof—will hold any snow load; 15 year guaranteed roofing. Extra heavy wall plates—strictly No. 1 grade framing lumber. Patented extra heavy corner post construction. Matched and beaded roof sheathing. Clear Oregon fir siding. All sections interchangeable; made with waterproof window sills. Yale locks—patented door stays—strongest hardware. Numerous other important features which you should see and examine before you buy.

A "Presto-Up" Is Complete

Your Presto-Up is complete when it reaches your lot—painted and ready to erect and occupy in a day. Best of all, you know just how your Presto-Up Garage will look on your lot before you pay for it. There's a Presto-Up to match your home—twelve different models in over fifty sizes to choose from. If you can't come to our plant—write for Catalogs.

FARM AND GARDEN

World's Purest Rye Is Grown on Manitou Island

Developed from Kernels Brought Over by Russian 16 Years Ago.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

THE lone lighthouse on Manitou island in Lake Michigan will soon become as famous among farmers as the famed tower on the Pharos peninsula is among seamen sailing toward Alexandria bay. Manitou island's lighthouse was not built by a king, but it has figuratively, if not actually, become strangely a beacon to grain growers in all parts of America where rye is raised.

On south Manitou island, which is located near the north end of Lake Michigan about twenty miles out from Traverse City, Mich., a small group of farmers is producing the purest and probably the most superior variety of rye in the world. George and Lewis Hutzler, leading Rosen rye growers on the island, proved it by winning first in competition with more than a hundred of the country's champion rye growers at the International Grain and Hay show which closed here yesterday.

How It Began.

It took an isolated island like Manitou to make possible the breeding, development, and maintenance of a pure strain of Rosen rye. On this treasure island is to be found the story of perhaps one of the most unique achievements of plant breeders.

It all began when J. A. Rosen, a Russian student from Riga, brought over about 2,000 kernels of rye to the Michigan Agricultural college in 1908. The rye was named for him.

F. A. Spragg, a plant breeder at the college, recognizing the superior quality of the Russian rye, planted the 2,000 kernels in a small plot on the college farm. He continued to save the grain from each season's harvest, and planted it year after year. In 1912 the first bushel of seed was given to C. C. Horton, near Parma, Mich., where it was put to test under practical farm conditions.

Necessity for Isolation.

ROSEN RYE RAISER

IN A GRAIN FIELD ON SOUTH MANITOU ISLAND.—George Hutzler is shown here cutting rye in the field where the 1924 international grain and hay show prize winning sample of Rosen rye was grown. Experimental plots where the world's purest rye is produced are on this farm. The island is in Lake Michigan, twenty miles from Traverse City, Mich.

It was soon recognized that since rye is an open pollenated plant—easily mixed with other varieties grown in fields where there is chance for an interchange of pollen carried by the wind—it would be necessary to grow Rosen rye on isolated ground, if it was to be kept pure.

South Manitou island, containing 12,000 acres of land twelve miles out in the lake from the mainland, was decided upon as the most ideal place. In 1919 the crop experts from the college took six bushels of the Russian rye out to the island.

Ten farmers own all of the 1,000 acres under cultivation on the island, which is twelve miles out from Glen Haven. Over this stretch of water there is no danger that the rye will be mixed with other varieties grown on the mainland. All of the crop, including every grain of "contaminated" varieties, was gathered up and taken off the island before any of the new rye was planted. The six bushels of Rosen rye were distributed among the island farmers, who have grown it for the last six years under the supervision of the Michigan Crop Improvement association. Most of the islanders are growing rye, including the Hutzlers, who have been leaders from the beginning, Irwin Beck, Mrs. Ben Johnson, Alfred Hayes, Lewis Foster, and Capt. Anderson. The captain finds time to take care of his field of from ten to fifteen acres of rye each year and make his daily boat trips between the island and Traverse City.

Island's Average High.

The island farmers grow about fifty acres of the Rosen rye each year, producing an average crop of twenty-five bushels to the acre and as high as forty bushels to the acre, in some cases. The yearly production of the high grade grain is about 1,250 bushels. The average in Michigan is only fourteen bushels to the acre, so the island's average is exceptionally high, and forty bushels per acre is an unusual yield.

R. C. Rather, secretary of the crop association, says all the rye produced by Manitou farmers is sold for seed to mainland growers at a premium price of 75 cents a bushel above current commercial rye market prices. This year, for example, when the commercial price was about 90 cents, the island growers got $1.60 a bushel.

There is a demand for more seed rye than is grown on the island, and to help meet this situation practically all of the 1,250 bushels are used by mainland farmers in growing certified seed. The rye must be grown on Michigan farms, where it has little chance of being crossed with other varieties. Inspectors keep a constant guard over the fields, and if at the end of the season the rye passes the state crop association's requirements it can be certified and sold for seed. Mainland growers get a premium price of from 25 to 40 cents a bushel above the market price for certified rye.

Mr. Rather says that as a result of this project on South Manitou island, today more than 90 per cent of all the 400,000 acres of rye grown in Michigan is from the original stock of Rosen rye. However, it is varying in degree of purity. It was this superior grade of rye, producing fair yields even on thin land, that made it possible for Michigan farmers to produce more than 900,000 acres during the war.

Give the Breeders Credit, Too, Says Champ Calf Owner

ABERDEEN-ANGUS cattle breeders in Illinois and Iowa will be given their just share of the honors that went to the fifteen black baby beeves, winners of the International grand champion carload of fat cattle award, if Ed P. Hall, the owner, has his way about it.

Ed Hall is often referred to as the steer mechanic of Mechanicsburg, Ill. In winning the highest place offered in the fat cattle division of the International Live Stock exposition, which closed yesterday, Mr. Hall has a total of six grand championships to his credit. He won the grand champion award on yearling Angus in the fat cattle car lot division of the show in 1910, 1912, 1916, 1917, 1920, and 1924.

He Buys Carefully.

The fifteen cattle that made up the winning carload this year were the topnotchers picked from 200 pure-breds and high grade cross-breds assembled on Mr. Hall's 1,100 acre farm fifteen miles east of Springfield, Ill. About one-third of the winners were raised by Illinois breeders and two-thirds by Iowa breeders.

The calves were bought at weaning time, last September and October a year ago. They are now from 18 to 20 months old.

Calves that are good enough to be put in the contest for the grand championship are rare, apparently. Comparatively few of the winners came from the sixty-five breeding Angus cows kept on the Hall farm. Most of them came from calves bought by Mr. Hall in various parts of Illinois and Iowa. He sometimes looks at 100 calves before finding one that is suitable to be put in the herd with prospective grand champions. The calves are sometimes trucked fifty miles in assembling them for shipment to Mechanicsburg.

Put in Dry Lot.

As soon as they reach the Hall farm they are put in a dry lot for two weeks to be weaned. They are fed clover or alfalfa hay and started on a light feed of shelled corn and oats. At the end of two weeks they are turned on a hillside blue grass pasture where they are kept all winter and the following summer, and gradually worked up to full feed of oats and corn.

The grain mixture is made up of one-third oats and two-thirds corn and is measured and fed in boxes until the animals are on full feed and it is safe for them to eat from a self-feeder. Oil meal and molasses feed is given along with the corn and oats during the winter. In the spring the oats and molasses feed is discontinued. The oil meal is fed winter and summer.

At the end of summer, along in September, the calves are put back in a dry lot, and then the sorting process begins, being finally boiled down to the carload that is sent to the International. Special care is given the calves until show time. Corn is the basic ration all the time. After they are put back in the dry lot molasses feed is started again, and cooked barley is fed daily during the last six weeks, except the week before the show. The cooked barley is fed late in the day, after the calves have had all of the other feeds they can eat. It is fed hot, and the calves come out of their beds to get it.

During the last week dry, ground barley is substituted for the cooked barley. Mr. Hall says he learned about the value of cooked barley in the fitting of show cattle while judging in Canadian live stock expositions.

Gives Credit to Breeders.

"I think this is the best carload of fat cattle that has ever been exhibited at the International," said Mr. Hall. "It would be almost impossible for me to assemble such a carload of baby beeves without the close coöperation of the various breeders in Iowa and Illinois, who have sold me calves for many years. All of us learn lessons by exhibiting year after year, and naturally we are able to improve our cattle through breeding operations, trying to conform more closely each year to the standards set up by judges at the International exposition."

Mr. Hall has shown cattle ever since the show began, except the first exposition in 1901. He attended the first show.

"That's where I got my inspiration to get into this game of exhibiting cattle," he said.

He has shown Angus cattle all but twice, when he exhibited Herefords, and won first prize in his district each time.

Read His Record.

Mr. Hall is not only the winner of six grand championships on fat carloads of cattle, but he won the championship for having the best 2 year olds.

His record price on a grand champion carload is $42.50 a hundred. This time he received $39.

In 1919 he won the grand champion steer herd award at the show, two champion single steer prizes, and the reserve grand champion single steer.

That is when he decided to quit exhibiting for a while. He sold Iowa State college three steers in 1913, and the following year each of them won first in their classes. The college bought one of his show steers in 1904 and won the grand championship beef animal honor at the International the next fall.

Mr. Hall was also a heavy winner at the Illinois state fair this summer, winning the championships in the pure bred and grade or cross bred Aberdeen Angus classes.

Buys Most of Feed.

More than 500 head of cattle are fattened on the Hall farm each year. There are 235 head on feed at the present time. Mr. Hall raises only 260 acres of grain and has to buy much of his feed. He has been able to make fair profit within the last year in feeding young cattle but has actually lost on heavy beef animals. Others have had the same experience. Both young and older steers are fed by Mr. Hall.

"I find that the older steers clean up the roughage better on my farm," he explained. "Calves have their heads in the feed boxes about thirteen months before they are ready for market."

W. W. SHAW JR.

IOWA and Missouri still are the outstanding joy removers in the modern pilgrimage to California, but it is possible to reach Los Angeles with a minimum of discombort.

This tour suggestion takes advantage of the newly completed highways in western Illinois and through Missouri, where fair to good going is promised in all but the worst kind of touring weather. It uses either Illinois route No. 4 or No. 25 and No. 10 to Springfield, the recently improved stretch to Beardstown, and pavement to Quincy, where it crosses the river and cuts south to join the Ocean to Ocean highway at Monroe City and improved roads into Kansas City.

Another option shows Illinois pavements to St. Louis and the National Old Trails road all the way to Los Angeles.

Higher Tariff.

To prevent the American motor car from capturing the German market, where it suddenly has become most popular, the German government is about to pass legislation tripling the present customs tariff. The new tariff will make the importation of American cars almost prohibitive.

Wash the Tires.

The appearance of a car is frequently made or marred by the condition of the tires. A new set of tires and a little cleaning up of the car will accomplish the same results for an old car that a shave, hair cut, and a shine will do for the man with an old suit of clothes.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question $5 is awarded to Frank G. Wagner, 1443 Oakdale avenue, Chicago.

The Question.

Do you think that boulevards as well as through streets should be equipped with lighted "stop" signs?

Where Asked.

County building.

The Answers.

May C. Guernsey, 5400 Jackson boulevard, court attache—We need more lighted stop signs on both through streets and boulevard than we have at the present time. Motorists from the south side cannot be expected to know all of the stops on the north or west. It is almost impossible to obey the safety law without lighted signs.

Minnie Rheim, 2646 North Sawyer avenue, secretary—I think that we should have a through "stop" street every half mile north and south in the city and on the west side outside of the loop. These should all be protected by illuminated signs. The lighted signs are the most important part of the warning system.

J. W. Lindholm, 1028 North Massasoit avenue, deputy clerk—I would like to see lights installed on all safety signs in the Chicago street and boulevard system. Many through street signs are unlighted, particularly those in Austin and on the west side. All should be lighted.

Gene Meaney, 432 North Sawyer avenue, chief clerk—I think that all streets carrying through traffic, whether they are parts of the original boulevard system or the new "through street" system should have lighted warning signs. We might go farther and illuminate all danger and direction signs in the city.

Dorothy Rosenstiel, 3627 North St. Louis avenue, stenographer—I think we should have lighted warning signs on all through streets, boulevards, street car streets and at intersections where more than two streets cross. Strangers in the city and many Chicago motorists fail to observe the safety stops because they cannot see the signs.

Aids the Trade.

The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce has decided to advance the time of admission to the New York and Chicago shows from Saturday to Friday, the public to be excluded until 7 o'clock on the second day. This will provide a two-day showing strictly for the trade.

Against Gas Tax.

For the first time in history voters of a state have themselves passed judgment on a gasoline tax, an event which was part of the recent general election. The state was Massachusetts and the verdict was overwhelmingly against the tax. The vote was: Yes, 277,075; no, 550,561. This means that there will be no gasoline tax levied against motorists in the old Bay state.

Until Massachusetts set the example motorists throughout the country have submitted without organized protest to the taxation measures of their respective state legislatures. Every standing gasoline tax is the result of legislative enactment on which the people have never had the opportunity to vote.

PAVEMENT LEADER.

Los Angeles leads all American cities in square yards of concrete pavements contracted for during the first ten months of 1924, according to figures which have just been compiled, with over 1,000,000 square yards to her credit—the equivalent to over fifty-eight miles of concrete pavement thirty feet wide.

Pedestrian Light.

A New York girl has solved the safety first problem for pedestrians at night—on one way streets anyway. She has invented an armband which shows a red light. The battery is carried on her belt. In order to afford complete protection it is necessary to carry a light on each arm or a light could be placed in the top of the hat, which would flash both ways, and could be made to harmonize with the general lines of milady's millinery.

Now and Then.

With the ignition switch off, ampere gauges sometimes show a discharge when no discharge is there. The way to determine whether or not there is a discharge is to disconnect the wires between the generator and the gauge and if the indicator remains stationary and does not point back to zero, it proves that there is no discharge. Inaccurate adjustment of the ampere meter is to blame, but once having determined no discharge, there is nothing to worry about.

SOUTH AFRICA PLANS GIGANTIC STEEL INDUSTRY

Dickering with Germans to Build Plant.

BY W. J. MAKIN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Dec. 6.—The South African government has decided to establish a big steel industry in this country in view of the increasing railway and industrial requirements. Negotiations are now proceeding in Europe between representatives of the union, the government, and certain German steel producers with a view to establishing the industry here on a large scale.

A commission of German steel experts visited South Africa some time ago and furnished a preliminary report to the government, which was considered extremely encouraging. British steel producers considered the time not ripe for the establishment of such a venture, though they offered to start blast furnaces in South Africa if the government would guarantee a return on the large capital expenditure.

Want Government Help.

A further German report, however, was more favorable, though it stated that raising the necessary capital was the main difficulty. It is presumed, therefore, that the Germans are asking very liberal encouragement from the government in some form.

South Africa consumes annually £10,000,000 ($46,900,000) worth of steel products, a good deal of which comes from America. Critics argue that the wants are so diversified that it is impossible for the local steel industry to cater to all the requirements, but the Germans believe that owing to the big coal fields here it is possible to produce steel goods in South Africa cheaply enough to conquer the imperiled products.

There is considerable excitement in industrial circles here over the announcement that the government is negotiating with Germany for the establishment of the steel industry. It is believed that the Nationalist government deliberate turned down the British offer, which was precisely on the same basis, in order to give a chance to the German combine.

Perils American Business.

I understand from an authoritative source that the government is prepared not only to offer liberal financial encouragement to the Germans but to guarantee the interest on debentures for a fixed period and also guarantee to place all government business with the concern.

The industrialists point out that this would doom the British and American steel products.

Strike of 42,000 Hard Coal Miners Is Averted

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 6.—Danger of a strike of the 42,000 employés of the Glen Alden and Hudson Coal companies was averted tonight for at least a week when union leaders pleaded with the men to live up to their contracts pending an appeal to international President John L. Lewis to intervene. The special peace commission sent here by President Lewis met with the general strike committee in Pittston today, but was unable to persuade the men to return to work. Twelve thousand miners are on strike there.

TAX PUBLICITY SPEEDED INTO SUPREME COURT

Stone Asks Haste on Kansas City Case.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—[United Press.]—Attorney General Stone has ordered the Kansas City Journal-Post income tax publicity case appealed directly to the Supreme court at the earliest possible moment, it was announced at the department of justice today.

The indictment, charging Walter S. Dickey, owner, and Ralph Ellis, managing editor of the Journal-Post, with publishing illegally income tax returns, was quashed by the Kansas City federal court in sustaining a defense demurrer on the grounds that the paper had the right to publish the returns under the freedom of the press constitutional provision.

Skip Intermediate Court.

The case can be taken direct to the Supreme court, skipping the usual procedure of going through the Court of Appeals, as it involves a constitutional question.

The department has asked United States District Attorney C. C. Madison at Kansas City to make all possible haste in getting the appeal before the high court. The Journal-Post case will be decided probably within a few months and before a final ruling can be obtained on the law in the Baltimore and New York indictments.

Case Appealed, as Ordered.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 6.—[United Press.]—C. C. Madison, United States district attorney, today appealed to the Supreme court the decision of Judge Albert L. Reeves in throwing out of court the indictments against the Kansas City Journal-Post charging illegal publication of income tax reports.

The appeal was made by Madison following instructions received from the department of justice at Washington. Madison has sent all records bearing on the case to the Supreme court.

SAVE STARVING CREW ABOARD HELPLESS SHIP

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—[United Press.]—The schooner Bluebird, disabled by storms, today was salvaged 470 miles off Cape Hatteras, by the coast guard cutter Seneca. The crew of twelve was in a starving condition after a week's drifting.

The schooner Rachel W. Stevens, smashed up by the same storm and located yesterday seventy miles off Hatteras by the cutter Mascoutin last night, broke its tow line and is being sought again. The crew of ten is safe aboard the Mascoutin.

A third helpless drifting vessel reported by passing liners is being sought by the coast guard.

LOUIS F. SWIFT TO LEAD DRIVE FOR $500,000

Louis F. Swift has been made executive chairman of the Lake Forest campaign to raise $500,000 of the $3,000,000 endowment for the Illinois Presbyterian Education fund. Other members of the executive committee are: Clayton Mark, A. L. Barker, John Barlow, Dr. Clifford Barnes, Prof. W. R. Bridgman, A. T. Carton, J. H. Clendenin, John Griffith, A. Duane Jackman, Dr. Herbert M. Moore, Peter Moore, Frank W. Read, the Rev. George Roberts, G. T. Rogers, and Douglas Stuart.

The 199 students of Lake Forest college have pledged aid, according to J. P. Livesay, director of the local campaign.

Half the total amount sought was raised when Mr. and Mrs. James A. Patten contributed $1,500,000. Senator William B. McKinley gave several thousand.

OUR PLAN Service
Our Architectural Dept. will aid you in planning a home to suit your exact needs. Expert service.

Three important facts affecting your family's purse and health

1 How to Buy Oranges and Grapefruit

Disregard their color and shape. For very often "rusty" or unshapely fruit are far more juicy and sweet than those which merely please your eye. Indeed, all these shades and shapes frequently come from the selfsame orange or grapefruit tree.

Just do this: Be sure they're heavy for their size. More weight means more juice. Thus, Sealdsweet Florida Oranges and Grapefruit are heavier, size for size, than others. They are solid with delicious, nourishing juice.

2 Improve Your Family's Health

Sealdsweet Florida Oranges and Grapefruit have tremendous health value. They are rich in the growth-promoting, health-protecting Vitamin C. While contained in some of your other foods, this essential vitamin is weakened —often destroyed—in cooking. Orange and Grapefruit juice, on the contrary, preserves Vitamin C even against cooking heat.

A surprising health fact: Your usual "bread and meat" diet leaves an "acid residue" in your body. Oranges and grapefruit, so-called "acid foods," leave an "alkali reserve." And impairment of this "alkali reserve" is the real beginning of most bodily ills.

3 It's the Juice that Counts

Size for size, Sealdsweet Florida Oranges or Grapefruit give you at least ¼ more juice than ordinary oranges or grapefruit do. Since it is the juice that carries the flavor and all the essential food elements, you get greater health value and greatest money value when you demand

Sealdheart Grapefruit
(In Tins)

Whenever you are unable to obtain fresh Sealdsweet Grapefruit or prefer the fruit in tins, ask your grocer for Sealdheart Grapefruit. It is the inner meat and juice, separated from the membranes and outer rind, of the delicious Sealdsweet Grapefruit. Merely chill Sealdheart Grapefruit and it is ready to serve.

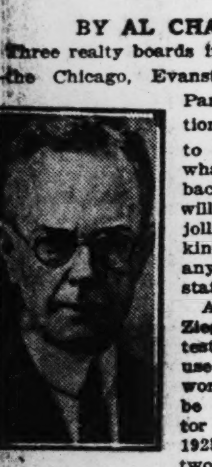
REAL ESTATE NEWS

REALTORS PLAN "1925 FOLLIES" AND MINSTRELS

Three Boards to Join in Lively Affair.

BY AL CHASE.

Three realty boards in Cook county—the Chicago, Evanston, and Oak Park organizations—are going to join hands in what realtors back of it claim will be the biggest jollification of its kind ever held anywhere in the state.



GEORGE W. ROSS.

Although Mr. Ziegfeld may protest against the use of his pet word, the show is be called "Realtor Follies of 1925," and sixty-two realtors from Chicago, Oak Park, and Evanston are going to darken their handsome features and appear as gentlemen of color in a wild and woolly minstrel show.

To Be Given Jan. 9.

How they can reconcile the title of their play with the fact that it's a minstrel show, we don't pretend to explain. Maybe they'll do that on Thursday evening, Jan. 9, 1925.

Where this "monster aggregation of blackface artists of international reputation and marvelous forensic, histrionic, and lyric ability" will perform is yet to be announced. Two pieces are under consideration.

A general committee, composed of S. Charles Iversen, next president of the Chicago Real Estate board; Ralph W. Skillin, Oak Park's next realty board head, and William L. Dormand, new president of the Evanston Real Estate board, is new deciding the momentous question of where this stupendous production will be first shown to an expectant world.

Will Install State Officers.

Incidentally, the new officers of the Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards, elected at the recent convention at Galesburg, will be installed during some part of the evening's festivities. George W. Ross of East Moline is the new president of the state realtor body.

Following the installation will be a "bathing beauty contest" conducted by William P. Heyn, in which twelve realtors will pose for prizes. Various other feature stunts are planned.

Poet Laureate Twangs Lyre.

William C. Regelin, poet laureate of the Chicago Real Estate board, already has written a program, dashed off a scenario, penned some lyrics, composed a few songs, and dictated a two part libretto. J. Soule Warterfield is chairman of the show and also is busy inventing novelties for the realtors.

The idea of having a minstrel-follies originated with Harry Goldstine, former president of the Chicago Real Estate board, and chairman of the legislative committee.

MAYOR DEVER TO TALK AT COUNTY REALTY BANQUET

Mayor Dever last night accepted the invitation of the Cook County Real Estate board to be the principal speaker at that body's annual banquet, to be held next Thursday evening at the Hotel La Salle. His honor's talk will be on "Chicago City Problems." Samuel Insull will not be a speaker of the evening! Several other speakers will be announced later by Roy E. Knauer, chairman of the banquet committee. The banquet will be held at 6:30.

The annual speech prepared by the late President Herman Tenings just before his death will be read by J. Scott Matthews.

STORES AND FLATS FOR LINCOLN.

Contracts have been let for six stores and twelve flats at 2464 Lincoln, to be built in three units of two stores and four apartments each. The total cost will be $150.000, according to the Levit & Rovner company, in charge of construction and management of the property.

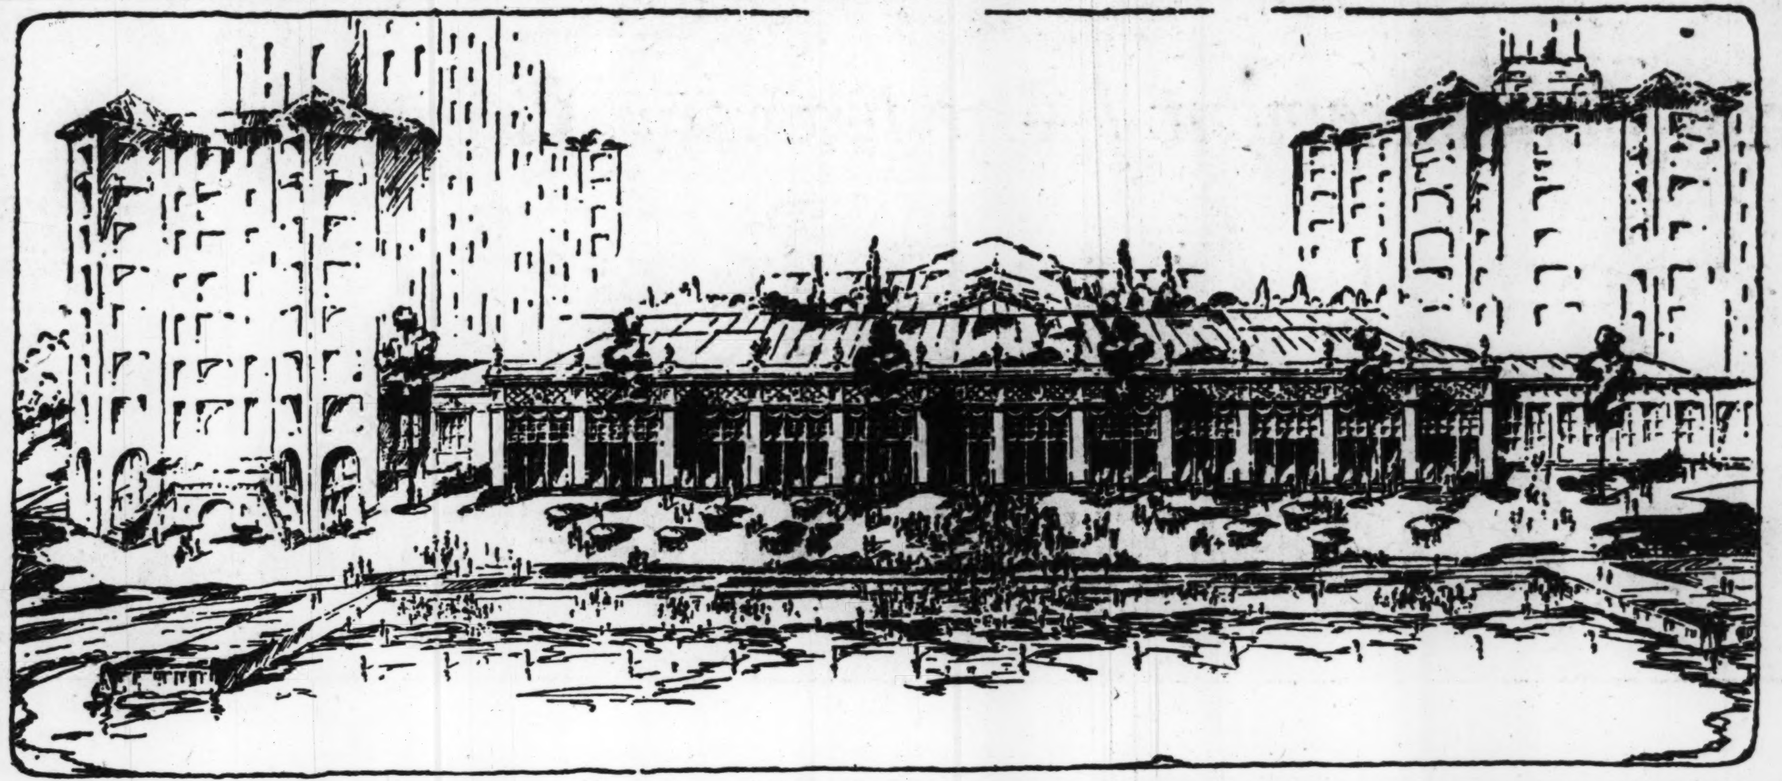
$300,000 Tropical Dance Garden to Link Edgewater Beach Hotel and Annex



Above is the tropical dance garden to be made by erecting a steel and glass structure over the marble dance floor which now extends from the marine dining room of the Edgewater Beach hotel to the crystal ballroom in the new section of that hostelry. The walls and roof will be removed in hot weather. During the winter months various tropical plants and trees will give the place a garden effect. Benjamin H. Marshall is architect.

"ATTABOY GEO." NIXON WINS BOOSTERS' CUP AT REALTY BANQUET

George F. Nixon, who has perhaps done more to familiarize the realty world with the Greek [or is it Niles Center?] slogan "attaboy" than perhaps any other living realtor, won the Lonnquist silver cup for the best five minute description of his part of town. The contest was held at the annual banquet of the Chicago Real Estate board at the Rainbo gardens on Thursday evening.

We've only space for the peroration of Mr. Nixon's 300 word speech. It is:

"Uptown Chicago is the reincarnation of Chicago's neglected motto: 'I will.' It is the natural evolution of man's desire for the highest and best in life. Nowhere else in Chicago can one receive for one's investment such high returns in happiness, contentment and prosperity."

"Attaboy, George, here's the cup."

Brokers' Notes

Four years ago V. J. Curto & Co., realizing that their lease would be up in a few years, bought the building adjoining the northeast corner of Wilson and Broadway for $70,000. Since then they've refused a profit of $100,000. Yesterday they moved into their own building, No. 4615. Their new phone is Ardmore 5500.

A. Edlin & Co., mortgage bankers of Boston, have opened a Chicago office at 11 South La Salle under the management of Morris Edlin.

The real estate firm of Loye & Claghorn has been changed to James E. Loye. Offices are continued at 7929 Cottage Grove.

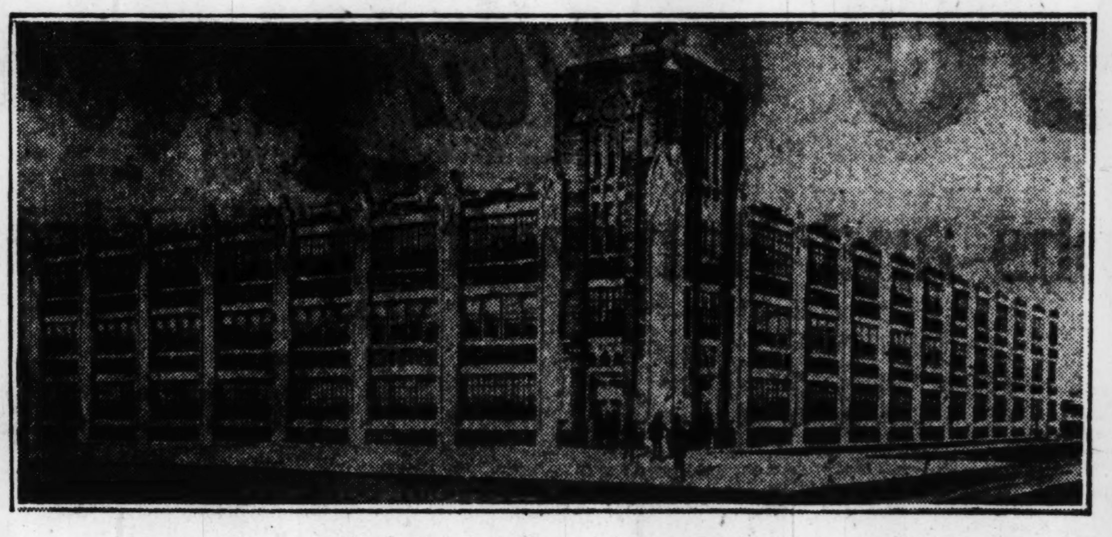
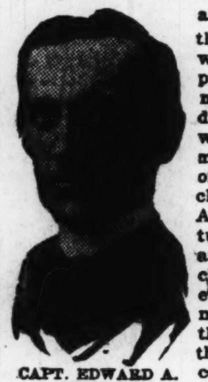
New Factory of Victor Adding Machine Company



Above is the new factory of the Victor Adding Machine company, designed by Architect S. Milton Eichberg, to be erected at Rockwell street and Irving Park boulevard on a 200x545 site. The building will have 225,000 square feet of floor space. The first unit, 160x240, will cost $325,000. The Victor concern is now at 319 North Albany avenue. The above picture was made by R. L. Hyett.

News of the Architects

Capt. Edward A. Evers, U. S. N. R., will speak on the United States navy and Lieut. Nathaniel Rubinkam will show some pictures of the navy in action during the world war at the next monthly meeting of the Chicago chaper of the American Institute of Architects at the University club on Tuesday evening at 6:30 p. m. Reports of the delegates to the First Regional conference of the Fifth district, A. I. A., will be heard.



CAPT. EDWARD A. EVERS.

GLENWOOD-BALMORAL CORNER SOLD.

Stella Olowecki has purchased from the Foreman Trust & Savings bank the northeast corner of Glenwood and Balmoral, 60x121, improved with a twelve flat building, for an indicated $85,250, subject to $57,750. Jones & Kerner were attorneys and Robert A. Guarno & Co. were brokers.

LEASE FINE ARTS SHOP.

Otto and Sonia Koehn have leased from the Chapin estate the store and basement at 416 South Michigan, in the Fine Arts building, for ten years, at a term rental reported to be approximately $120,000. The lessees will operate a gift shop. Winston & Co. and Warren A. Cahn were brokers.

FLATS FOR KENMORE AVENUE.

J. C. Johnson has bought the 50x150 at 5832 Kenmore from Fred S. Comstock for a reported $35,000 and will tear down the old residence and erect a four story flat building. Crawford & Maxner were brokers.

FURNITURE CO. PLANS $400,000 STORE BUILDING

The General Furniture company has had plans drawn by I. Stern for a $400,000 three story building to be erected at once at the southwest corner of Belmont and Seminary avenues on a 75x125 site. The company will use the entire building for its twelfth store. Allen M. Weber was broker in the purchase of the site from G. Rosen for $80,000.

Plans Thirty-six Flats at Drexel Ave. and 79th St.

Loretta M. Cull has bought the southeast corner of 79th and Drexel, 125x130, from Edward Qualkinbush for a reported $50,000 cash, and will build a $225,000 thirty-six flat building from plans by Z. Erol Smith. O'Connor, Burke & McDonnell were brokers.

$175,000 FOR VACANT.

John J. Rosen has bought the vacant southeast corner of 52nd and Lowe, 587x298, from William M. Wright of the Calumet Baking Powder company, for $175,000.

"Standard" PLUMBING FIXTURES

When the builders of this bank selected complete "Standard" plumbing equipment, they had in mind the longer term of service and satisfactory performance that a complete "Standard" equipment gives.

"Standard" Nickeled Brass Fixtures equal in character and quality the recognized excellence of "Standard" Plumbing Fixtures. They are made throughout of extra heavy, full quality brass heavily nickeled. All parts carefully inspected and tested before assembling.

Architects, contractors, plumbers and owners are invited to examine them at the Chicago "Standard" showroom. Here will be found a complete display of "Standard" Plumbing Fixtures with the correct "Standard" Nickeled Brass Fixtures for each. Look for the name "Standard" cast or stamped in all Nickeled Brass Fixtures.

A. L. RIEMENSCHNEIDER TO BE NEXT HEAD OF CO. REALTY BOATD

Albert L. Riemenschneider will be the next president of the Cook County Real Estate board. He heads the ticket recently posted and as no other ticket has been filed within the time limit, it is a foregone conclusion that he will be named at the coming election. Mr. Riemenschneider is now filling out the unexpired term of President Herman Teninga, who recently died. He was vice president under Mr. Teninga.

ALBERT L. RIEMENSCHNEIDER [Walinger Photo.]

Robert C. Duncan will be vice president for the coming year, and Samuel E. Erickson will be secretary. Nicholas J. Schmitz will be treasurer of the board.

Beg Your Pardon

In reporting the ninety-nine year lease at the northwest corner of State and Ohio the names of two brokers were omitted. John W. Cremens represented the lessors. Thad Howe and Henry E. Doney, associated with Earle A. Shilton, also were brokers. There are only three members of the sdndicate which acquired the corner: Walter Ross, A. D. Curtis, and Kenneth Curtis. Mr. Ross was not a broker in the deal, as was stated.

CHICAGO REALTY BROKERS LOSE STATE LICENSES

Illinois Inquiry Body in Daily Sessions.

Two Chicago real estate brokers yesterday had their licenses revoked by the real estate brokers' license commission of Illinois, several others are in a fair way to lose theirs as a result of pending investigations, and ten or twelve downstate dealers are in trouble as a result of fraud charges.

Another broker, E. M. Steiner, of the Lincoln Real Estate exchange, 2600 Lincoln avenue, accused by Paul J. Hardt, an employé, of shooting him, was shooed out of the license committee rooms with the gentle reminder that the state commission was not a criminal court. However, Mr. Steiner is now under bonds for trial before the grand jury of Cook county and meanwhile another case is pending against that gentleman.

Samuel Boyle of 4710 North Kedzie avenue, a real estate dealer, was found guilty of "substantial misrepresentation," following charges by Bridget and Minnie Ryan of 1467 Winnemac avenue, and Sylvia and Louis M. Cafferato of 1453 Winnemac. His license was ordered revoked and a rehearing refused.

Roy Thorsen of 1775 Howard street, under indictment for the sale of worthless bonds of the Chicago Fuel company, also under indictment, has had his license revoked.

According to Secretary Joseph K. Brittain, the state commission will continue to hold daily sessions till the present crowded docket is cleared.

AW! SKINNAY, LISSEN TO THIS ONE! SAYS IT'S GONNA BE A R. R. YARD

As the famous "Proviso mystery" continues to arouse as much curiosity now as it did when it first began to mystify the realty world, we might as well continue to relay the various rumors that a real estate editor bumps up against.

The latest is in our humble opinion about as plausible as any we've heard. It is that a great gravity railroad yard, similar to, but larger than, the one at Clearing, is contemplated where all western freight can be handled. Presumably the Northwestern, Burlington, Illinois Central, and Belt Line railroads would be interested.

Of course no railroad official can be found who knows anything about it. But that doesn't mean anything. A La Salle street banker, who should know, is the sponsor for this latest rumor. All we can add is that it sounds even more reasonable than that Mr. Insull is buying a right of way for an "L" extension.

NILES CENTER LAND BRINGS $20,000 AN ACRE

In the sale of three acres at Howard, Lincoln, and Cicero by Jay Stough to B. G. Geiger, a new top notch price is said to have been established in the Niles Center district. The land sold for $60,000, or $20,000 an acre.

It was bought a few days before by Mr. Stough from Charlotte Manasse for $45,000, or $15,000 an acre. A year ago the price was $13,000 an acre.

The property has 728 feet of business frontage on Howard and Cicero and 12? feet on Lincoln. H. Edward Linden & Co. were the only brokers.

NDAY, 9 TO 12

GRAIN PRICES CLOSE HIGHER, LED BY WHEAT

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Grain markets showed a decidedly strong undertone, with December wheat selling at a new high on the crop, while all deliveries of corn were within a fraction of the best figures of the season.

Wheat closed about the top, with net gains of 1¼@1½c, with December $1.57, May $1.62½@1.62⅝, and July $1.43⅝. Corn gained ½@1c, with December $1.19⅝, May $1.24½@1.24⅝, and July $1.24⅞@1.25. Oats advanced 1¼@1⅝c and rye 1@1⅞c.

Price fluctuations in the last week were extremely erratic. December wheat gained 3c on the May and finished 5⅝c under that delivery after selling at 5c under. May was unchanged for the week, and July ⅝c higher. Corn showed pronounced strength and is up 2¼c to 5⅛c as compared with a week ago, with December leading.

Oats gained 2⅞@3¼c and rye 1@1⅛c for the week. Lard was in active demand with a net gain of 72½@92½c, ribs 60@82½c, and bellies $1.07@1.32½ higher than a week ago.

Foreign News Changes.

There was a material change in the general character of news from abroad with private cables reporting an advance of equal to 7½c per bu. in the price at leading German ports and that country asked for offers of all grain over Sunday. The accumulation abroad was reported as cleaned up, but sales in all positions for the day, as estimated by the seaboard, were only 200,000 bu. Buenos Aires closed 2@2½c higher, and was taken by many traders as confirming recent claims of damage in Argentine. Liverpool gained ¼@⅜d.

World's shipments for the week were estimated at around 14,250,000 bu., about equal to importers' needs. A good reduction in the on passage statement is anticipated, due to large arrivals abroad. In the last two days a leading elevator interest is credited with buying around 5,000,000 bu. December and selling a like quantity of May wheat.

Liberal Trade in Corn.

There was a liberal trade in corn with commission houses good buyers at times, and while there was very heavy profit taking at $1.24½ for May the advance of 3@5½c in Buenos Aires added fuel to the bullish sentiment and offerings were finally absorbed, with the finish the highest on the crop. Light rains were reported in Argentine but had no effect in view of the strength in Buenos Aires.

Country offerings of cash corn to arrive were fairly large, and bids were advanced ½c to 11@11½c under May for No. 4 grades for ninety day shipment.

More Interest in Oats.

Oats showed more strength than corn, and there was further increase in commission house interest. Prices were on the upgrade the greater part of the day and the finish was at the top. Oats are still regarded as low as compared with corn.

There was a fair demand for rye and with other grains firm an advance was easily attained. German news was more favorable to holders, although export sales for the day were only 200,000 bu.

Provisions Close Higher.

Provisions were strong from the start with commission house and investment buying and the close was at net gains of 20@30c on lard and 10@12½c on bellies, while ribs were unchanged. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the winter season to date is 1,212,000, against 1,324,000 last year. Prices follow:

PRIMARIES FOR WEEK

Primary arrivals of grains were the largest in a month, with an aggregate of 27,415,000 bu, an increase of 1,115,000 bu over the previous week and of 6,053,000 bu over last year. The arrivals also were 5,372,000 bu more than the five year average. A feature was the increase in the run of wheat and corn, although part of the wheat was moved from one market to another. The corn movement was below last year's. Details follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export sales of wheat in all positions were estimated by the seaboard at 200,000 bu wheat, 200,000 bu rye, and 100,000 bu barley, the latter to Germany.

Chicago handlers sold 20,000 bu wheat, 33,000 bu corn, 20,000 bu oats, and 46,000 bu barley to the domestic trade. Deliveries on December contracts were 45,000 bu wheat, 102,000 bu corn, 166,000 bu oats, and 70,000 bu rye.

Demand for spot wheat locally was fair, with the basis firm at 12@12½c over December for No. 2 red and 1@2c over for No. 2 hard. Bids for No. 2 red, twenty day shipment, were advanced to 5c over December. Receipts, 21 cars. Outside markets were unchanged to 2c higher. Minneapolis premiums were unchanged to 1c higher.

Bids for cash corn to arrive, ninety day shipment, were advanced ½c, with No. 3 grades 8½@9½c and No. 4 grades 11@11½c under the May. The spot basis was unchanged. Receipts, 186 cars. Outside markets were unchanged to 1½c higher.

Offerings of cash oats were not large, but the market closed easy, with the best bid on No. 2 white at the last 2½c over the December, while December price was bid for No. 3 white. Receipts, 61 cars.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

With closing prices of all grains well toward the highest of the day and the news more favorable to holders, the disposition was to look for a still higher level. There was, however, liberal covering by some of the largest local shorts in wheat, which might weaken the technical situation. The impression at the close was that all grains were a purchase on sharp declines.

With primary shipments of wheat in excess of the week's receipts, there is a possibility of the visible supply on Monday showing a decrease. There is, however, too much uncertainty as regards the week's statistics at this season of the year to make the movement figure and report on stocks coincide. This is due to the closing up of the lake business for the season and the same condition will prevail next week as navigation does not close until Dec. 12.

Russells News agent cabled from Buenos Aires, "Further rains have helped the corn crop. Wheat yields in the north higher than expected."

Gray Silver, president of the Grain Marketing company, the farmers company, is quoted in the Winnipeg Free Press as predicting $2.50 for wheat before next spring, based on the world's shortage.

In an interview here yesterday Mr. Silver denied ever having made such a prediction. He says, however, that he had in private conversations predicted $2.00 for wheat. "I am also bullish on corn," he said, "although some of our officials do not agree with me. We are doing the largest commission business the people with us have ever had, but our interests are mainly in the cash grain lines." Referring to a statement recently printed in a farm bureau publication that the Grain Marketing company was responsible for exporting one-half the exportable surplus of wheat of the United States this season, and for the advance in prices, he termed it a "typographical error," and adds, "we are preparing a statement to be made public shortly showing the amount of business we have handled, as we are to start a stock selling campaign."

Duluth received 7,691,000 bu wheat for the week and shipped 10,630,000 bu. There was a fair quantity of Canadian wheat in bond received at eastern lake ports which tends to throw predictions out of line. Kansas City shipped more wheat than it received. At Chicago, receipts exceeded the shipments, but orders are out to load grain in cars and boats which should materially affect the total stocks.

Those who have watched changing operations in wheat the last few days credit the leading elevator interests with buying 5,000,000 bu of December and selling the May from 5c to 7½c difference. A week ago the spread was 8½c, and some people in the trade expressed the belief that it was to widen. Absorption of the cash wheat on delivery, however, changed this movement and the bears have done the liquidating. There has also been a reduction in the spreads on practically all grains.

A New York exporter wired Jackson Bros., "There is a better inquiry again today from abroad. Broomhall states that cash wheat prices are over 2c better than yesterday. A German correspondent cables that there is a much better feeling, unsold stocks being cleaned up. London cables say market quiet and steady with an improved feeling."

Broomhall's Romanian agent reports the exportable surplus corn crop, 38,250,000 bu, against 88,000,000 bu last year.

LONDON.—Lord Ashfield, chairman of the London Underground railways, was elected chairman of the British Dyestuffs corporation, succeeding Sir William Alexander, who is now traveling in the United States.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The department of agriculture has asked an emergency appropriation from congress to fight a new species of boll weevil which has just been discovered 'n the Arizona long staple fields and which, it is feared, will spread eastward to the Texas Panhandle and other cotton districts, where the Mexican weevil has done little harm so far.

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

COTTON MARKET

Cotton trading in all markets was small, and the range of prices limited. At the close Chicago was 1 to 6 points lower, New York 3 higher to 2 points lower, and New Orleans unchanged to 3 points higher.

A fair number of limited orders were received in Chicago, which shows that there is more interest being taken by the public. Spreading operations between Chicago and the other markets were fair sized. Liverpool houses were fair buyers in New York and New Orleans was a seller.

The cotton trade evened up for the government report due in Chicago at 11 o'clock on Monday. Trading is to cease five minutes prior to the report's issuance and resume fifteen minutes after its receipt. This has been the custom for some time past. Estimates of forty-six members of the New York Cotton exchange is for 13,247,000 bales. Estimates last month were for less than 13,000,000 bales. Last year's crop was 10,139,671 bales. It is said by a cotton spinner that a crop of 13,000,000 bales will start the mills going and increase trading, while it may be hard on the bull market with a crop of over 13,250,000 bales. Germany has taken 794,539 bales so far this season, against 498,552 bales last year. Prices in the three leading markets follow:

SOME WASTE CALLED PRICE OF U. S. PROGRESS

BY SCRUTATOR.

What with President Coolidge's message, Secretary Hoover's renewed pronouncements or economic waste, and Secretary Mellon's latest warning against confiscation under the mask of taxation, the American people have had a pretty thorough discussion of one very important side of our economic problem.

In so far as these utterances contribute to soundness and stability of business they will be helpful—there is no doubt that they represent the current American idea, ingrained from post-war experiences with extravagance at home and governmental excess abroad.

But it is also quite possible that this spirit of caution may be translated by a certain school of pessimists into a demand for stagnation.

There is another side to the problem of economy and industrial activity.

The modern business system is essentially a matter of making things for others, or selling things to others, in order to realize a profit for one's self.

The consequence of that is that capitalism is a spiral—it must ever create new wants and satisfactions, must provide ever increasingly for intensive selling and create machinery and methods for making people want things. Capitalism cannot stand still. That is its greatest virtue. It must grow or crystallize, and it seems inevitable that if it should cease to expand it would cease to be itself, and would revert into one of those static social forms from which mankind only recently escaped.

It is true that if men saved nothing they would go back to the savagery from which they came. It is also true that if everybody saved and limited consumption to the goods necessary to sustain life, everybody would be a pauper.

Now as to waste. Let us frankly face the fact that a certain amount of immediate waste is inevitable in any society based on free enterprise.

Only through the immediate wastes of competitive strife, innovation, and struggle can the ultimate social economies be realized, because it is only from the trial and error of free enterprise that the greatest efficiencies can be attained in the end.

Secretary Hoover recognizes the peril of reversion toward outworn modes of social control in his program of standardization when he says that as the work is all voluntary and coöperative paternalism is eliminated. Perhaps? But let us not forget that the mediæval guilds largely were voluntary and coöperative and they laid a strangling hand on business.

There are germs of bureaucratic waste and officialism in the overgrown corporation or the trade association, as well as in government bureaus. Everybody knows how the big corporation continually must fight to preserve efficiency and choke off the growth of overhead.

As long as men are men the attractions of the "short cuts," only possible when power is lodged in the hands of a few at the top, will exercise their lure. But history proves that most "short cuts" are disastrous in the end.

Despots cannot transmit their batting average to their heirs. Commissions cannot preserve their human touch. Boards tend to become really wooden. Strange as it may seem, the millions of common folk, "going it blind" and each seeking to work out his own welfare, somehow seem to attain the greatest wealth and happiness for the whole of us. They may go slow, but they are pretty sure. They make no "brilliant mistakes."

WALL STREET NOTES

Under the leadership of the high yielding railroad issues, bond prices made moderate progress yesterday after absorbing a heavy volume of week end profit taking. Buying of the rail liens centered in established favorites such as Frisco income 6's, Seaboard adjustment 5's and refunding 4's, Hudson and Manhattan refunding 5's, St. Paul convertibles issues, Wisconsin Central 4's and Chicago & Alton 3½s, with average gains of about a point.

Trading in the foreign group was enlivened by another spurt in Mexican government obligations, based on prospects of eventual resumption of service on Mexico's external debt. Advances of 1 to 3 points were scored by the assented 4's and 5's.

Philadelphia Company 5's led several other publicity utility lines to higher ground. Several independent steel company issues, including Bethlehem 5's of 1936 and Wickwire Spencer 7's, were fractionally higher.

Losses were recorded by all Liberty bonds with the exception of the third 4¼'s, which are subject to exchange for the treasury's new long term 4's.

The St. Louis, Rocky Mountain and Pacific company, which omitted the dividend on the common stock in December, 1923 has resumed payments with a declaration of a dividend of 1 per cent payable Dec. 31 to stock of record Dec. 15. The regular quarterly disbursement of 1¼ per cent on the preferred was authorized.

The biggest increase in Youngstown district steel mill operations for many months, bringing steel production to 83 per cent of capacity, was reported by manufacturers who made public schedules for this week. Iron and steel exports during October totaled 158,553 long tons, an increase of 17 per cent over exports for September, according to the department of commerce.

Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, has signed a contract with the Argentine republic to erect a complete oil refinery at La Plata, Argentina. The refinery will be completed in about two years at a cost of $7,000,000.

The Sparks-Withington company has declared the usual extra dividend of 50 cents per share on the common stock in addition to the regular quarterly of 50 cents and the regular quarterly 1¾ per cent preferred dividend.

Stockholders of the Sweets Company of America approved an amendment to he charter changing the 500,000 shares of $10 each to 100,000 shares of $50 each. Stockholders will receive one new share for each five now held.

There were 427 commercial failures in the United States last week, according to figures compiled by R. G. Dun & Co., as compared with 375 in the preceding week, a five day week owing to the observance of Thanksgiving day, and 422 during the corresponding week last year.

Stockholders of Pure Oil company have increased 9,777 in the last year to 37,595. Of 7,000 employes of the company 4,543 are shareholders.

The American Bond City of Safe Investments

THESE actual properties are truly an investor's city, for they represent an appraised valuation of $105,813,036.00 against which we have sold First Mortgage Bond Issues to the extent of only 55% of the total valuations.

This represents but a part of the total First Mortgage Building Bonds sold by us over a period of more than twenty years during which time, every dollar of principal and interest that has become due has been paid.

You, too, may share in the financing of America's great cities, and build for yourself a firm estate in the oldest form of safe investment.

If you are guided in investing by actual figures rather than general statements, send for "Our Successful Record." This book has been published for those investors demanding concrete evidence of a successful record for investment. It will be sent to you without cost or obligation.

Investing Christmas Funds!

A VITAL FACTOR TO THE INVESTOR

DURING the Holidays a great deal of money will be acquired by individuals in every walk of life in the form of gifts, bonuses from employers, dividends and paid-up investments.

Arises the question, what to do with this money—spend it, deposit it in a bank or invest it.

If invested wisely, it will begin to work for you the minute it is invested and its benefits will be felt for many years to come.

The House of Baird & Warner offers a constructive service to such individuals whether the amount to be invested is $10, $100, $1000 or upward. Our partial payment plan is especially well adapted to take care of Christmas funds.

Let that "Bonus" or "Christmas Gift" start you on the road to happiness and prosperity.

There are convincing arguments of safety in every issue offered by Baird & Warner.

The New York Times.

New York, Dec. 6.—The stock market, having been pulled up rather violently on Friday, when it was just beginning to hit a runaway pace, did not wholly recover itself today. Once more, advances and declines were intermingled with meaningless confusion at the end of the day.

There were possibly more 1 and 2 point net advances than 1 and 2 point net declines. In the greater part of the market, however, the absence of any renewed upward trend was manifest, even though the day's change in prices was mostly fractional. Trading approached normal proportions, with sales of approximately 960,000 shares.

Rails Show Most Strength.

Price movements reflected the opposing play of bullish demonstrations in selected issues, on the one hand, and a heavy volume of professional selling and week-end profit taking on the other.

Nearly three dozen 1924 high records were established. Most of these were in the rail group, where buying converged on the issues of the northwestern carriers. Chicago and Northwestern common and preferred mounted 2 points to new peak prices. Ann Arbor common and preferred, Chicago and Alton common and preferred, and Western Pacific also broke through their previous maximum quotations, while Lehigh Valley sold at its highest price since the segregation of the coal properties.

Pivotal Industrials Decline.

All the pivotal industrials lost ground. U. S. Steel common closed ¼ lower at 117; Baldwin registered a loss of ⅝ at 123¼, and American Can was off ⅛ at 149¾ after having sold as high as 150⅝.

Public utilities showed independent strength, Philadelphia Company leading that group to higher ground by advancing more than 3 points to 55⅝. Subsequent profit taking forced it back to 54⅛. The oil shares also developed a few strong spots, General Asphalt and Pure Oil moving to new high ground, while the Pan-American issues, Houston, Marland, and several others showed moderate gains.

Nash Motors Rises Sharply.

Heavy buying of Nash Motors just before the close sent that stock soaring 5 points to a new record high at 174. S. S. Kresge jumped more than 7 points on a few odd lot sales. Other outstanding issues were Air Reduction, American Radiator, Barnet Leather preferred, Certainteed Products, Columbia Carbon, Goodyear preferred, Iron Products, Market Street Railway prior preferred, Pullman, and U. S. Realty preferred, all up 2 points or more.

The day brought a renewed advance in sterling, which, at $4.68½, had gained 1 cent for the day and had practically reestablished the high price of the week and year.

The statement of the New York associated banks showed a deficit of $18,700,000 in actual reserves, due primarily to reduction of nearly $26,000,000 in reserves at the federal bank.

With a supply of about 50,000 hogs on the market yesterday, among the largest of the year for Saturday, early buying was on a weak to 10c lower basis, but better grades improved in mid-session and closed in spots a shade above general selling Friday. Top equaled previous day at $9.60, although general average price lowered 10c at $8.60, the big proportion of relatively cheap light hogs included in week-end purchases, helping materially in lowering the average cost.

"Spread" Unusually Wide.

"Spread" between the day's top and average prices amounted to $1.00, the widest in about a month. Top held steady with previous Saturday, while the average price shows 40c decline. Prevailing quotations are unevenly steady to $1.00 lower compared with a week ago, light and underweights showing the most loss.

Predictions of a record run of hogs for last week became a fact when 383,700 were marketed, about 50,000 above the previous record of 334,279, established week ending Jan. 8, 1916. Only about a half dozen weekly receipts ever reached the 300,000 mark since the opening of the yards.

Although hog receipts are largest in history for one week, the big proportion of light and pigs forced the estimated average weight to 226 lbs., as light as any week in three years, being 1 lb. lighter than the previous week, 9 lbs. lighter than a year ago, and 7 lbs. heavier than the ten year average. General average price of hogs last week at $9.00, stood 50c above the previous week, despite immense supplies, being $2.00 above a year ago, but shows $1.25 decline compared with the ten year average.

Cattle Receipts Large.

Cattle receipts at 81,300 last week were among the largest of the year and general quality of killing classes lacking. Conditions were little changed, with the limited number of choice young steers selling to better advantage, reaching the $14.00 mark last Tuesday and Wednesday, while common thin cattle earlier in the week sold as low as $5.75, showing a "spread" of $8.25, the widest of the year. Butcher stock closed steady to a shade higher for the week. Calves were 25c above late previous week. Outlet for stockers and feeders broadened some and prices advanced slightly.

Lamb Market Firm.

Strong eastern support offset an increase in offerings of killing lambs last week and forced prices to a new high point for the season, despite a run of 97,500. Top fat stock reached $15.50, with best feeders at $15.10, fat shorn lambs at $12.75, yearlings at $12.00, aged wethers at $10.00, and aged ewes at $9.00. Feeding yearling wethers sold at $11.50. Prevailing prices are 50c higher than a week ago on fat lambs and 57@75c higher on aged sheep and feeding lambs. Market closed in a healthy condition, with prices on an upgrade.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 30,000 cattle, 85,000 hogs, and 25,000 sheep, against 33,235 cattle, 90,389 hogs, and 24,589 sheep a week ago, and 35,197 cattle, 82,433 hogs, and 26,415 sheep corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 85,000 cattle, 300,000 hogs, and 100,000 sheep, against 85,646 cattle, 271,646 hogs, and 107,641 sheep the corresponding period a year ago.

Four Important Advantages Offered to Builders by

UNIVERSAL

WARM AIR FURNACES

Made in UNIVERSAL Chicago Factories

For over a half century Cribben & Sexton have led the march of progress toward better cooking and heating equipment. Standing behind every range, stove or furnace which bears their "UNIVERSAL" trademark are several generations of experience, manufacturing and purchasing facilities unmatched in America today, and a reputation for square dealing which has become traditional in the industry. You may be certain that UNIVERSAL Warm Air Furnaces have inherited all the superior qualities such a parentage and such a background would impart.

When you select the UNIVERSAL furnace for your home, or for the houses you build, you may be sure that they are designed according to the most advanced principles of convenient, clean, efficient and economical home heating. You can have faith that they are built of the sturdiest of sturdy materials, perfectly cast and perfectly assembled. And you can be positive that you are paying the least at which such a furnace can be bought—when you use UNIVERSAL Warm Air Furnaces.

Installed by UNIVERSAL Heating Engineers

You know that the proper installation of a warm air furnace is a science which demands a technical and thorough understanding of the subject. You know that results are dependent almost wholly upon eliminating resistance to heat circulation in the plan of the installation. And you know that every satisfactory heating plant helps you to sell the other homes you build.

Knowing this, you will realize the benefits of having your heating plants planned, engineered and installed ready for use by UNIVERSAL factory experts. Our installation men are not merely delivery men who install. Nor are they "jack-of-all-trades" laborers. They are warm air heating and ventilating specialists—men who can solve any heating problem—careful workmen—men who think and plan before they "saw"—men who will give you a perfect installation, quickly and neatly done. We shall be glad to explain in detail the advantages of the UNIVERSAL installation service.

Delivered by UNIVERSAL Trucks and Crews

In making UNIVERSAL furnaces your standard installation, you are protecting yourself against all uncertainty in deliveries. You can bank on it that your UNIVERSALS will arrive at your jobs exactly as and when specified—even when you give us eleventh-hour instructions by phone. You will know, also, that you are making a definite saving in freight and cartage charges. A battery of UNIVERSAL Trucks and Delivery Crews is maintained to insure quick, on-time deliveries to any address in Chicago or surrounding suburbs. Let us explain the advantages and the savings of this service. Let us show you why it is a major reason for using UNIVERSAL Warm Air Furnaces.

Serviced by UNIVERSAL Specialists

Last, you will appreciate the saving in trips and bother by being able to transfer any complaints to Cribben & Sexton. We stand squarely behind every UNIVERSAL installation. Once in and sold, you can be sure you are through with the heating plant. Parts, repairs, alterations or any type of service are always available, on short notice, to UNIVERSAL users.

A little reflection will convince you of the wisdom of capitalizing these four major advantages offered by UNIVERSAL Warm Air Furnaces. You will not even have to visit our plant or write us to get complete details of our proposition. Just phone Van Buren 4600 tomorrow. A UNIVERSAL representative will call on you.

Rowland's latest novel—a stirring tale of crime, mystery and love!

The girl who wanted to be a sleuth; the airplane with wings like a turkey buzzard; the inexplicable feeling of lassitude at the time of the experimental bank robbery—these are the high spots in the opening installment of a startling novel by the author of "To the Strong the Fair," "$100,000 Reward," and "Spice."

The looting was conducted in what might be described as the conventional manner.

INSTALLMENT I.

An Amazing Robbery.

ON this burning day in July, the Poindexters expected the arrival of a young man named John Olivant, whose errand to Salt Springs was primarily of a business nature.

He was coming as the confidential agent of a rich and powerful promoter, one Julius Jedburgh. Mr. Poindexter, the leading banker of a wide region, would not have cared to do business with the sort of ruthless if duly accredited financier that Jedburgh was reported to be, but for the fact that the present scheme had been for years a dream of his own.

The Poindexter family was a branch of the old Virginia one, and it is doubtful if John Olivant would have been invited to their home but for the fact that his late father and Mr. Poindexter had been warm friends and college class mates. Also, the Olivants had been distinguished socially from the early history of Manhattan, well connected at every angle, respected and rich until the crash of John Olivant's father. The young man had become Julius Jedburgh's confidential secretary by a fortuitous circumstance that had placed the big promoter in the position of benefactor.

To facilitate the last lap of Olivant's journey and save a change of trains, Shelby Poindexter had driven her runabout twenty miles through the shimmering corn to meet him at the junction. The two had met in Washington when Shelby had visited friends there the winter before.

The immaculate elegance of Olivant's appearance as he crossed the platform to greet her made Shelby feel dusty and almost disheveled, despite the fact that she was a trim girl, orderly in mind and person, whose friends found her sometimes uncomfortably correct not only in dress but in deportment. She had laid aside her romping with her dolls, and although prominent in athletics during her college course at Goucher and fond of dancing, there was a suggestion of pedantry about her. Shelby liked to discuss the arts and sciences, particularly chemistry and physics and economics. But her discourse might have been a little marred to the meticulous scholarly ear by a habit of slang that she was apt to indulge, as if to modify the didactical.

Olivant had not made much impression on Shelby when they had met in Washington against a background that was elegant and distinguished. For one thing, his position of private secretary to such a man as Julius Jedburgh had been against him in comparison with diplomats and statesmen and those of high intellectual recognition. Also his lackadaisical manner had antagonized her ardent relish for topics of the hour that were stirringly worth while, and which might even be of a sensational sort.

Shelby cherished secretly a boyish avid craving for exciting adventure—"thrills without blushes," as a critic has said of a late dime novelist's prolific work. She would have liked to be a scientific detective or astute young woman secret service agent, if her social position had permitted; and, like a schoolboy or a great statesman, she often set aside her serious efforts to indulge her appetite for literature of lurid crime in which the everlasting and (to Shelby) disgusting sex relation was not featured; or, if so, in chivalresque fashion.

JOHN OLIVANT had impressed her slightly, and, as he did most people, that there was not much to him beyond his pleasant, finished manner, uninspiring good looks, and a lean, shapely physique so costumed as to be the envy and despair of young men and some older ones whose ambition to be well dressed was equaled only by their fear of being overdressed. This gave him a certain distinction as an artist of sorts, just as if he had excelled in growing dahlias of rare tints, or painting them on fans. But it was not enough for Shelby.

She had read the statement of a distinguished author that if a pair of trousers thrown overboard from a passing ship were to wash ashore on an island inhabited only by naked savages, the man who found them and put them on would be king before nightfall. But her analytic mind had perceived that, while this might be true, the finder would not keep on being king unless he were man enough to keep on wearing them, in the faces of covetous rivals. Shelby had also read Napoleon's brief comment: "The dandies fought well at Waterloo." But she could not picture Olivant as a fighting dandy.

He was now to be her family's guest, however, and, what was of less importance, he came as the deputy, the plenipotentiary perhaps, of a big promoter with whom Mr. Poindexter might be thrown into great financial profit. Shelby knew also that her father and Olivant's had been college friends and classmates. On all these counts she greeted Olivant with a frank, informal welcome that was perfectly sincere. Shelby really wanted to like him as much as she could.

"You don't seem to feel this terrific heat at all, Mr. Olivant," she said as they drove away from the railroad station and took the road for Salt Springs. "You look as if you enjoyed it."

"Please don't remind me of it, Miss Poindexter, so that I may keep on looking that way. As a matter of fact, this sort of dry, electrifying heat is rather stimulating."

"I've noticed that, sometimes," Shelby said, "but I'd scarcely have hoped that it would strike you that way."

"It does, though. There's a sort of challenge to it, just as there is to intense cold or a gale of wind or any other atmospheric dare. I suppose that some of us Americans of pioneer stock get that. Besides, it must be good for the corn." He glanced out across the shimmering blue green sea through a rift in which they were passing.

"You seem to have seized the spirit of the surroundings," Shelby said.

"More likely it's seized me. I like it. This sort of a dry scorch briskens one after the conservatory heat of Washington. I've had to be there the last fortnight."

"I love Washington," Shelby said. "We might be living there now if papa weren't so lazy. He's been urged time and again to run for senator."

"He could win in a walk," Olivant stated. "Would you like that, Miss Poindexter?"

"Of course, I would. And since our fathers were chums at college and mine speaks of you as 'John,' you may call me 'Shelby,' if you like."

"That is kind of you, and it means an awful lot to the last of a broken family, as in my case. Then you are to call me 'John.' Scarcely anybody does that."

"Do they call you 'Jack?'"

"No, a lot worse. Everybody hails me as 'Olly.' It's all right to do as you like with a given name, but to bobtail the family one is not respectful to the whole clan. Rather cheapening, like calling a doctor of medicine 'Doc.'"

Shelby nodded. "Most of us Americans are pretty slack in our speech. I'm slangy without realizing it. We take short cuts in expressing ourselves and then discover suddenly that our conversation is limping along on crutches."

Olivant glanced at her, surprised. In Washington Shelby had impressed him as a girl who was restless while at the same time stilted; intense but held up in expressing herself by a prideful reserve. Shelby now seemed to read his thought. She laughed.

"I'm not entirely the would-be highbrow you may have thought me, John. And I'm beginning to think you're not the tailor's dummy I took you for."

"But I never thought you anything of the sort," Olivant protested. "You struck me more as being rather like one of these intensely interested boys that are always trying to find out what makes things go, and why they can't go a whole lot harder. Even driving this car, you're wondering about that."

SHELBY half turned, and gave him a brief look in which there was a good deal of astonishment. "I think somebody must have told you about my tastes, John."

"Please don't detract from my perspicuity. Nobody has."

"Well, then, you're quite right about me. It's natural enough. I grew up with four brothers who were always building and experimenting with things. We had a workshop and sort of laboratory on the place. Two or three times it nearly burned us out. One of my brothers is in the bureau of mines—scientific research department—and the other is state chemist. So it's natural I should have a leaning that way. But I must say I'd like something more exciting."

"Such as what?"

"You'd laugh at me."

"Not I. It's no laughing matter when a girl suffers from the pangs of excitement hunger. Don't tell me you want a political career, to be a power behind the legislature or anything like that."

"No, I want real excitement, not the office sort. You said just now that I was like a boy, and so I am. A boy with his head stuffed full of movies and detective stories. I'd like to be a secret service agent. Isn't that what you'd expect of the daughter of a leading citizen and bank president of a peaceful city in the corn belt?"

"Why, yes," said Olivant. "It is. But why not? Jeanne d'Arc was dreaming over her flocks when she had the vision. The chances are, though, that she was dreaming of just that sort of thing. If she'd been a town girl, she wouldn't have been let dream at all."

"I'd like to be one of these scientific sleuths," Shelby confessed, "get my data in the laboratory, and then go out and fasten it on the one it would fit. I'm always building up adventures for myself, and the silly part of it is that I never in my whole life had anything happen that could possibly be called an adventure."

"A perfectly good reason for your craving," Olivant said.

THERE came at this moment the thrumming roar of an exhaust from the air above and behind them. A moment later there swam within their arc of vision, from under the hood, an airplane at no great height. It passed ahead in a zoom, then began for some reason best known to its pilot to emit fumes in what seemed to be a clumsy effort to write some message in the sky, which was a clear and glittering blue. But for one thing these fumes appeared to lack substance and were too light in tone, a sort of burnt orange, and for another, the pilot seemed to lack skill or confidence or experienced control of his plane. Olivant watched his futile maneuvers with surprise and contempt.

"Has that chap gone crazy with the heat? For one thing, he's nothing like high enough for sky writing, and for another his ink is too pale. What does he think he's up to anyway?"

"Perhaps he's come out here to practice where there aren't many to laugh at him."

The low flying plane bucketed off on its course, and disappeared. A little later it struck Olivant that Shelby's costly car was not behaving up to grade. Its firing became weak and uneven. The girl commented on it.

"This dry furnace heat and low barometer may not interfere with humans," she said, "but it seems to with gas engines. Knocks the firing silly. We had a day like this last week. The cars all lay down and three planes flying over not far from here couldn't manage to stay up. One hit with a good deal of a bump and flattened out two people and about an acre of corn. Nobody much hurt."

"Bad carburetting," Olivant said. "Extreme dryness and low barometer. I once heard Mr. Jedburgh say that up on the high mesas in Peru they have to use special carburetors." He looked ahead in the direction taken by the clumsily maneuvering airplane. "That may be the reason why this chap couldn't seem to do his stunt, and it might need a certain amount of humidity to make his writing in the sky distinct. Pity we can't have one element left unpolluted. Seems as if the moment man made a conquest of anything he starts in to mess it up."

"Some day," Shelby said, "the air will be all littered up with these things. We'll have to stop, look and listen, not only on both sides, but overhead."

"Progress has its drawbacks," Olivant said. "I often think I would rather have lived a hundred years ago. Except at certain rare moments, such as this, I hate most modern inventions."

Shelby looked at him surprised, then smiled.

"I know what you think," Olivant said, "that I am the typical modern of the effete east. But I'm only that by necessity."

"Have you ever tried to get away from it?" Shelby asked.

"No. Because it seemed to sneak up and mould me unawares. Besides, there's always a sort of nervous excitement about living in a big city."

"What was your service in the war?"

"I was a sort of diplomatic buffer. We called it liaison officer. The poilus called it embusque, which meant 'hider-out'." He did not add that a good deal of his hiding out had been a perfectly legitimate cover of bombproofs on what the poilus also called the "front of the front."

Shelby could not see him at all in any heroic capacity. The impression that he gave her was that of the highest distillation of American ease, idleness, and trivality She did not know anything about the great Jedburgh, but she thought it most likely that the use he found for Olivant would be similar to that of the young man's war service; a sort of polished deputy who had the entree everywhere and could discharge a mission gracefully, smooth the way, grease the skids, approach important people pleasantly, always ready with the soft answer that turneth away wrath—a business buffer. Olivant was pleasing to her because of a certain likable quality and the utter absence of anything to dislike about him, more negative than positive. A girl of less wealth and family and advantages might have been fascinated by him, but to Shelby he was no more than a symbol representing a certain type and hardly a man at all—a sort of swell supercakie, but an agreeable one.

THEY entered the little city rather abruptly, because, like many such, it jumped off from town to country, from neat, prosperous detached dwellings into farm land. It was then the dinner hour, that is to say, between half-past twelve and one.

"We'll go past the bank and pick up papa," Shelby said, and it seemed to Olivant that she spoke a little breathlessly as if excited for some reason that was not apparent. The scorching heat seemed suddenly to have increased, perhaps because of their moderated pace and the radiation from concrete that a Central African porter could scarcely have trod upon.

And yet, as Olivant had already observed, there seemed a curious exhilaration to it of a kind not disagreeable. It made him feel as if he had just indulged in three dry cocktails in quick succession. The blood had mounted to his head, and he was conscious of that sort of bodily limpness that may come with the first overstimulation. Here in the center of the city there was some slight activity, but not much. Then just in front of them a portly man with a red face who had started jay walking diagonally across the street between corners stopped suddenly and for no apparent reason directly in front of the car.

Shelby braked and swerved, came to a dead slow, and as she passed demanded angrily, "Are you tired of living, Mr. Long?"

Olivant, catching the dazed look on the man's face, thought his trouble must be synthetic gin, and said so.

"No," Shelby snapped. "I know him. He doesn't drink. Must be the heat."

As they drew up to the First National bank there was a good sized touring car standing directly in front of it. The driver had opened the hood and seemed to be looking rather stupidly at the motor. Shelby came to a stop with an impatient jerk just behind the car. She horned, breaking a municipal ordinance with the privilege of position. Nothing noteworthy occurred.

"I'll go in," Olivant said, and stepped down. At that moment the screened door of the bank, a handsome conventional modern edific, swung open and a man came out carrying a big suitcase in either hand. He made his leisurely way down the steps, and got into the car ahead. As he did so there came from around the corner—at least it sounded as if it were around the corner—such a noise as a worn bicycle tire makes when it bursts at a weak spot; not precisely a hiss, nor yet an explosion, but merely a faint muffled report.

The ground floor corner of the bank was occupied by a small up-to-date drug store with its elaborate soda fountain. As the man with the suitcases stepped into the car, the screened door of the drug store flapped behind another man who had just come out. One hand was in his breast pocket as if replacing a wallet. But Olivant happening to glance in his direction saw a faint wreath of smoke over his left shoulder.

IT is doubtful if most people would have detected it, or, doing so set any importance on a wisp of smoke emanating from a man coming out of a drug store. The unconscious cerebration of most people would have ascribed it to the last exhalation of a discarded cigarette.

But Olivan't mind was swiftly analytic, though few suspected it To trace his sequence of mental rapid firing, there was something like this:

A rich little city bank at a hot day's period of pause. A man coming out with two valises—a waiting car and the driver's face in the motor and his hands in his pockets—a concussion of sorts, followed by the appearance of another man who gave the singular impression of having just placed a lighted cigarette in his breast pocket.

THE AMAZING CRIME - - - - By Henry C. Rowland

The moral obligation of interference, if only to ask, "How come?" and then apologize.

In Olivant's excuse it may be said that the curious mental confusion he had noted while sitting placidly in the car was intensified by his wrenching at the door and descent from it into the glare. Also, the rush of a quick suspicion appeared to have sent his heart whirring like a partridge. He was, therefore, by no means well set as he stepped across the sidewalk to intercept the man who had just come from the drug store and whose two hands were now swinging free at his side. Olivant's rather vague intention was to lurch against him as if giddy, long enough to lay his palm against the textile over that inside pocket.

But his hand never got that far. The right one of the other compacted instantly into a fist, swung up from his thigh, and caught Olivant under the chin. Not only was the blow a clean knockout but there was a thrusting impulse behind it that carried Olivant's limp, sprawling figure directly under the front wheels of Shelby's car.

With scarcely any alteration of his pace, the man who had struck him down stepped into the waiting roadster. The driver and the man with the valises had slipped in simultaneously when, with no apparent carburetting difficulty, the car rolled off and gained quick momentum, heading down the main street that led into the open country.

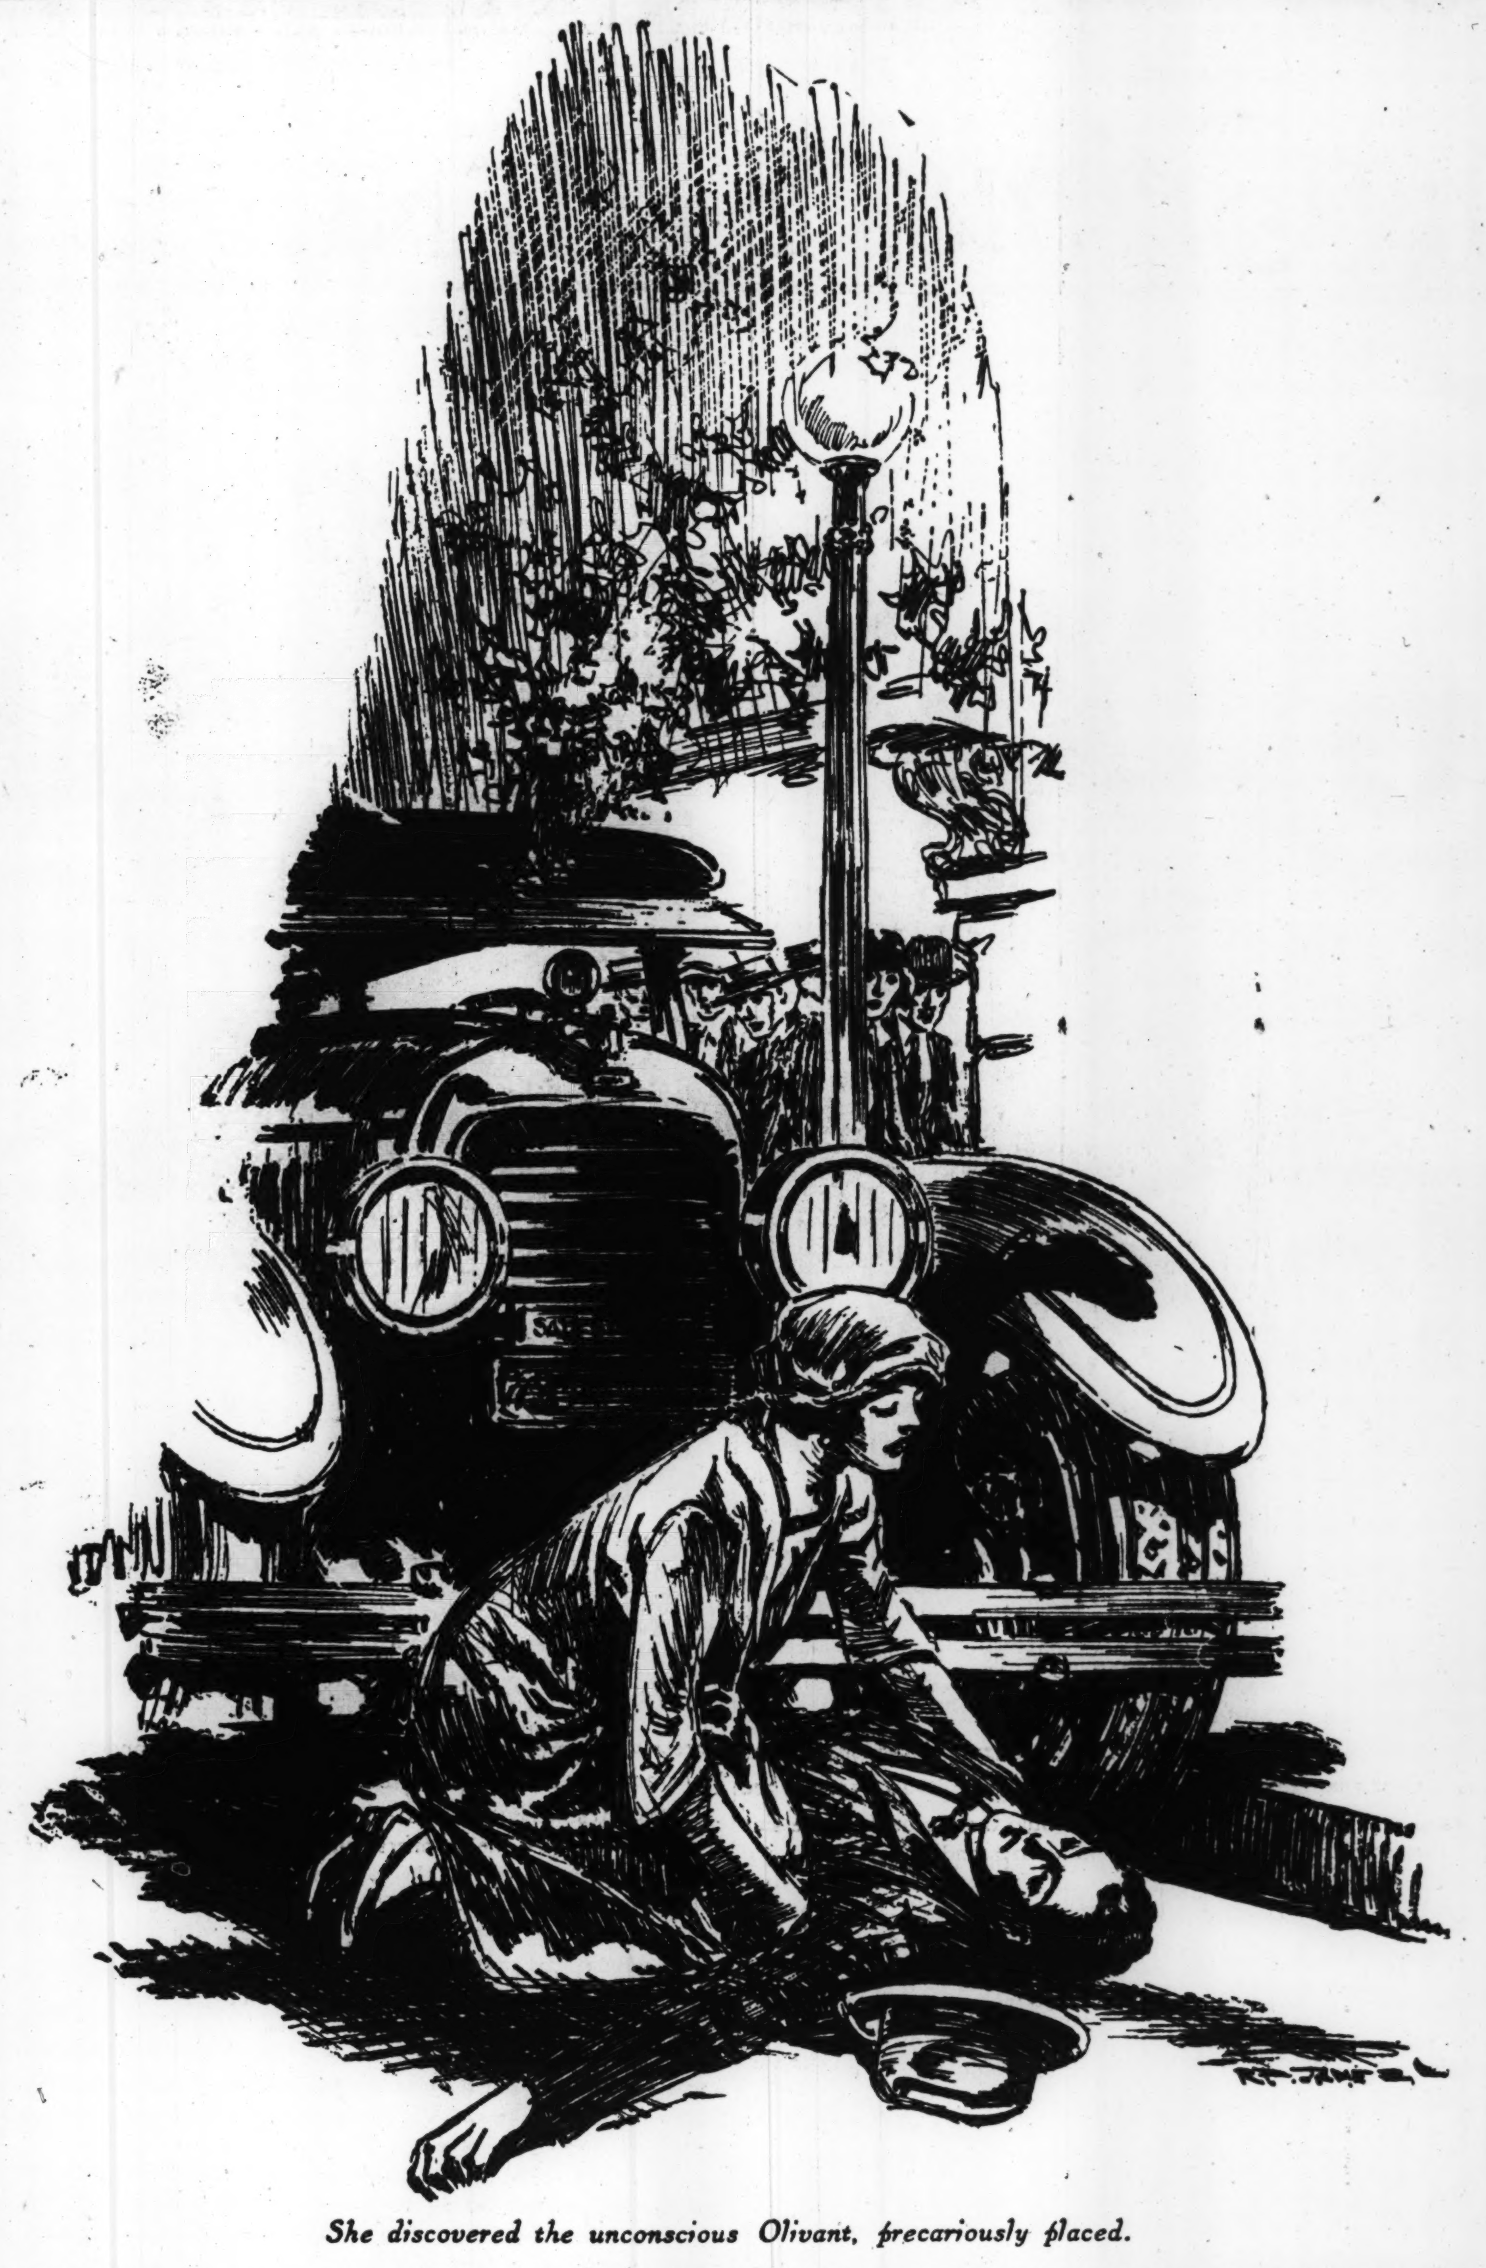
So here was precisely the sort of thing that Shelby, whose imagination was in many ways a boyish one, had often pictured herself as taking part in. The typical criminal adventure of the times, the kind of almost daily occurrence and report. The same raw stuff that was being brought off all over the country and in spite of its mediocrity—if daring crime can be that—so constant a theme in fiction and the movies. Perhaps the very sameness of this has resulted in a sort of mental apathy about it, like man eating tigers in remote Indian villages, or sharks in Polynesian waters, alligators in African rivers—any other constant pest.

It set Shelby aback, but only for an instant. She was young, mentally supple, courageous, and quick witted. Her immediate impulse was to start her motor and dart after the fleeing car. But there was Olivant's helpless body mixed up with her front wheels in a position that she could not see from where she sat. His neck might be directly under one of them, whether behind or in front of it. So she did not dare start off ahead or astern. It is hardly the thing to run over the neck or limb of a guest, even to rescue the plunder of one's father's bank, and, despite the sudden confusion of her brain, Shelby kept her wits. She flung open the door, leaped out, and discovered the unconscious Olivant to be indeed precariously placed, part of him against the front of a wheel, one sprawling arm behind the farther one.

Shelby grabbed at the nearest part of him to drag his body clear. The effort set her heart to pounding, less vigorously than in a suffocating palpitating fashion.

SHE was thus engaged, had nearly succeeded, in fact, when there came an ebullition of dazed humanity around her. People seemed to come buzzing from all sides, from across and up and down the street. It was an incoherent, rattled influx, the more remarkable because of its being composed of a clean cut, level-headed type of population. One might have excused or expected such confusion and lack of leadership in a crisis in a swarm of peasants or rabble of low grade excited aliens, but not in the descendants of Indian fighters, frontiersmen, keen business men, and, as would be the case in any American city of the sort, some few who had served overseas in the war. It was as described afterwards by one of these latter who made no effort at excuse: "Like we were all soused."

It was also shown that a member of the city constabulary who was stationed on that beat had stepped into the drug store to drink a glass of root beer. Happening to glance through the window, he had caught sight of a man coming out of the bank with a suitcase in either hand. This had led him to step out to investigate, when, with his hand on the latch, he had suddenly crumpled to the floor. The druggist, compounding a prescription in the rear, had heard the shuffle of his falling body and a sound like the slamming of the door itself or a bursting bicycle tire or something of the sort. At the moment this sound had made no impression on his mind. He had just served another customer at the soda fountain before going back to continue putting up the prescription, and he had not noticed whether or not this one had gone out.



She discovered the unconscious Olivant, precariously placed.

DURING the months of July and August the bank's doors were officially closed from twelve to one. There was, however, always somebody inside who might be summoned to serve a client driving in from the country and pressed for time. On this day, Mr. Poindexter and the cashier, Mr. Wallace, were in the bank, having been in consultation with one Colonel Van Doorn, late of the Royal Dutch Army Engineers and now an expert in mining properties and oil. Colonel Van Doorn was interested in the proposed Jedburgh syndicate, although not actually a capitalist. Under ordinary circumstances Mr. Poindexter would have ignored any summons at the door of the bank. But Colonel Van Doorn had left a few moments earlier to catch the westbound train and, as the bank president was expecting his daughter to pick him up on her way home with Olivant, he got up and went to the door on hearing the bell.

Mr. Poindexter, a fine type of American business man, found himself immediately confronted by a stranger who stepped inside the bank with a suitcase in either hand.

The door swung closed from a sweep of the intruder's foot. The bandit, with quiet apologies for the intrusion out of banking hours, these evidently intended for the ears of any other who might be there, invited Mr. Poindexter at the point of his pistol to walk back with him to the cashier's office where Mr. Wallace was likewise brought under the point blank range of his artillery.

The looting of the bank's funds was then conducted in what might at this present day be described as the orthodox or conventional manner. Under ordinary circumstances the plunder in specie would not have been any great amount. But as it happened, the bank had within the last two days received a part of its quota of treasury notes for the meeting of sundry cash transactions, payments that had also to do with the Jedburgh proposition that Mr. Poindexter had decided to take up. This fact might or might not have been known.

But whatever the extenuating circumstances, the fact [illegible]ained that the thieves had made a clean and easy getaway to a [illegible] out in the corn where an airplane had been awaiting them—t[illegible], it was thought, that had passed over just before making an a[illegible]ntly futile effort at some sort of aerial advertising. Quite a number admitted shamefacedly to having been lethargic witnesses of their escape. It was generally agreed that the airplane passing over had been a confederate whose object was to create a diversion at the moment of the robbery, then provide the means of escape for the bandits. This would explain what had appeared to be a foolish effort at sky writing at so low an altitude that the aviator could scarcely hope to make his loops without danger of crashing, while the lettering, even if made, would have been so close to earth as to be scarcely legible in whole.

But his passage over the city had been inaccurately timed, about half an hour before the robbery, so that it offered no excuse for the inaction that had so passively permitted the escape.

IT was here that an interesting psychology became conspicuous. Those present preferred to accept the stigma of supine behavior rather than to claim as extenuation an abnormal weather condition that might reflect unfavorably upon their local climate. Civic pride was stronger than personal. Of all those who might have been expected to arise to the occasion, only two had actually done so. One of these was the policeman in the drug store, a popular young man who had served with distinction overseas, and the other, Mr. Olivant. But Olivant did not come in for much credit because, if indeed his intention had been to interfere, he had proven such an easy victim.

It was also noted, though a little slyly, that the city's esteemed tower of strength, Mr. Poindexter, had displayed himself rather like a dazed and rattled overgrown boy.

While nobody could blame a man who on going to the door to speak with his daughter and say a word of welcome to a guest, finds himself abruptly confronted by an armed bandit and yields to the demands of this one, it was yet remarked that his immediately subsequent behavior was not such as might have been expected from so esteemed a leader. Mr. Poindexter had appeared to be hopelessly bewildered. He did not seem frightened or aghast, nor did he display the outraged fury that one would expect. In fact, he had not displayed anything at all. He had stared stupidly about, like a man suddenly awakened from his sleep, just after the episode, and inquired in a muddled way which way the thieves had gone.

Oddly enough, Mr. Wallace, the cashier, a nervous, alert, and high strung man, behaved in a manner similar, except that he darted here and there babbling futile questions such as to demand who the bandits were, what they looked like, just how long ago they had sped off, and asking if any action had been taken instead of proceeding immediately to take it himself. He wove in and out among a growing concourse equally confused and chattering, while the Jovian Mr. Poindexter stood like the statue of himself that some day might have been reared by his appreciative fellow citizens.

The druggist, a quiet but levelheaded little man, had rushed immediately to the side of the fallen policeman, leaving to those outside the raising of a hue and cry. Like many such pharmacists, the druggist had at one time been a local practitioner, so that instead of running out after the bandits he devoted his entire attention to the care of the young policeman.

Shelby, on the contrary, had proved herself the dominating figure of the situation. With a flushed face where one might have expected pallor, and a hard, incisive voice, she had first dispatched what had appeared to be the clearer heads to spread an immediate alarm by telegraph and telephone, then directed that the limp body of Olivant be carried into the drug store. He recovered presently, groggy and bewildered, but so far as the doctor could ascertain, with nothing worse than a severe concussion, when he was removed to the Poindexter home.

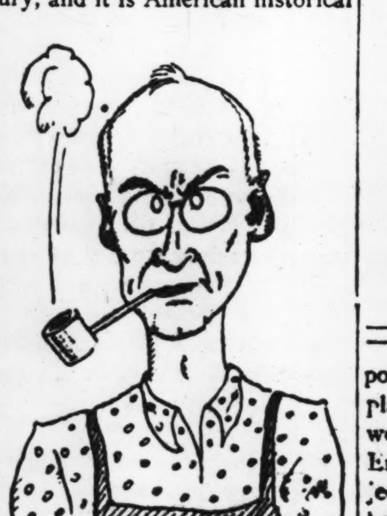
WITH "The Invisible Woman," Herbert Quick completes his trilogy of the middle west, begun with "Vandemark's Folly," and it seems to us, therefore, that the trilogy ends in a blaze of glory. For "The Invisible Woman" is a distinct triumph. It brings the saga of the American frontier to a close, with the close of the last century, and it is American historical romance at its best. The pioneer families introduced in "Vandemark's Folly" are set forth here in the younger generation of the '90s, and Miss Christina Thorkelson, daughter of Magnus Thorkelson and Rowena Fewkes, is the heroine.



Herbert Quick.

As Creede, the political power of those great open spaces, remarked to her: "Don't you ever forget, Christina, that you come of a race of people that planted states as older people planted trees. The frontier! It was what has made America. It has made Americans different from transplanted Europeans."

A magnificent adventure befalls Christina when she goes to work in Creede's law office as a stenographer, for that office is the plot-hatchery of great and secret politics. Christina, the "invisible" woman, discovers all their schemes and, like that other peasant girl, a certain Miss Joan, of Arc and other points, goes into battle. Only, Christina's is a pleasanter romance, and has a happier ending. "The Invisible Woman" is a big, honest, upstanding novel.

After reading "Messalina" by Vivian Crockett we are convinced that this Roman empress was the wickedest gal who ever poisoned a gentleman friend. Compared to her, Nero seems but a playful choir boy; and if her sins had been upon her own head she would have been round shouldered at fourteen. Mr. Crockett, of England, has created a biography embellished with emotional adjectives and perfumed verbs, wherein first century Rome is rebuilt before our very eyes, and we behold Messalina, wife of the emperor Claudius, stalking the streets with vine leaves in her hair and fire in her eye.

But she was wedded to a traveling man; that is, Claudius was away much of the time, and when at home he seems to have had a lot of serious drinking to do, so that Messy was left to look for bigger and better boy friends. And what an array of them she collected! Her little red book had more names in it than the Chicago telephone directory, and the windows of her palace bore no burglar alarms. Messalina—there was a woman!

The most remarkable book on India we have ever encountered is "Among the Brahmins and Pariahs" by J. H. Sauter, translated from the German by Barnard Miall. It is an amazing document, bringing us closer to the real India and the life of India than any other book has brought us; for it is not merely a volume of the impressions of a traveler or a foreign resident, but the bold and honest chronicle of a man who became a native—who sat with high priests on hill tops and prowled among the depths of the underworlds of reeking cities. It is a bald, unvarnished story of that orient which never appears disclosed to the occident. A terrible and beautiful book.

Here is a sprightly yarn for the restless romanticist, the bored business man, the capricious cabinet minister, et al. "Treasure Trail" by Roland Pertwee lives up to its title: it is a jolly adventure, and blows along with zest, not to say gusto. There is always a sparkle to the stories of Mr. Pertwee, and "Treasure Trail" is written just as such a tour de farce should be written. It is all about young Vernon Winslowe, who, discovering himself in a bad way financially, and in possession of a map that leads to buried treasure upon an island in the South seas, advertises for adventurers to accompany him on the gold hunt. From that moment forth there is not a dull moment—either for the hero or his fellow adventurers—or the gentle reader.

Pascal Covici has just brought out "The Sins of the Fathers and Other Tales," by George Gissing. These stories by the immortal author of "Henry Ryecroft" originally appeared in The Chicago Tribune in 1877, and lay buried for decades among The Tribune files. They were written by Gissing "in the twentieth year of his melancholy existence," Vincent Starrett writes in his introduction to the book, while Gissing was a penniless pilgrim in America.

If you missed that first volume of Alice Carrick's "Collector's Luck," do not miss her newest one, "Collector's Luck in France." Mrs. Carrick, who dwells in Daniel Webster's old cottage at Hanover, New Hampshire, is celebrated as an authority on antiques and her manner of telling about them, in charming, chatty letters, will catch the fancy of those, even, who would not know a Louis Philippe pressed glass cup from a Charles the Seventh candlestick. Mrs. Carrick's letters are gay and graceful, abounding in enthusiasm at the good fortune she finds, plucking priceless antiques for a few francs each from the fairs of Paris, and up and down the pleasant land of France.

Glenway Westcott, who not so long ago was hailed a poet in these parts, but who has since stormed the ramparts of Manhattan, comes forth now with a first novel—and a good one. "The Apple of the Eye," it is called. There is a fine sweep to the prose of this young poet; and his story of the farm lands of Wisconsin, of Hannah Madoc, who, after her tragic romance with Jules Bier, becomes "Bad Han," makes a first novel of unusual excellence.

Glenway Westcott.

Our initial, if somewhat tardy, acquaintance with E. L. Grant Watson came last spring when we read his nature book. But he is no longer writing about daises, he is now writing about passion flowers, and there is sin as well as cinema in the title of his new book, "Innocent Desires." To be quite frank, we are frightfully weary of sex in the books we have to read, and if the current fictionists do not let up on it we shall be forced to fall back upon the cleaner classics of Rabelais and Laurence Sterne. With "Innocent Desires" there is nothing innocent except the wide eyed reader who opens the book hoping to be amused. Grant Watson writes well, but he slaps on the sex with a trowel, whether it be a tale of the Australian bush or of ancient Greece. There are fourteen stories in the book, and if you are going to read it, first take the precaution to open all the windows.

The South Rebels Again

by H. L. MENCKEN

I.

FUNDAMENTALISM, Ku Kluxry, revivals, lynchings, hog wallow politics—these are the things that always occur to a northerner when he thinks of the south. They are all he sees when his eyes are cast across the Potomac. It seems to him that civilization is completely dead down there—that an empire almost as large as western Europe, and as rich as the Byzantium of the Isaurians, is snoring through the cultural night of Albania or Guatemala. He reads about the grotesque doings of Coca Cola bishops, of hordes of imitation Billy Sundays, of whole hierarchies of imperial wizards and illustrious goblins. He observes that Cole Blease has been elected to the United States senate, that Ma Ferguson is governor elect of Texas, that Williams Jennings Bryan has willed his bones to Florida. And he shrugs his shoulders.

In all this disdain there is some justice. The south, at bottom, deserves it. All over this great and puissant nation, of course, frauds and fanatics flourish, but nowhere else are they taken so seriously as in the late Confederacy. I try to think of a governor of Massachusetts or New York inviting a tin pot evangelist to the executive mansion and holding public orgies in the state reception room. It is impossible to imagine it—yet it happened in North Carolina. I try to think, again, of the president of a state university—say, in Michigan or Pennsylvania, or even in Nebraska—serving on a committee to welcome Billy Sunday. Again I buck—but it happened in South Carolina.

The south, indeed, still suffers from the goose-stepping that went with slavery. It still puts too much trust in prestige, position, authority. A plowhand admitted to holy orders instantly becomes an expert upon all ethical and sociological questions, however abstruse. A pedagogue is full of learning ipso facto; a bishop is divinely inspired. In most parts of the north a United States senator enjoys a rank somewhat like that of a banker or a bootlegger: he is under suspicion, but has the benefit of the doubt. In the south, despite the examples of a dozen Vardamans and Bleases, he yet carries around a certain ante-bellum dignity, and his views upon foreign exchange, the diversification of crops, and the destiny of the human soul are accepted with gravity.

II.

SUCH is the south as the north sees it. The picture in its main outlines, is probably correct enough. But important details are overlooked. What the north misses, in brief, are the scattered rebellions that now arise all over the land of cotton—the gallant efforts that small but pertinacious minorities make to break through the cultural fog, and let in some sanitary sunlight. Such minorities exist in every southern state, even the most backward. In some they still struggle desperately for a mere foothold, but in others they are out in the open, battling gallantly and effectively, and in a few they have already done excellent execution.

The excesses of the nether mob, in fact, forced them into action, and they are resolute in proportion to the density of the imbecility to be combatted. The south produced the Klan, but the south was also the first to fall upon the Klan. Is it so soon forgotten that the wizards and dragons swept Maine at the last election, and lost Texas? Or that the fight against the Invisible Empire in the Democratic national convention was forced and led not by the delegates from New York but by those from Alabama—that the most devastating of all the attacks made upon it from the floor came from a man from South Carolina? Or that its wave of malignant balderdash, striking two southern states, Virginia and Maryland, instantly broke and washed back?

In this department, of course, the battle has been mainly political—that is, it has been between rival job seekers—and sometimes the foes of the Klan have been almost as bad as its own kleagles, kligrapps, furies, terrors, and genii. But in other directions the division between the Davidsbund and the Philistines has been more clearly marked—so clearly, indeed, that the Philistines of all wings have massed for the common defense. Nowhere is that defense effective today. All over the south the minority is emancipating itself and having its say, and in more than one state it is making cruel practice upon the poor whites and their pastors. What one observes is the rise of a new aristocracy, and it is sounder than the old one because it is based upon better brains.

III.

IT would be possible to call an impressive roll of enterprises and personalities, taking in almost every state south of the Potomac—the appearance of the Reviewer at Richmond, of the Double Dealer at New Orleans; the revival of the Texas Review as the Southwest Review at Dallas (its first number contained a truly astonishing treatise on Texas politics by a Methodist preacher!); the multiplication of poetry magazines and other small Tendenz journals; the massive phenomenon of Cabell; the rapid recovery of the more intelligent southern newspapers from the Ku Klux, fundamentalist, and prohibition terrors; Mrs. Peterkin's rediscovery of the Negro in fiction; the new school of realistic history set up by Prof. John D. Wade at the University of Georgia; the sudden appearance of Negro writers of genuine dignity, notably Walter F. White.

But the whole movement may be best observed, perhaps, in one salient example—the launching of the Journal of Social Forces at the University of North Carolina, with a Georgian, Dr. Howard W. Odum, at the helm. This Odum was slow in coming to maturity and rebellion. He took his degree at Columbia fifteen years ago, and for a long while he was known only as the author of a single remarkable dissertation, "The Social and Mental Traits of the Negro." It was a book of real distinction, but it had no immediate successors. The author had disappeared into his native fastnesses, and was apparently lost with all hands. Nothing whatever came from him; nothing was heard of him. But finally, four years ago, he was called to the University of North Carolina, and there, in a short while, he began to make a stir. First he set up a school of public welfare, and began to make a realistic study of the state of Christian culture among the Tar Heels. Then he began to gather students about him, and to put them to the same work. Then he got help from outside the state. And then he established the Journal of Social Forces.

IV.

THIS journal comes out four times a year, and is bound in a drab paper that makes it look like a government report. But inside it is full of dynamite, for what it presumes to do is to upset all the assumptions upon which the thinking of North Carolina, and indeed of the whole south, has been grounded since the civil war, and to set up a new theory of the true, the good, and the beautiful upon a foundation of known and provable facts. For the first time there is a complete end to cant and sentimentality. For the first time the south is getting a whiff of the true scientific spirit.

I daresay Dr. Odum had some uneasy moments during the first days of his venture, but it was not long before he began to attract recruits, and now he has a band of earnest and competent workers about him, and his Journal is the most comprehensive and interesting publication of its kind, and by long odds, in the whole United States. One of the first collaborators he found was Gerald W. Johnson of Greensboro, one of the best journalists the south has produced in years. The result is that the Journal is not only soundly scientific but also well written. More, it is widely read, and the University of North Carolina is officially behind it, and so it seems likely to survive.

Its appearance is a phenomenon of the first importance, for what it reveals is the collapse of the old morbid sensitiveness of the south and the rise of a disposition to examine its problems anew and in a realistic manner. Dr. Odum is by no means a mere muckraker. He remains a thorough southerner, wholly devoted to the south. What he has introduced down there is simply the doctrine that the ancient evasions, the timeworn platitudes, the hoary sentimentalities have outlived their protective usefulness—that the south can now afford to look the facts in the face, and go about seeking remedies for its troubles without pretending idiotically that the patient is in the pink of health. It is a significant sign of the times that a southerner should have thrown himself into the propagation of that idea. It is a sign of far more significance that it should have been received not with yells for the police but with applause.

Other Odums hatch out day by day all over the late Confederacy. The very heat of the fundamentalist and Ku Klux fury is hurrying them out of the egg. I advise the nobility and gentry of the north to keep an eye on those regions, so black and desolate only yesterday. There are watch fires burning, and brave spirits ready for the barricades.

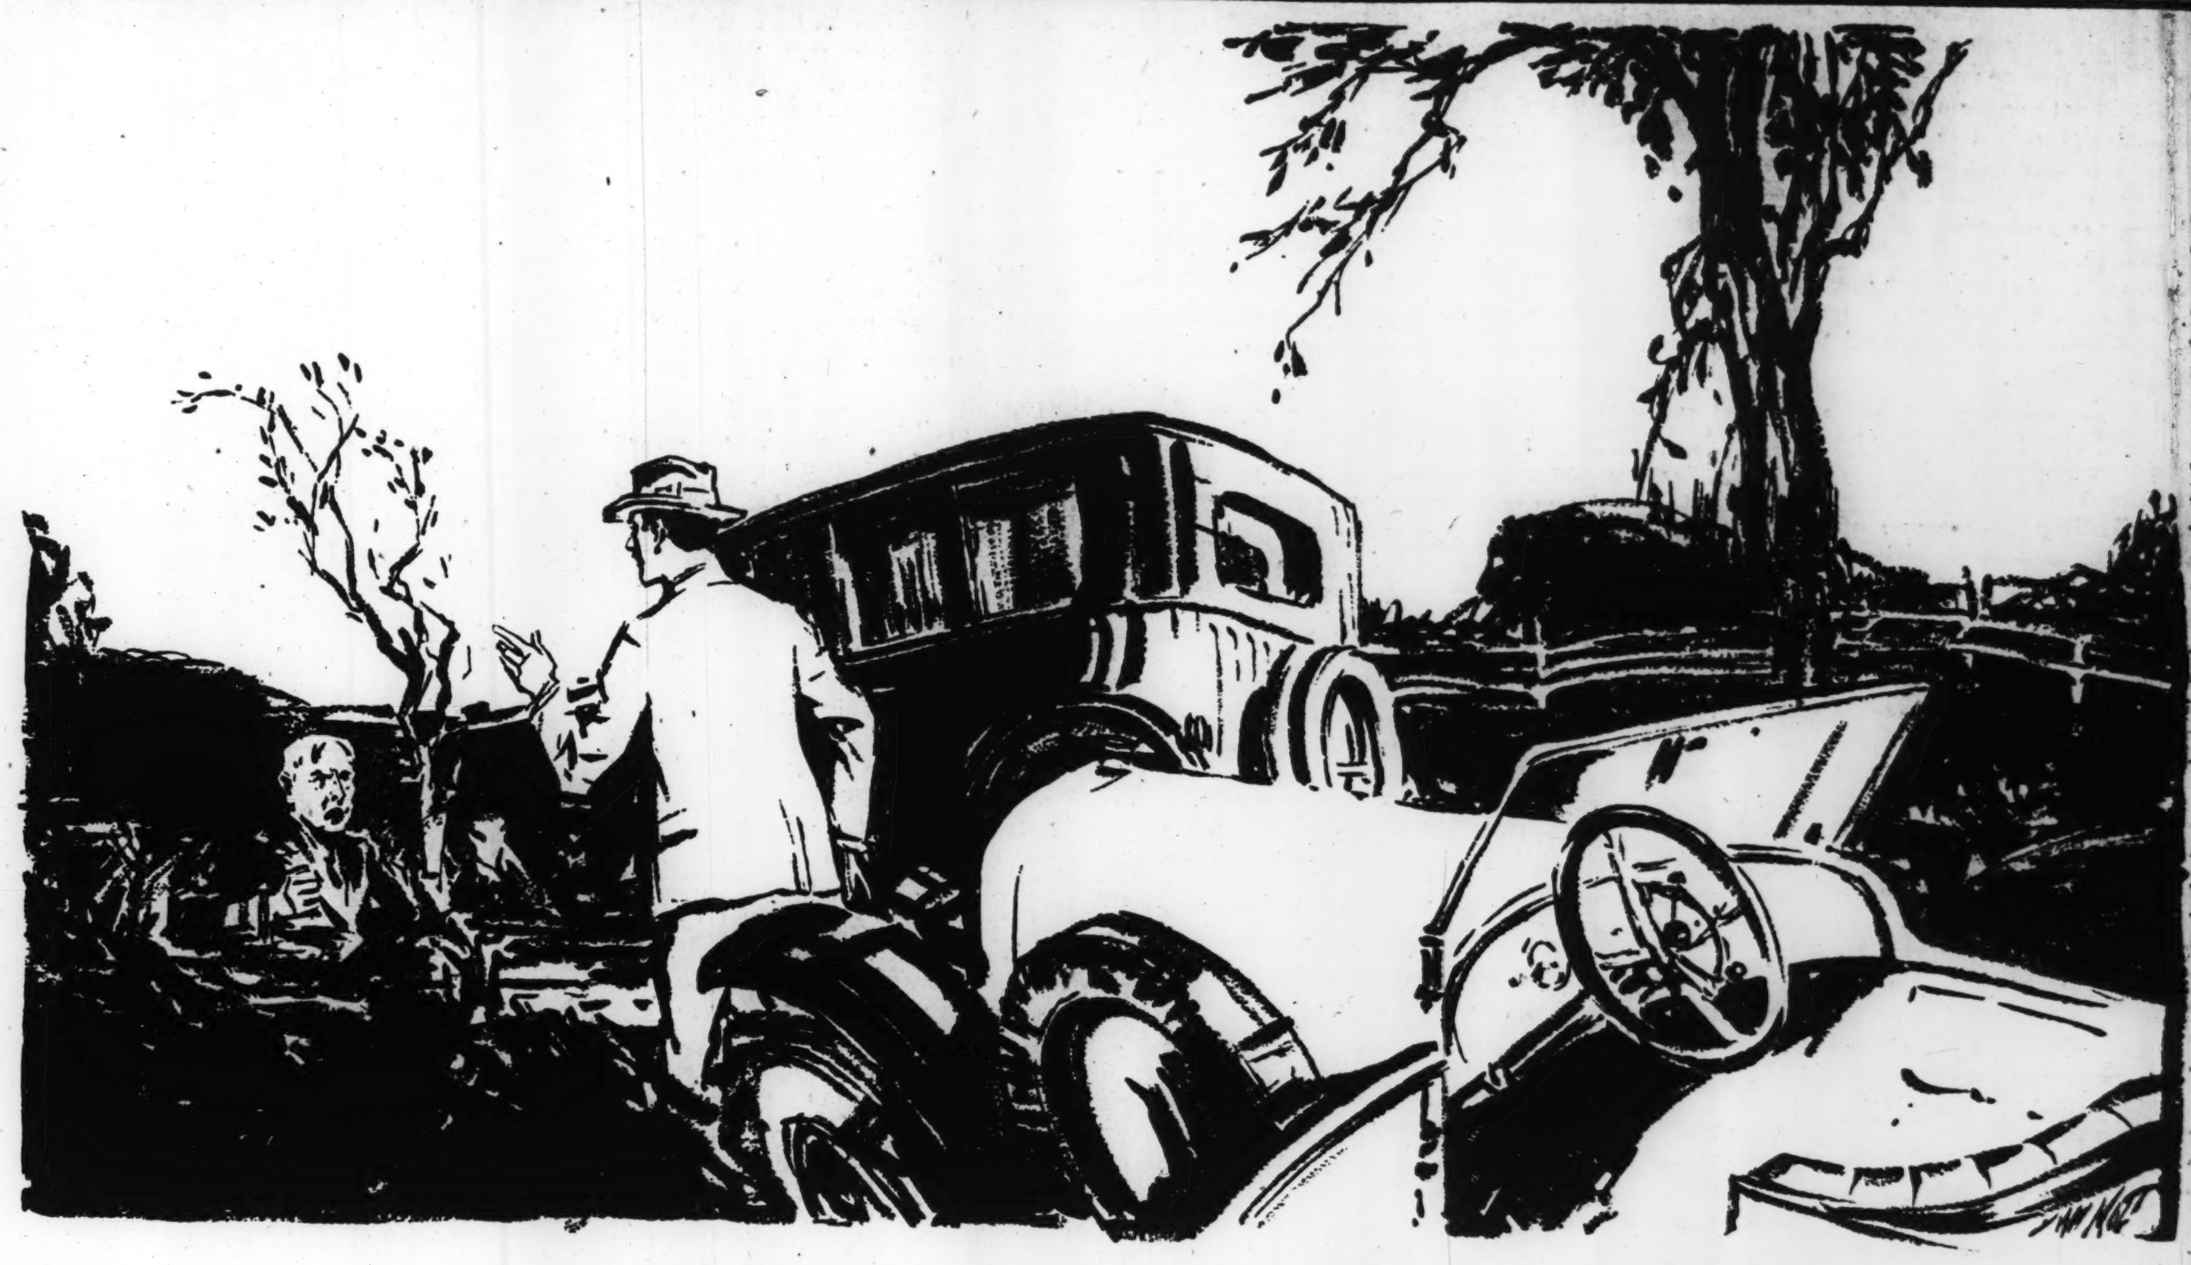
OPPORTUNITY TELEGRAPHS

by RUTH BURR SANBORN



Nature had not made Ephus Kip a handsome man, and his recent return to nature had marred what looks he had.

Wherein a Young Woman, by Expertly Mixing the Orders, Plunges a Young Veteran into a Battle of Business, with Love and Success to Gain.

MARK WAYLAND had been employed for four years in the sales department of the Brandon Rubber Manufacturing company when Armine Kilroy came there to work; he had been employed for four years six months and three days before he spoke to her. True, he had sometimes seen Miss Kilroy, but he had seen also on terms of equal intimacy and close personal association Mr. John Sylvester Brandon, president and controlling stockholder in the Brandon Rubber Manufacturing company, Mr. Timon S. Veets, the Brandon general manager, President Woodrow Wilson, and the Prince of Wales.

Armine Kilroy was the reception secretary at Brandon's and as such somewhat removed, both socially and geographically, from the Brandon proletariat. Her place was behind the big desk at one side of the reception hall, which, with its brasses and oriental rugs and marbles, was the pride of old man Brandon's heart. Her duties were at once simple and enormously important. The first was to take the company telegrams, which came to her by telephone, type them softly on a noiseless typewriter in an alcove behind her desk, and send them softly away by a boy in brass buttons and Brandon noiseless rubber soles. The second was to welcome the company visitors who came in over the Brandon rubber door mat in the vestibule and speed them onward to the general offices, or upward to the front office, according to their merits. The third was to be beautiful.

Reception secretaries at the Brandon Rubber Manufacturing company were chosen always for their beauty. Old man Brandon himself, who had rather an eye for feminine good looks, chose them, and he chose usually wisely and always well. There had been a long succession of lovely ladies in the Brandon reception room, but never one with Armine Kilroy's blazing beauty.

Armine Kilroy's hair was not exactly red, but neither was it any other accepted color for hair—so it was called red for short. She did it simply in a loose knot at the back of her head, and tried to make it lie flat after the manner approved for business women, but instead it waved about her face in a riot of lovely gaudy color. Under its vividness her face, with its gray eyes, its small straight nose, and pointed inquiring chin, had an air at once saucy and appealing and demure.

There was nothing of the professional in Armine Kilroy's manner. When she came forward to meet a visitor in the middle of the Bokhara rug which lay across the entrance, it was less as a reception secretary receiving a prospective customer to the Brandon Rubber Manufacturing company than as a hostess greeting a welcome guest.

Miss Armine Kilroy had never worked before, and showed it. Her manners were the manners which nine months earlier, before her father lost his money, she had employed in the Kilroy drawing room; her little airs and graces were the airs and graces of fashionable Penngrove. Brandon's found her a trifle aloof and altogether alluring and desirable.

At the back of the reception room a door led into the hall connecting with the general offices, and round this door the Brandon young men were wont to gather while they thought of excuses to speak, be it ever so briefly, with Miss Kilroy. No one could have been nicer to her many back door callers than she; no one could have welcomed them more cordially nor talked to them more entertainingly, and no one could have been more utterly discouraging. The question of seeing Miss Kilroy home was ably taken care of by a young man named Leigh who stopped for her every night at 5 o'clock in his Sutherland super-six.

MARK WAYLAND was not among those who visited Miss Kilroy during office hours, or at any hour at all. His associates at Brandon's would have told you that Wayland was a quiet cuss who didn't give a rap about anybody and wanted to be left strictly alone. This statement, like many summaries of character, had just enough of truth in it to make it entirely false. It was quite by chance that Mark Wayland and Miss Armine Kilroy met for the first time.

Miss Kilroy had of late begun to suspect that William Cadey, who delivered telegrams, committed their contents to memory before he delivered them. When, therefore, a message of considerable importance came in for Mr. Crusby, manager of general sales, she took it to him herself. There was a little stir in the sales department when Miss Armine Kilroy pushed open the door—with the Brandon rubber husher across the top—and stepped inside. Armine felt the stir because she was a beautiful woman accustomed to admiration, but she felt also a certain tenseness in the atmosphere. In an instant she saw the reason.

The sales department was a huge room containing some forty-odd desks ranged in rows and facing toward the front like desks in a schoolroom. They had once faced the other way, but Mr. Crusby, for purposes of better surveillance, had had them turned round. The front of the room was partitioned off with a railing and a swing gate, and behind this fence Mr. Crusby had his glassed-in private office.

He was not in his office now, however; he was standing just inside the railing, one clutching hand on the swing gate. On the other side of the rail stood Mark Wayland. It was characteristic of Mr. Crusby that he should flay his subordinates in public.

Mr. Crusby was a little man, lean and dry, as if the goodness had been squeezed out of him. His face was clever, rather than kindly; cunning, perhaps, rather than clever. When he talked it was with a curious snapping motion of his jaws, oddly suggestive of movie kineograms.

"Say, look here," snapped Mr. Crusby. "Who's running this office anyway? That's what I want to know!"

Mark Wayland was silent.

"Answer me," snapped Mr. Crusby.

"You are," said Wayland. His voice was low but distinct.

"Well then!" said Mr. Crusby. "That was my impression! But I'm glad to get your valuable opinion! Now are you going to carry out my orders the way I give them to you? Or aren't you?"

"Yes," said Mark Wayland.

It was a thoroughly humiliating scene—like a scene in a classroom between a bullying teacher and a stupid, refractory child. A warm embarrassed color swept into Armine Kilroy's cheeks and made her lovelier than ever.

Mark Wayland also flushed, but the flush was not becoming; it was a wafe of angry red that crept up about his collar, and crimsoned his ears, and settled in heavy patches across his cheek bones. He did not look at Armine Kilroy, but she knew he had seen her. As he went back to his desk he folded and refolded a piece of paper with which he had fumbled all during the painful, one-sided interview, and he did not lift his eyes from the important business of folding it squarely from corner to corner.

Mark Wayland was a contradiction and a misfit and a disappointment. He was a tall man, but he slouched a little as if to make himself look shorter; he was broad shouldered, but his shoulders sagged forward and downward in a line oddly out of plumb. He had the features for good looks and yet he was not good looking. His dark, clear cut brows had a heavy frown between them; the firm line of his chin was lost against his collar; the steadiness of his eyes seemed of use only in looking steadily at the floor. Armine Kilroy was sorry for him, but she despised him, too. She did not understand what manner of man this was. Armine Kilroy was a lady, but her great-great-great-grandfather had been Fighting Jock Kilroy of the Scottish downs.

She turned coldly to Mr. Crusby.

"A telegram for you, Mr. Crusby," she said.

There was that in the poise of her gesture as she held it toward him and let him come to get it, in the small but definite upward tilt of her chin, that indicated exactly what she thought of Mr. Crusby, general sales manager. Mr. Crusby, however, did not notice.

"Wait a minute," he said, "and I'll give you the answer."

Armine Kilroy paused on her way to the door—very cool and self-possessed in white tailored linen.

"I'll send a boy for it, Mr. Crusby," she said—and went out.

Nevertheless, the next day, when a second telegram came in for Mr. Crusby on the same important subject, Miss Kilroy again delivered it in person. Throughout the entire department there was only one person who did not look up. In the second row Mark Wayland bent, if possible, a trifle lower over scattered Brandon billheads; only the tightening of his lips indicated that he knew any one had come in. Several glanced covertly at his bowed head; Armine's second appearance recalled the scene of the day before. Apparently it recalled the matter also to Mr. Crusby. He stopped in the middle of his telegram.

"Where's that check list, Wayland?" he snapped. "Is it going to take you all day to get it ready?"

"Just a minute," said Mark Wayland, without looking up.

IN view of the preceding events, the thing that happened the next day was all the more surprising. It was during the lunch hour, and Armine, engrossed in the final chapters of "Unto the Third and Fourth Generation," had sent away all visiting young men and settled herself to read. Outside was the heat and noise of the Brandon recreation grounds, but inside the reception hall it was cool and dim and quiet; the marble stairs—with Brandon rubber treads on every one—wound upward to the closed door of the front office. Armine felt secure from interruption.

Suddenly, however, there was a noise in the corridor outside her door, the sound of voices, and a knock. The knob turned.

"Come on," some one said. "It's all right."

Then the door swung wide, and a man stood on the threshold; she recognized him at once as the unfortunate Mr. Wayland of general sales. With one hand he propelled in front of him Armine's messenger boy, William Cadey.

Mark Wayland smiled.

"All right," he prompted. "Just what I told you. Now—'Miss Kilroy . . .'"

William Cadey hesitated, torn between his desire to turn an honest penny and his awe for the lovely Miss Kilroy.

"'Miss Kilroy . . .'" Wayland prompted him again.

William took a great breath.

"Miss Kilroy," he blurted, in a spasm of resolution and embarrassment, "M' I int'duce Mr. Wayland."

Mr. Wayland smiled again, and bowed.

OPPORTUNITY TELEGRAPHS

By Ruth Burr Sanborn

"For the proprieties," he said. "How do you do, Miss Kilroy? Thank you, William."

He placed a folded bill quite openly in William's hand, pushed him out again into the hall, and came across to Armine Kilroy's chair. He walked badly, with his shoulders slouched forward, but he smiled as he came—a shy, apologetic, ingratiating smile.

"May I stay?" he asked.

Miss Kilroy touched the pages of her book.

"I was reading," she suggested.

"I know you were," said Mark Wayland, "before I came."

Something in his tone, perhaps a suggestion that reading was all very well if you had nothing better to do, rather annoyed Miss Kilroy.

"It's exciting here at the end," she said. "I wanted to see how it came out."

"All right," said Mark Wayland. "Go on and finish it. I don't mind waiting."

He strolled away down the length of the room, and began to turn over the magazines on the table, while Miss Kilroy bent again to the "Third and Fourth Generation." And suddenly, to her surprise, she found the excitement gone out of it. She was aware that Mr. Wayland was not studying the current literature, but was leaning against the table frankly watching her. Armine was wearing a white skirt and sweater, and a white scarf with green ends, and she knew she looked extremely well. Nevertheless, the steadiness of Mr. Wayland's gaze distracted her.

"For goodness sake, Mr. Wayland," she said, "come over here and sit down. You make me wild, standing there, staring."

"I beg your pardon," said Mark Wayland. "It was rude. But I thought it was the quickest way."

"O!" Armine gasped, outraged.

"And besides," he continued, "I'd much rather look at you than at anything else."

He sat down in the chair at Armine's side—absurdly self-possessed—and talked to her. It was only the arrival of old man Brandon, who did not allow visitors in the reception room, that drove him away at last, and even then he stopped at the door for an additional remark.

"Wait for me tomorrow noon," he said. "I want to see you again."

MISS ARMINE KILROY did not exactly wait for Mr. Wayland the next noon; she did not need to, for Mr. Wayland was delightfully prompt. The twelve o'clock bell, indeed, had hardly stopped ringing and the vibration was still in the air, when he appeared.

"Since Mahomet is forbidden to come to the mountain," he said, "will the mountain please come out with Mahomet?"

"I don't think it's very nice," Miss Kilroy suggested, "for you to call me a mountain."

"It takes as much faith," said Mark Wayland, "for me to think that you will come to lunch with me as it would to remove a whole mountain range."

In spite of his words there was something in his manner which indicated that he had the necessary faith. He smiled down at her as he had done the day before, a pleasant, ingratiating smile. Armine found herself smiling back.

Up to that moment it had been no part of Miss Armine Kilroy's plan to go anywhere with Mr. Wayland. It was one thing to have the young men at Brandon's come on forbidden visits to the reception hall; it was quite another to walk out with one of them openly into the blazing gossip of the Brandon noon hour.

"Coming?" asked Mark Wayland.

"I don't believe," began Armine.

Mr. Wayland paid no attention. He smiled again—and held the door for her.

"Coming?" he repeated.

And, to her own complete astonishment, Armine Kilroy went.

Often after that Mark Wayland and Armine Kilroy lunched together in one of the downtown tea shops and walked together afterward to the limit of their one hour tether. At the end of a month they knew each other, in a way, rather well. In a way they did not know each other at all. Mark Wayland looked up to Armine as the one perfect being, whose chair he was unworthy to draw out while she settled herself at the lunch table; Armine, in spite of herself, looked down on Mark Wayland as a man of no spirit who had taken Mr. Crusby's insults and had not answered back. There was nothing in Armine Kilroy that could comprehend this attitude; there was nothing in Mark Wayland that could explain it. Indeed, he never tried to explain it, even to himself.

As a matter of fact, Mark Wayland was not shy; he was not diffident; he was not even, by nature, particularly self-effacing. But he had a profound conviction in regard to his own lack of business ability, and this conviction had been immensely strengthened by a touch of shell shock in the war and four years and six months with Mr. Crusby. He had no confidence in himself, and inspired no confidence in others. At the time when Armine Kilroy came to the Brandon Rubber Manufacturing company, Mark Wayland occupied the general position of office door mat. He did the odds and ends that no one else would do; he worked overtime when no one else would work; he bore the blame for other people's mistakes. When he had ideas about the business, he did not mention them.

It was something of the old Mark Wayland of the days before the war that had brought him to Armine's office the first time; that—and the way that she had looked at Mr. Crusby; that—and the fact that she was Armine Kilroy and he could not keep away.

ARMINE found Mark Wayland, as others had found him before her, a puzzle and a contradiction. And one day she told him so.

It was August and very hot. Wayland and Armine had come back early, and had found a deserted place to sit in the hot shade of the main factory bell tower. A screen of lilac bushes, dusty and disheveled now that spring was over, hid them from passersby. Armine, in crisp gray linen, looked indescribably fresh and cool and dainty—the small upward tilt of her chin seemed to defy the weather to make her uncomfortable. There was no defiance about Mark Wayland. He sat quite still beside Armine, with his hands clasped loosely between his knees; Armine sensed depression rather than relaxation in his attitude.

"Mark," she said suddenly, "I don't understand you."

She did not seem to notice that she had used Mr. Wayland's given name for the first time, but Mark himself was conscious of it in every tingling nerve in his body. He struggled to bring the conversation back to the casual.

"That's a good line," he said.

But Armine, like a true Kilroy—with hair inclined to red—was not to be eluded.

"It's a good line when it's a line," she said coolly, "and one I've often used. But it's true when it's true, and that's now—I don't understand you. Sometimes I think there are two of you."

"A dual personality," Mark suggested to please her.

But Armine did not tease.

"That's it," she said. "Sometimes you're just as nice as you can be, and sometimes you're the world's worst worm. And sometimes you come ordering me about as if you were a king in Babylon, and sometimes you let Mr. Crusby order you about as if you were a Christian slave."

The dark color swept into Mark Wayland's face and burned there as it had done that other day in the sales department. All the inhibitions of a lifetime sprang up to keep him from answering in his own defense.

Armine thought he was angry with her. But Mark Wayland was not angry; rather, he was touched that she had thought enough about the matter to scold him. When the bell rang at the end of the noon hour he helped her up gently, one hand under each of her bare elbows; as she stood beside him he did not at once release his hold. The clasp of his fingers was warm and strong—possessive. Armine stiffened a little against it; she did not mean to let Mark Wayland kiss her.

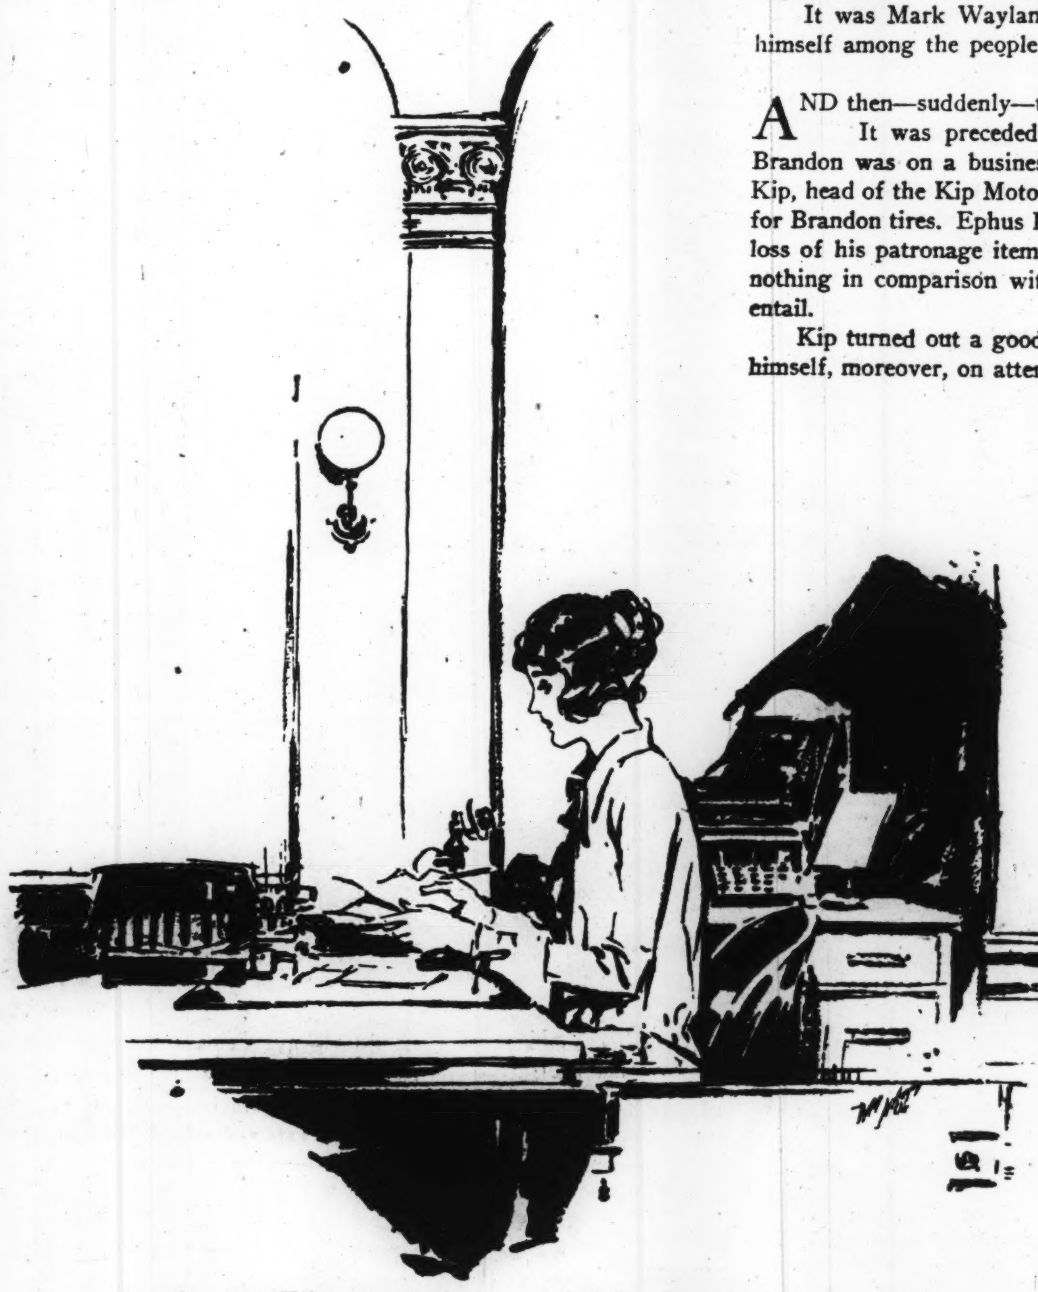
But Mark Wayland did not try.

"May I walk home with you tonight?" he asked instead.

Armine shook her head.

"Why?"

Armine Kilroy—Armine, the poised, the self-sufficient, socially sufficient Armine—hesitated. She had a sudden wild helpless feeling that in a moment Mark Wayland would command her to go with him, and that she should go before she could stop herself. She stumbled over her answer.



Armine Kilroy, of course, took Mr. Brandon's telegram.

"Why," she said, "why, Leigh's coming for me. He always does. I—I thought you knew."

"Mr. Lee," said Mark politely.

Armine corrected him.

"Not Mr. Lee," she said. "Leigh. Leigh Hedges. You know." She stopped.

"Yes," said Mark Wayland.

He knew. Every one in Penngrove knew who Leigh Hedges was—heir to the Hedges name and the Hedges millions.

"We're engaged," said Armine starkly.

It was as if a veil dropped suddenly across Mark Wayland's face, shutting him in as he was accustomed to shut himself in during business hours. There was an oddly pinched look about his lips.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "I didn't know. Perhaps we'd better hurry in. We'll be late."

MISS KILROY and Leigh Hedges dined that night at the Avelon, forty miles from Penngrove, and rode together afterward. Leigh Hedges was rather a handsome youth in an idle, well dressed way, and had the reputation of being a party all by himself and no end of a good fellow. He drove with one hand—extremely fast—and the car careened wildly on the curves; the excitement of swift motion went to Armine's head like wine. They were very merry together.

On their return Armine said she was tired and would not let Leigh come in, but she kissed him good-night in a matter of fact way.

"Goodness," she said, "I've kissed you so much now that I won't get a bit of kick out of it when we're married."

Leigh laughed uproariously at that—she had known he would. Then he kissed her again.

"By the way," he said, "when did you say we were going to be married?"

"O, I don't know," said Armine. "Don't ask me to decide anything tonight. It's too hot."

It was no fault of Leigh Hedges' nor of Armine's own upbringing that she had gone to work at the Brandon Rubber Manufacturing company at the time of the big bank failure that had swept away her father's fortune. She had been engaged to Leigh Hedges for two years, and the obvious thing was to marry him at once. Armine Kilroy, however, never did the obvious thing. She would marry Leigh, of course, by and by, but first she was going to work. She said she liked it, and that was true. Armine Kilroy had spent nineteen brilliant, spectacular years looking for something different, and she had never found anything quite so different as the Brandon Rubber Manufacturing company.

Thinking of all this that night after Leigh went she came in her thoughts to Mark Wayland—because he was different too. She despised him no less than she had done at first, but she understood him, she thought, a little better. She said to herself aloud, as if to impress it on her mind, that he was an interesting case.

After that Armine thought often about Mark Wayland, and arrived by degrees at what she thought was rather a good understanding of his case. Perhaps she thought of him the more because she seldom saw him.

"You know," she said to him once, "what you need is a chance."

Mark Wayland smiled, but it was a bitter smile that twisted the corners of his lips without being reflected in his eyes.

"Interesting," he said with an attempt at lightness, "but not true."

"Yes, it is true," Armine contradicted him. "What you need is a great big opportunity to come along and wake you up, and then you'd do something wonderful. You've got it in you to do surprising things."

They were standing by a window in the Brandon corridor looking out at a dripping September day. Armine was in front of Mark, her back to him. As she talked, Mark Wayland's hands came up and hovered for an instant about her shoulders; he bent his head, and the bright loose strands of Armine's hair swept across his cheek. If Armine felt the imminence of his touch, she gave no sign. And suddenly Mark Wayland let his hands drop and stepped back, a strange rigidness through his whole body. He was angry at Armine Kilroy and at himself for making it so hard. When he spoke, there was a curious rigid quality also in his voice.

"Don't," he begged her. "Don't say that. That's what all the failures say—that what they needed was a chance. Miss Kilroy, opportunities come to the people who deserve them."

It was Mark Wayland's creed. Mark Wayland did not class himself among the people who deserved—anything.

AND then—suddenly—the opportunity came.

It was preceded by a catastrophe. Mr. John Sylvester Brandon was on a business trip to the Pacific coast, when Ephus Kip, head of the Kip Motor corporation, canceled his standing order for Brandon tires. Ephus Kip was Brandon's biggest customer. The loss of his patronage item was in itself bad enough, but it was as nothing in comparison with the indirect effects such a loss would entail.

Kip turned out a good car and everybody knew it. He prided himself, moreover, on attention to the details of equipment; he was fond of saying that the best was none too good for him and if there was anything better he wanted it. The little line that by special arrangement all the Kip advertising carried—"Every Car Has Brandon Tires; and You Know What That Means"—had put more money into the Brandon coffers than any one except John Sylvester Brandon knew. Ephus Kip's canceled order was going to take a large part of this money out again.

Rubber door hushers and rubber stair treads are all very well, but they were not where John Sylvester Brandon made his fortune. It has been estimated that a good active family of average means will wear out one hundred and twelve tires while it is still scraping its boots on the same old doormat. The things Old Man Brandon said when he heard that Ephus Kip had given up Brandon tires for Treadwells were enough to make the blue Pacific green with envy.

Armine Kilroy, of course, took Mr. Brandon's telegram when it came in. She scribbled it down on the pad at her elbow, and when she had finished and hung up the telephone receiver, she read it through slowly twice as if to make sure of its contents. Plainly she was excited. She almost ran into the alcove behind her desk where the typewriter was, and typed out the message with all the speed she could muster. Then she called William Cadey and gave him the folded yellow blank.

"General sales," she said.

Half way down the hall, William Cadey stopped behind a convenient post and read the telegram. For an instant his eyes widened with astonishment.

When he opened the door of the general sales department, Mr. Crusby was, of course, watching; it was amazing, when you stopped to think of it, that Mr. Crusby ever had time to do anything but watch. He made in the direction of William Cadey a gesture similar to that by which it is usual to indicate to one's dog that he is to bring the stick and lay it at your feet.

William Cadey did not see the gesture. He walked straight past Mr. Crusby in his glass case, and down the middle of the Brandon rubber aisle tread until he came to Mark Wayland, bent double over his desk in the second row. He laid the telegram before him.

"For you, sir," he said.

Mark Wayland started; he opened his mouth to say that there must be a mistake. Then something not unlike respect in William Cadey's manner stopped him.

He picked up the telegram and read it through—quickly. Then he read it through again—slowly. Then he read it through a third time most slowly indeed. Then Mark Wayland did something that he had not done since he had been employed in the general sales department of the Brandon Rubber Manufacturing company—he drew himself up to his full height. It was as Armine said. There were two Mark Waylands, and the coming of the telegram was the signal which banished Mark Wayland, Mr. Crusby's subordinate, and put in his place Mark Wayland, the personable young business man with ideas of his own. He rose.

"All right," he said to William Cadey. "Thank you."

And then to Mr. Crusby: "I'm going off on some business for Mr. Brandon. I may be gone some time."

Mr. Crusby snapped his jaws several times in rapid succession, but no words came; the gesture made him look more than ever like a kineogram.

"Say, look here," he managed to jerk out at last. "What do you mean by that?"

"I mean," said Mark Wayland clearly, "exactly what I say."

TWO minutes later Mark Wayland burst into the reception room; Armine Kilroy sprang up to meet him. Even Armine, although she knew exactly what was in the telegram, was amazed at the change that it had made. Mark Wayland's head was no longer bent, his chin no longer sagged against his collar, his eyes no longer sought the floor. The worried frown between his brows was a straight little line of determination. There was confidence in his face because some one else had showed confidence in him.

"Isn't it wonderful?" said Armine.

Her cheeks and eyes were bright, the hand that she held out to Mark was ever so slightly unsteady. Mark Wayland was unreasonably pleased at her excitement.

"Yes," he said. "It's wonderful. Amazing, too. I can't believe it."

He opened his hand and spread out the crumpled ball of Brandon's telegram before them both.

"Kip contract canceled," it read. "Am returning at once. See Kip in Boston and make him defer action till my return. Depend on you to hold him off five days. Know you can do it if anybody can.

"JOHN SYLVESTER BRANDON."

"Amazing," Mark repeated. "Why, I didn't suppose Brandon had even heard of me."

Armine laughed at him.

"Mr. Brandon doesn't miss a lot," she said. "Don't you suppose he knows you have been working overtime all summer patching up mistakes that you didn't make? Listen, Mark. Here's that chance I said you needed—go on and take it."

"I'm going," said Mark Wayland.

MARK WAYLAND took the night train for Boston, and at ten minutes past nine the following morning presented himself in the outer office of Ephus Kip. A boy took in his card. At twelve minutes past nine he brought it out again.

"Mr. Kip's busy," he said. "Can't see you."

"I'll wait," said Mark.

He waited.

At 9:30 he sent in his card again. He sent it also at 9:45, 10, 10:15, 10:30, 10:45, and 11. Then he crossed the boy's palm with paper.

"What's the joke on this, anyway?" he inquired.

"No joke," said the youth. "Mr. Kip's busy."

"What's he busy doing?" Mark asked.

James Bean, Mr. Kip's office boy, held Mark's largess to the light, and snapped it several times to make sure that it was good. It was the look on Mark Wayland's face, however, rather than the feel of Mark Wayland's money, that decided him. Mark Wayland had acquired over night the look of one accustomed to being on the winning side, and it was the winning side with which James Bean chose always to be affiliated.

"He's busy smokin' a cigar," he said. "Say, honest, boss, you'll never get to see him if you wait forever; he thinks you come from Brandon's. He's goin' off at twelve o'clock, anyway."

"Where?"

"I dunno," said James Bean. "He's goin' in his car. He said did you send in that card once more, he'd call a cop."

"Is that all?" asked Wayland.

"No," said James Bean with precision. "He said that he'd see you in hell and not before."

Mark Wayland started for the door.

"Like enough," he said shortly. "But you tell Mr. Kip one thing from me. I'll see him, if I have to go to hell to do it."

Mark Wayland, in spite of his defiance, walked out of Mr Kip's office with somewhat the feeling of one who has just fallen from a great height and finds himself still alive. In thirty-five minutes Ephus Kip would be leaving Boston and taking Mark Wayland's opportunity with him. It was no part of Wayland's scheme to let him get away with it. And then in a flash of what in women is called intuition and in men is called constructive thought, Mark Wayland knew where Mr. Kip's business trip was going to take him. He was going to meet Trenton. Some time before that he had to meet Mark Wayland.

Mark Wayland took his hat in his hand and ran down Boylston street; those who saw him pass picked him for a coming champion. He did not stop for traffic nor for pedestrians; he did not stop for anything until he flung open the door of the nearest Kip motor agency.

"How do you do," said Mark Wayland. "Have you got a Kip car ready to run?"

The salesman bowed. He had been trained not to show more surprise than he could help.

"We've got a roadster," he began.

"I'll take it," Mark interrupted. "Get it out. I've got to be gone inside of ten minutes."

Afterward none of them could understand how they had let it happen. Inside of ten minutes they had given a car to a perfectly strange young man, without references or means of identification, and had received in return his personal check for five hundred dollars and a promise—signed by himself—that the Brandon Rubber Manufacturing company would pay the balance. It is amazing what a nice young man with a winning manner and the air of owning the earth can get away with.

AT two minutes before twelve, Mark Wayland brought his car to a stop not far from the big Kip limousine that stood in front of Ephus Kip's office. The presence of James Bean, beside it, holding the door open, assured him he had made no mistake. He got a look at the tires, and saw that they were Trentons.

Presently Ephus Kip himself came down, and got in, and drove away. Immediately behind him drove Mark Wayland.

In five minutes Wayland had exceeded his authority, his pocketbook, and the speed laws of Massachusetts, but he did not care. In the car before him rode opportunity.

Mr. Kip left the city and drove straight north. Mark Wayland had never thought of himself as a conservative driver, but he found that any pace at which he had ever driven before was midway between a crawl and a standstill. Mr. Kip was what is known as a road eater. It had originally been Wayland's plan to overtake Mr. Kip, and if necessary hold him up while they had their interview; he saw that this was not feasible. Within an hour he was getting all he could out of his Kip roadster and was barely able to keep Mr. Kip in sight. At dusk they had been through the Franconia Notch and were near Twin Mountain.

It was there that they struck the detour; Mark noticed that the limousine's rear tires slipped a little as they took the turn. It was a bad detour, rough and muddy from last week's rains. Even so, the thing that did happen might not have happened if Mr. Kip, engrossed in holding his car to the middle of the way, had not missed the turn back to the main thoroughfare.

Immediately they were lost in a hopeless country road, rougher and muddier than the last. Mark could feel it taking the speed out of his machine. It took speed also from Mr. Kip, but not so much. For the first time the larger car drew a little away from the roadster—rounded a turn—and vanished.

Mark Wayland crowded his car to the uttermost; swept, full tilt, into the blind curve where Mr. Kip had disappeared; and slowed with a shrill sound of brakes hastily applied. He was just in time to catch a glimpse of what was happening.

Mr. Kip had plunged, without slackening of speed, into a shallow pool of mud and water that had settled across the road at the foot of a hill. At the right the earth dropped away a sheer hundred feet of rock and gravel to the river below. Suddenly his machine skidded; the whole car slid heavily to one side, and dangled for a moment on

"When You and I Were Boys"

Remember the Stories We Read? by GEORGE M. COHAN

I OVERHEARD a man boast the other day that his fourteen year old son had never read any stories of youthful adventure.

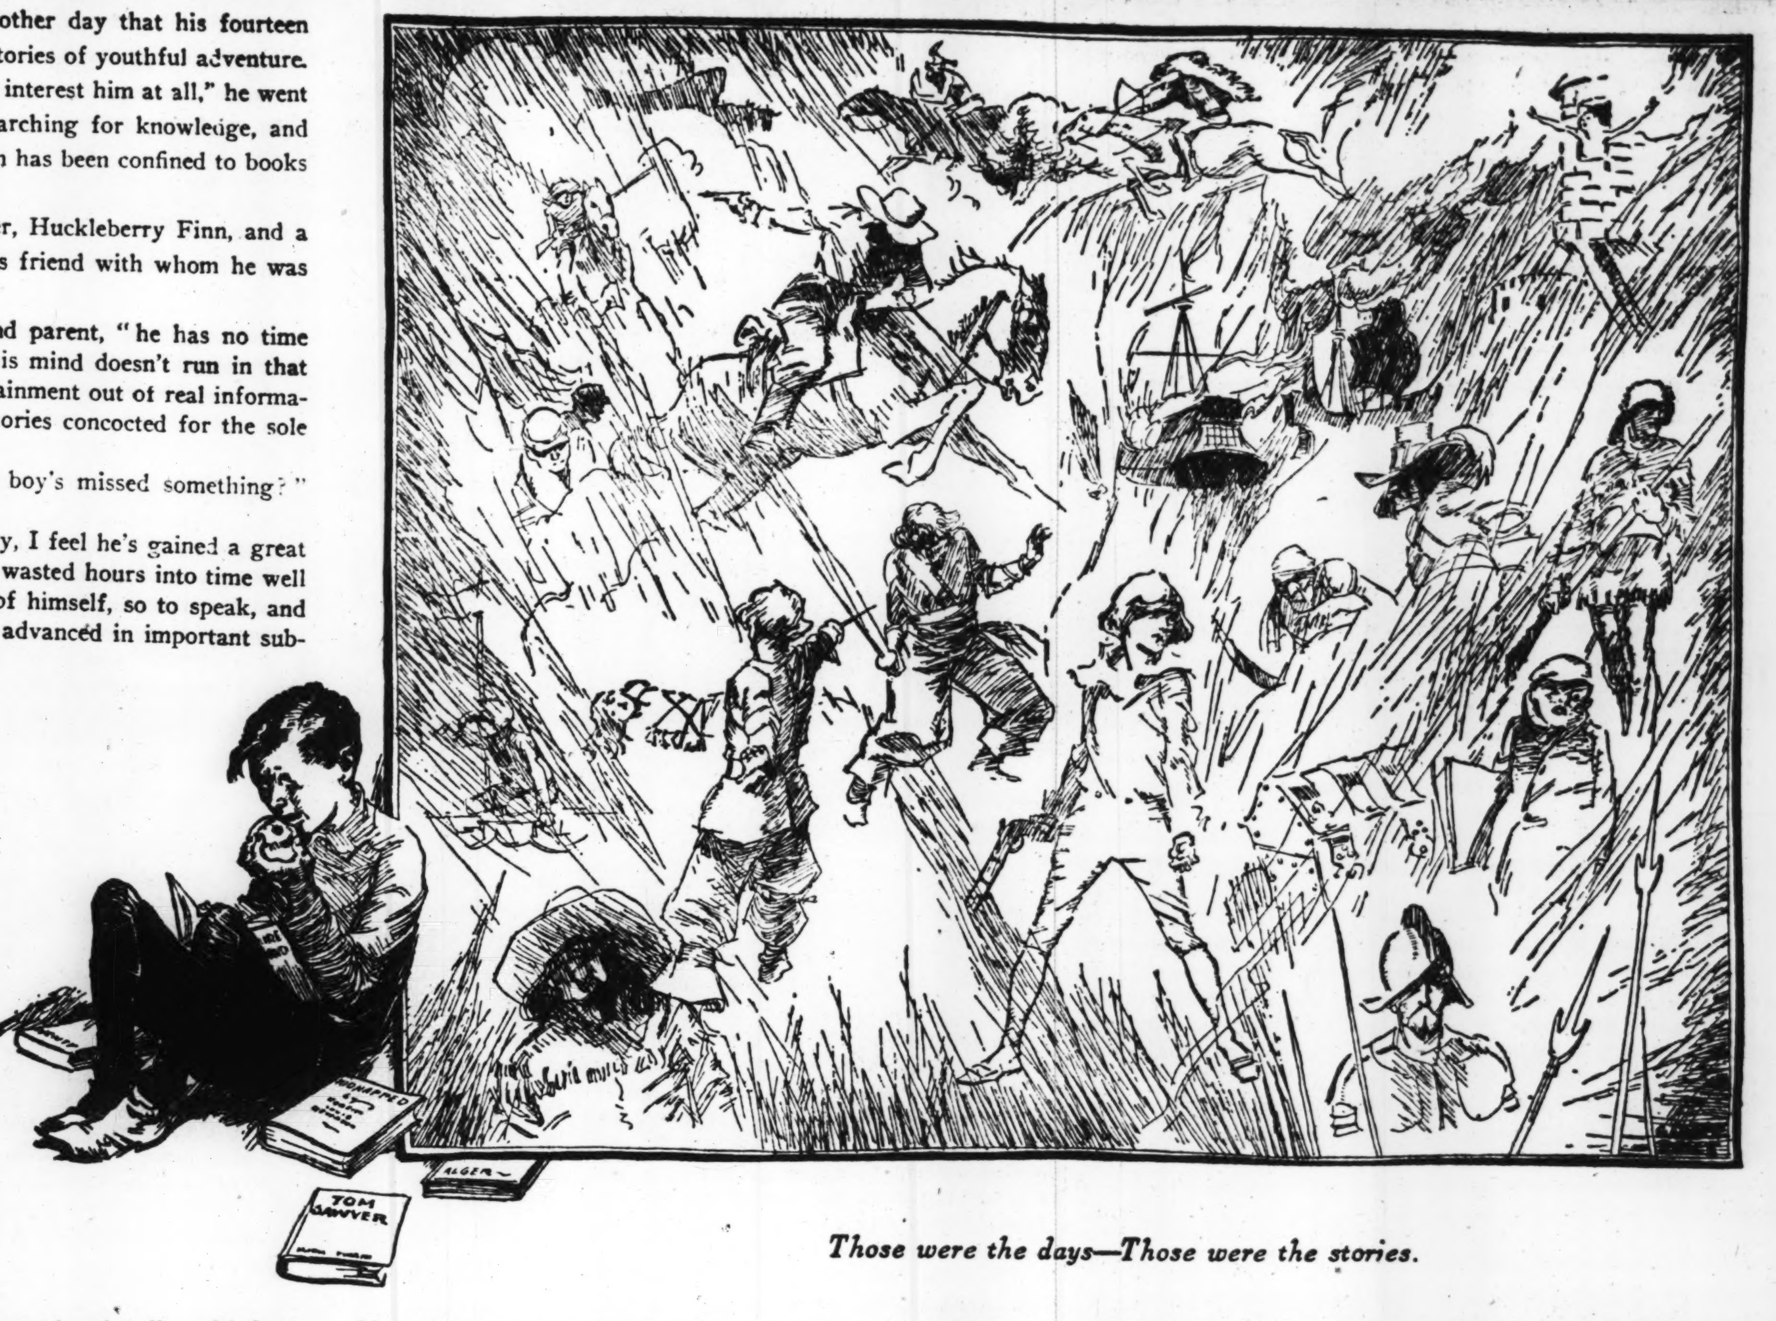
"Fiction has never seemed to interest him at all," he went on. "At the age of nine he began searching for knowledge, and whatever reading he has done since then has been confined to books of an educational character."

"But surely he's read Tom Sawyer, Huckleberry Finn, and a few stories of that kind," suggested his friend with whom he was discussing the boy.

"No, he hasn't," answered the fond parent, "he has no time for the world of make-believe at all, his mind doesn't run in that direction, he claims he gets more entertainment out of real information than he could possibly get from stories concocted for the sole purpose of killing time."

"Well, don't you really think the boy's missed something?" asked the other man.

"I certainly do not; on the contrary, I feel he's gained a great deal, and turned what might have been wasted hours into time well spent. He is now several years ahead of himself, so to speak, and by the time he's sixteen he'll be as far advanced in important subjects as most young men are at twenty-one. He'll have a fairly good insight into politics, finance, science, and all the great problems now confronting the world. No boy could accomplish such things if he allowed his mind to become occupied with the trials and tribulations of fictional heroes, such as Tom Sawyer, Huck Finn, David Copperfield, John Halifax, and all the other make-believe characters in literature of that sort. No, sir, my boy prefers facts to fiction. Truth and knowledge instead of dreams. An early start—yes, sir, that's what he's getting—an early start, and I look to him to leave all these story loving kids so far behind they'll never catch up. He has a man's mind already. Believe me, he's a wonderful boy."



Those were the days—Those were the stories.

JUST as the father of this highly intellectual and well read infant phenom made this assertion, I was called to the telephone, and by the time I returned both men had disappeared and I was disappointed, because I was certainly anxious to get another earful and learn a little more about the studious and advanced kid of today who refused to waste his time on the stories which I and a million of other men look back on and always think of as the real romance of boyhood.

But I'd heard enough. Yes, sir! I'd heard enough to convince me that the father of this early starter was certainly doing a great injustice to this fourteen year old son and heir of his by permitting the lad to pass up and miss all the thrills and excitement in the absorbing and interesting tales of youth and adventure for which every man who was ever a real boy has fond recollections and to which nine men out of ten owe their early ambitions and ultimate success.

Yes, sir! That's a pretty broad statement to make, but I doubt if many men would dispute it.

Just think back a little to the oldtime story papers of twenty-five years ago: The Golden Hours, the Golden Days, the Argosy, the Beadle series, the Merriwell series, the Shorty series, the immortal bad boy stories of George W. Peck—remember them? Of course, you do; would you have missed them for anything in the world? You know damned well you wouldn't, and you didn't, and neither did I nor did any other redblooded American kid of our time.

We read them and re-read them and absorbed them and lived them and laughed and cried and gave full vent to our emotions from the first word of the first chapter to the exciting and hair raising situation which always ended with the enevitable line:

TO BE CONTINUED IN OUR NEXT.

Yes, sir! Those were the days. Those were the stories—the dashing, daring, devil-may-care youngsters who fought their way from rags to riches against all the odds and obstacles the authors could possibly think of to combat the eventual triumph which always awaited them in the last chapter of the final installment of those thrilling tales of pluck, luck, and determination.

O, boy, what a kick we got out of the great and eternal happiness won by a lovable lad in the eleventh hour of his heroic fight for fame and fortune. What a wallop we were handed when the girl of his heart, Little Elsie of the tenement district, walked through the door of the gilded Fifth avenue mansion and into the fond embrace of her noble and victorious sweetheart.

And do you mean to tell me that those never to be forgotten stories of honest hearts and willing hands ever did any of us any harm?

Do you mean to tell me they didn't do all of us a great deal of good?

Of course, you don't mean to tell me anything of the kind, because you know better.

Yes, sir! You know perfectly well they were an important part of an early education; that they were the means of inspiring us with the do or die spirit which has served to elevate the United States of America to the headline position on the map of the world. Yes, sir! The leading attraction in the all star cast of nations

Mind you, I'm not claiming that any of the authors of boys' stories of our day were directly responsible for the great progress and development of our country, but I do honestly and sincerely believe that Horatio Alger junior had a far greater and more important influence on the youth of America twenty-five years ago than all the so-called educational writers and compilers of statistics all rolled into one.

JUST mention the title of any "Work and Win" tale published in the Youth's Companion or any of the oldtime kid story papers to any present day successful man, and watch his face light up with a smile: Watch him shake his head and hear him chuckle at the memories of "Jack Darrell, the Newsboy King," "A. D. T. 79," "Shorty Kicked into Good Luck," and all the other heart bumping compellers of the old days.

Yes, sir! He becomes a boy again. He fairly beams as he tells of how he used to count the hours and with what suspense he waited for the coming installment of the exciting serial.

Believe me, those stories of struggle and strife, which always led to success, made a lasting impression on every one of us, and we've all been trying to emulate our favorite fictional characters ever since—unconsciously perhaps, but the fact remains that ambition, perseverance, courage, and loyalty being the main ingredients in that particular story formula, we just naturally caught the spirit and followed along those lines as closely as we could.

Yes, sir! We didn't waste any time reading those juvenile "Get Up and Go" tales and they probably had more to do with molding the character of American youth than anything else in the world.

I DON'T know whether they write such stories today. I don't even know whether the present day American boy would be interested enough to read them. But I do know I got an awful kick out of them and that millions of other American men who used to be American boys will tell you they did, too.

I'm sorry as the dickens for that fourteen year old brain worker who prefers facts to fiction so early in life. He's missing the best fun of all. That bird will be a grouch when he grows up—see if he isn't. And it will be his father's fault, too. I guess maybe the old man himself never read any Fame and Fortune stories; it's almost a cinch he didn't; otherwise he'd never let the kid get away with the kind of stuff he's pulling.

Those oldtime weekly story papers hold a mighty warm spot in the hearts of all who used to read them. It was a simple and skillful way of preaching honesty, integrity, and application to the younger generation. A boy with any imagination at all was bound to be stirred and spurred on to bigger and better thoughts after having followed those brave young paper heroes through their struggles and to their triumphs.

I'd like to hear what other fellows think about my argument.

How about it, boys? Am I right?

OPPORTUNITY TELEGRAPHS - - - - - By Ruth Burr Sanborn

the point of going over. Mr. Kip jerked the wheel. The limousine swung again, plunged across the road, across a ditch, across some forty yards of swamp and meadow, and brought up with exceeding violence against a half submerged stump. The quick cessation of violent motion was too much for Mr. Kip and he got out. He got out suddenly and informally by way of the open windshield, and clung for a moment across the radiator in the position described in coasting as belly-bump, before he pitched off, headforemost, into the ooze.

Mark Wayland stopped his car and leaped out.

"Good Lord," he said. "I hope he isn't killed."

If Mr. Kip was going to kill himself he wanted to see him first.

BUT Mr. Kip was not dead. He was heaving himself about like some prehistoric creature just rising from its mud bath.

"Gad!" he said. "But this is hell!"

Mark Wayland looked down for a moment at the sputtering Ephus Kip seated at his feet.

"Well, anyway," he said mildly, "that's where you said you'd see me."

Mr. Kip opened his eyes wide. He did not care if he did get mud in them.

"Who are you?" he roared.

"I," said Mark in his best manner, "am Mark Wayland. Sir, my card. You, I think, are Mr. Kip? Are you hurt?"

"Uh," said Mr. Kip. "No. You from Brandon's?"

"I am," said Mark.

Mr. Kip snorted, partly with mud and partly with indignation. "Where did you come from?" he said.

"From Boston," said Mark dryly. "You ought to know. I called at your office this morning."

He sat down, as he spoke, on the car step, drew his feet up out of the water, and stared thoughtfully at Mr. Kip. Nature had not in the first place made Ephus Kip a handsome man, and his recent return to nature had marred what looks he had.

"You'd better climb up here with me," said Mark. "It's dryer—and now about tires."

"It skidded," bellowed Ephus Kip, recalled to the details of his misfortune by the mention of any part of a car.

"It did," said Mark Wayland. "Trentons will, you know. Look here, Mr. Kip, what's wrong with Brandon?"

Ephus Kip turned suddenly sulky.

"Your man Crusby's no good," he muttered. "He did me dirt."

"And for that," said Mark, "you turn Brandon's down."

"They're responsible for their own men."

Mark considered.

"I've worked for Crusby for over four years," he said at last, "and I shouldn't want to think that anybody was responsible for him."

Mr. Kip did not laugh at this, because nobody could under the circumstances, but he did not roar Mark Wayland into silence—and that was something. Mark went on.

"I don't want to be didactic," he said, "but really, if you are going to drive like that, you ought to have the best there is in tires. I don't say you're reckless—I just say you ought to give yourself every chance."

"It's a pity," said Mr. Kip gloomily, "if a man can't go out for a little spin. Gad! Anybody has to have a little recreation."

Mark Wayland touched the sore muscles of his right arm with the stiff fingers of his left hand.

"That's true. One must have recreation," he murmured. "I find it wonderfully restful."

Ephus Kip did not laugh at that, either, but he was not displeased. He liked to be considered rather an old cut-up.

"And now," he suggested, "how about giving me a lift?"

"Fine," said Mark Wayland. "The very thing that I was coming to. But first"—he whipped a folded paper from his pocket—"how about signing this? It's a contract re-establishing your standing order for Brandon tires."

Mr. Kip frowned.

"Is that a threat?" he asked.

Mark Wayland's glance was innocent, but there was a twinkle in it somewhere.

"Lord, no," he said. "I shouldn't like to be so crude. But now I'll tell you how it is, Mr. Kip. That Kip roadster belongs, in a manner of speaking, to the Brandon company, and I'm afraid they might not like to have me put a lot of mud in it and spoil it—for nothing. Especially—I'm afraid they wouldn't like it if they knew that I was taking you to meet Mr. Trenton to sign on for Trenton tires."

"How did you know I was going to the Balsams to meet Trenton?" Mr. Kip demanded.

"I evolved it," said Mark Wayland, "out of my inner consciousness."

He grinned, and spread out the contract suggestively.

Ephus Kip saw that he was fairly caught. And then—at last—he laughed.

"All right," he said. "You win. Give me your fountain pen."

MR. JOHN SYLVESTER BRANDON returned to the Brandon Rubber Manufacturing company on Wednesday morning, and sent at once for Armine Kilroy. He talked with her for some time, but only part of their conversation is of general interest.

"What I want to know," said Mr. Brandon, "is how this man Wayland ever happened to get Crusby's telegram."

Armine Kilroy stiffened to meet the moment that she had dreaded.

"I—sent it out to him," she said.

"You sent it out to him!" snorted Mr. Brandon. "You sent it out to him!"

It was Mr. Brandon's boast that no one had ever pulled any wool over his eyes, and this was probably true. Mr. Brandon's eyes had a strange bulging quality peculiarly ill adapted to having anything pulled over them. They bulged now more than ever with mingled amazement and suspicion.

Armine Kilroy was not exactly afraid of him, because she was not afraid of any man, but under the circumstances she did not want to be sent away in disgrace. She had planned a thousand times what she would say, and the elaborateness of her planning left her the more unprepared.

"Yes," she said.

"But how," demanded Mr. Brandon, "did you ever happen to make a mistake like that?"

"Well, in a way it didn't happen," said Armine honestly. "In a way it wasn't a mistake. It would have been, though, if it hadn't come out the way it did."

Mr. Brandon looked at Armine Kilroy, and in his face were surprise and anger and amusement and consternation. Armine Kilroy looked back at him. Her chin was lifted a little in defiance, but her eyes were wide with appeal.

"I'd be terribly sorry," she said, "if he hadn't done so well. But—as long as he did—you're not really sorry yourself, are you, Mr. Brandon?"

Mr. John Sylvester Brandon had his faults, but he was not stupid. Moreover, Miss Kilroy was quite the loveliest reception secretary that he had ever had, and Mr. Brandon knew it.

"We'll both consider," he said at last, "that no mistake was made."

MR. BRANDON sent next for Mark Wayland. He came at once, a very different Mark from the one of a week before; there was a quiet confidence in himself behind the wistfulness of his smile. Mark Wayland had matched himself against the world and beaten it, and he knew that the world was his—all but Armine Kilroy. It was that that shadowed his eyes when he spoke to her.

By shifting her position ever so slightly, Armine could see him go into the front office—could see old man Brandon teetering on his toes in the middle of the best Bokhara of them all. From time to time she could hear what was said.

Old man Brandon had the reputation of being a hard man, and a close man, and a man of quick and violent tempers. But no one had ever said that he was unjust. Moreover, he liked nerve, and he considered that Mark Wayland had it.

"Tires," he said finally, "are getting to be the biggest part of the business. I've been thinking of dividing the sales department into two branches—tires and other products—with two managers. How about tires for you?"

Armine Kilroy, downstairs in the reception room, caught her breath.

But Mark Wayland, upstairs in the front office, only nodded.

"Thank you, Mr. Brandon," he said. "I'd like it."

Armine was standing by her desk rummaging through her mail basket when he came down, and held out her hand in frank congratulations.

"That's fine," she said. "Of course, I couldn't help hearing."

"Opportunity does knock sometimes, doesn't it?" said Mark.

Armine smiled.

"O, yes," she said. "It knocks all right. But sometimes you have to nail up a darned big placard so that it will know which door to knock at. I want to hear about your trip."

"Tomorrow noon?"

"Why not tonight?"

Armine opened one of the drawers of her desk, and began to search through it for something that she did not find. Her face was turned away.

"I thought Mr. Hedges," Mark began.

"No," said Armine. "Mr. Hedges does not come now."

Mark Wayland's fingers closed hard about the edge of the desk, but his voice was steady.

"What do you mean?" he said. "Armine Kilroy, are you engaged to Mr. Hedges, or aren't you?"

Armine bent lower over the open desk drawer so that only the top of her head and the warm curve of one cheek was visible.

"Why, no," she said. "No. We're not engaged. I guess I hadn't told you."

Mark Wayland drew a great breath. When he spoke there was a little edge in his voice that showed how near it was to breaking.

"Armine," he said. "You can't joke about a thing like that. Do you mean that you're giving me a chance?"

And still Armine Kilroy did not straighten up nor look at him.

"No," she said at last. "I'm not giving a chance to anybody. The chance is there, though, for somebody to take."

For an instant Mark Wayland did not believe that it was true. And then suddenly he strode round the desk and took his chance in his arms.

INSTALLMENT X.

Last and First.

SHE had no speech with him while the early fruit was harvested. There was a brief interval before the later varieties ripened, and she stayed away from the orchard for a day or two, riding alone, or with her husband, in other directions. Gail's manner was again what it had been when she had first come back to him, carefully careless, she told herself, gay with a sort of resolution. He said nothing of MacIvor, on these rides, and she fancied that his silence was significant, although she could not guess its meaning. There were even moments when she thought that her queer fancy had been sound; that Gail, too, had seen what came between them that evening when his hands had all but closed on hers.

But she was only vaguely disturbed by this reflection. Even the thought of Rufus Breck, skulking in the pines again, seemed to have lost the power to frighten her; MacIvor, she felt, was in no danger at his hands. And, in a strange, unreasoning way she was almost happy.

She had ridden out alone in the early evening, taking, by the mare's whim, the lane that led down to the station road. The sun had already dipped beyond the straggling pines of the rim; a friendly gentle coolness settled down slowly like a shadow; she could feel a response in herself to the kindliness of the hour, to the light breeze that was like a loving touch on her cheeks. And as she neared the fork of the roads, she heard a slow, marching song, and drew rein to listen.

The air was remotely familiar; she could not distinguish words, but she knew that she had heard the song, somewhere, long ago, and her mind fumbled for the association. It was something to do with old Meggie, and the nursery in the lonesome house before she had gone to live with Warren Borden. Suddenly she laughed.

"Scots Wha Hae Wi' Wallace Bled!"

Even old Meggie had looked and sounded militant as she chanted it, Jane remembered. She let the mare move forward and reached the forks just as David MacIvor finished the verse. She had heard him sing, sometimes, at the little church, but never in a voice that she could have recognized as this. He stopped as he saw her, and she could have laughed at the sheepishness of his look, as if she had come upon him in some childish act.

"You'll think I'm daft," he said. "But I was in the mood and I thought there was none near enough to hear."

The tone warmed her. For once he seemed to have forgotten that she was his enemy. The voice took her into his confidence.

"You've had good news of your crop, then?" she guessed instantly what had exhilarated him to the pitch of that anthem. He nodded.

"Two-eighty a crate, for Mayflowers! The thing's scarce to be believed!"

"I knew you'd win, David!" Under the excitement of the news she forgot everything except her share in triumph She laid her hand lightly on his bridle wrist, and the touch seemed to waken him with a start. He straightened, stiffened, and moved his arm so that her hand dropped.

"I'm obliged to you, Mrs. Gail."

The voice hurt her with the effect of a blow.

"O, David, why have you got to hate me so?"

"You can see the necessity, at all events." His tone did not lighten. "If I could hate you as I ought——"

She caught at the phrase. "You mean that you don't—that you're just trying——"

"O, why must you have me say it? Is it not enough that this sin should have me by the throat—that my eye offends and that I cannot pluck it out? Must I even sin in word as I sin in thought?"

She heard herself laughing softly, saw her hands clinging to his rigid arm.

"Sin, David? Must you think of it as sin?"

"What is it less" The words seemed to be torn from him. "Can I covet my neighbor's wife and do no wrong? Sin and folly—and you must minister to your vanity by hearing it in speech! Can you not be content with what you have done to me, made of me, without telling of it?"

SLOWLY the words carried understanding to Jane Gail. She saw herself as this man saw her, saw how he must regard the thought of love between them.

"You do hate me, then. You think it must be folly as well as sin to—to want me!"

"What else?" He spoke savagely. "What have I to do with you? If you were as free as I, what would it be but folly? You play with man's love and men's lives, like a child with toys! You pluck a man's love for a nosegay and wear it for a day! Do you think me so blind that this is hidden from me, fool as I am? First it is Gail and then me, and then, on impulse and whim, you marry him, and again, on a whim you come back to me, only on another whim, to go again to him. And now, living with him, you must still tempt me with pretty words and little tricks of touch!"

He twisted his arm from her hands.

"You see? I have no scales upon my eyes! I know you for what you are! And yet, in wickedness and folly, I——"

"You care!" She marveled at herself that there should be no anger in her, but only a great glow of pride and joy, a sense of power such as she had never known. "You care, David! And I never dreamed—I never hoped——"

"I will not say the word!" He set his teeth. "You shall not carry me so far, do what you will. I will not say it!"

"It doesn't matter, since I know." She could even laugh softly again. "You must call it wicked, if you see it so, but you shall not think of it as folly, for it isn't that, David! It isn't I thought I cared for Sheppard, but I never did! I knew the truth the moment I saw him for what he was—and I came back because there was no other sanctuary, and then——"

"And then, when he had beaten me, you went over to his side! You did but your duty, to be sure, but not because it was your duty, but your pleasure. Duty has no meaning for such as you! It is a word."

"I went back to him because it was the price of your timber and the dreams you clung to still," she cut in evenly. "If I had not gone, he would have built the courthouse and the roads and ruined you! I found out the mischief I had done you, without knowing what I did! If I had never come back to Miss Ailie's house, you would have carried that election! They voted against you, those Scotch farmers, because of me! And I did not know until it was too late! And he might have killed you and gone free, if I had stayed. I saw that, too. And I went back to him—on my own terms, David. If it was duty, then duty and pleasure were one, for once, for I was glad to pay you back a little of my debt."

He sat still. "I must be asking pardon for my thoughts, then. You are no wanton woman. But here is an ill matter made far worse. There have been whiles when I could almost have despised you, thinking what I thought. But now——" he shook his head slowly—"now I can never think that again, and it will be hard."

"You want to—to think evil of me?"

"It would be better to think evil of Sheppard Gail's wife than to——"

"I'm not his wife, David. I live in his house as I lived in yours! You must know that and believe it. I could not have gone back, else. I save his pride by living there, and he is a proud man, whatever else he may be."

"It does not matter." He spoke grimly, but she felt, in the tone, a throb of triumph that was all unlike the man she knew. "You are joined to him in the sight of God and men."

"I knew that you would see it so," she interrupted. "Of course, I don't. Even my church would dissolve this marriage, and the law——"

"We have learned to play fast and loose with God and with our statutes, but we do not escape. You are Gail's wife, and in your heart you know it."

"I don't! I've never known it! I can't believe that God, even your God, who will forgive a wilful sin, will not forgive a mistake in which there was no sin, but only ignorance and impulse. I did no wrong when I marred Sheppard Gail. And you would have me punished as I would not be punished for a crime! There is no sense of justice or truth in such a doctrine, David!"

He shook his head. "It is a good argument, but no more than that You know that between you and me there is no room for even friendship, now."

"I don't know it," she cried. "I won't know it! I won't believe that love is wrong! I won't believe that God's so pitiless."

"And he is not! There you speak truth at last But here is a tangled weaving that no hand but His own can order. No man's, at least! 'Let not man put asunder!' That much is clear."

She felt the inexorable finality in his voice, knew that no word of hers would move that unshakable conviction. And a kind of peace came to her, an acquiescence that was almost consent. She could even be glad that he stood firm and fast on his beliefs, a man like a rock, among men who drifted like tumbleweeds before the winds of light desire or small advantage. There was pride in him, a pride that laughed at the petty rebukes of thin convention; she was even proud that she had spoken; proud of her surrender; prouder than all else of the knowledge that this man loved her in the teeth of his will and his beliefs.

"It doesn't matter." She heard her voice as if some one else had spoken, and wondered at herself for the conviction that the words carried. The law that must stand between them always became a trivial, minor thing; like time and distance, that might intervene but could not separate.

"Does it not?" He laughed, a short, harsh sound. "There might be two words to that. But it holds fast. And it will hold."

Afterward, remembering that it was his horse that moved forward, she could even smile at the dogged consistency of him. And he left her, at the fork of the roads, without a word of farewell or a single backward glance. She watched him till the shadows closed in about him and then, marveling at herself, she rode home to supper, with Sheppard Gail's eyes watching her in the candlelight, unwontedly alert and intent. He was so silent, during the meal, that she wondered uneasily if he could feel, by some trick of telepathy, the rush and confusion of her thoughts.

She was glad that some unexplained errand took him away soon afterward and left her alone with her knowledge.

ADAM GAIL, dusty from his ride up from the railroad, found Jane at her late breakfast with Sheppard Gail, and told his news in a tone even more morose than his dismal habit.

"I guess it's all over with the railroad, now, Shep. If we don't get to carry them peaches for Dave MacIvor, we'll get junked, sure. And I was countin' on two cars from him today. You got to do somethin' this time if you aim to keep the road runnin'; I'm plumb sick of this here moonshinin', bootleggin' funny business, Shep."

"So's everybody, I guess." Sheppard Gail cut in evenly. "But I don't see why it's worrying you so that you've got to spoil my breakfast, Ad. What's wrong now? Some of your hands drunk?"

"I wish't they was! I'd drown 'em in the water tank! It ain't as easy as that, Shep. Somebody's taken an' spread liquor all round, yest'd'y evenin'—ain't hardly a sober nigra in the township. All them pickers 't works for Dave MacIvor is sleepin' it off, an' them packers he fetched up from Georgia got fightin'—two of 'em is right wore down, they tell me. Reckon it means two-three cars 't won't get shipped. And if it keeps up——"

Jane's glance moved quickly to her husband's face. She half expected to surprise a look of satisfaction there, and it pleased her, against her will, to find him grimly angry.

"So that's it, eh? Rufe Breck's getting square with Dave MacIvor by feeding liquor to his labor, right in picking time! I might have figured he'd do that! You're plumb right, Ad—it's got to stop sudden—right where it is! You ride on over to Tyre and tell Harley to fetch a couple of deputies back with him. We'll go get Rufe today, or know why. Still running's one thing and blockading to nigras is something right different. You tell Harley I mean business, Ad."

Adam Gail's gloom seemed to lighten a little, but he did not move.

"You mean it, Shep? You ain't funnin' with me?"

"Do I sound like I'm funnin', Ad? You get on over to Tyre, and tell Harley what I said. This is where Rufe Breck gets off for keeps. Reckon we been too easy on him, but that's finished. You go get Harley. I'll tend to the rest of it."

His cousin's frown smoothed to something that was almost a grin. "You sure sound like business, Shep. I'll get going."

He turned. Jane could hear him running heavily across the gallery, and the thump of galloping hoofs announced his departure at top speed. Jane turned to face her husband.

"WHAT made him talk like that, Sheppard? He sounded as if it rested with you to say whether this thing stopped or went on."

He spread his hands. "Reckon that's what he meant, Jane. It does, in a way. You know that, Harley, he sort of takes his orders from me. I never made a secret out of that, did I? Up north I reckon they'd say I was a boss. It's a bad system, but it's the only one 't seems to work. And it don't work out so bad down here. County gets pretty good government, all around."

"Then you mean that you—you've winked at this illicit traffic in moonshine—till now?"

"Maybe. We can't hire enough deputies to keep these woods clear of stills, Jane. Eat the county up in taxes. We do what we can, and let the rest slide. Moonshining don't look wrong to most folk around here, and you can't enforce a law without the people want it enforced, no matter where you live. But we can control this business, more or less, and we'll control it this time. You'll see."

He went out abruptly. She heard him calling an order to a stable hand, and followed him to the gallery.

"Have him saddle Silverheels, too," she said. "I'm going with you, Sheppard."

He glanced at her doubtfully for a moment. Then he shrugged.

"Reckon you'll go, no matter what I say. All right." He called again to the Negro, and went back into the house for his boots. By the time the horses were ready Jane was with him on the gallery. They cantered down the lane together.

"We'll go see if we can find Dave, first," he told her. "He's bound to be out hunting for Breck, but maybe we can locate him. And I got to try and make him believe the county'll handle this job for him. Dave's bound to get himself shot up if he goes after Breck alone. And we can't afford to lose him, right now."

"You think he'll doubt you?"

"I know he will." He laughed. "Dave knows we ain't been any too hard on folks like Rufe Breck But I want you should help me, this time, Jane. He might believe you. And I'd hate to let him get shot up over this thing."

Doubt persisted in her in the face of his seeming sincerity. She tried to tell herself that she was wrong; that her fear on MacIvor's account made her see danger to him in everything, but she felt that Gail's solicitude was unreal; that he was, for some reason of his own, playing a part. She tried not to think of the thing he suggested, but she kept finding in her mind a memory of the scene she had almost forgotten, of MacIvor's sprawling in the sand, seemingly dead, after that first encounter with Rufus Breck. And the thought made her less attentive to her husband's inflection and manner. The danger to David MacIvor was what mattered, and Sheppard Gail had nothing to do with that.

He rode a little ahead of her as the road narrowed, so that there was not room for two abreast, and there was no more talk until he drew rein suddenly, with a loud hail. She checked her mare beside him, and caught a deep breath of relief at the sight of MacIvor, riding toward them.

"DAVE, we just got word of this business, and I rode over to tell you that the county'll handle it for you, this time. Ad Gail's on his way to Tyre right now to fetch Harley and some deputies. You can leave it to us and go back to your peach crop. We can't risk getting you shot up—not now, anyhow."

He chuckled on the last words. MacIvor's glance, after one swift, expressionless swerve to meet Jane's eyes, did not change or waver; he sat erect and still, his face set and stern. Jane saw the butts of two heavy pistols protruding from the holsters on each side of his saddle.

"I don't expect you'll believe me, Dave, after the way we been letting Breck alone, but I'm talking straight, all the same. I ain't pretending I like you, but I'm saying that I can't afford to get you shot. You know why, all right. And I can't afford to have Breck keep you from shipping your peaches, either. If the road goes bust——"

"You offer to find Breck and his still, in my place, Gail?"

MacIvor spoke evenly, without expression.

"That's right. And I'm owning up that it'll be a sight safer for me and Harley than it'd be for you. Breck ain't out to fight the sheriff, but he's gunning for you, anyhow. You better turn around, Dave, and go back to your pack sheds——"

"You seem confident, Gail. What makes you think that you can find Breck and his still?"

Jane felt the challenging implication of the tone, and glanced at Gail with a stab of apprehension. There was a sense of enmity in the air, and the good humor of her husband's tone and look failed to reassure her against it. She was afraid of something, with no clear understanding of what it was; she could hear her pulses, and knew that she was breathing unsteadily and fast.

"We can find it as quick as you, I reckon, Dave. You been hunting for it a right good while, anyhow." Gail laughed. "And Harley and I'd be apt to have better luck; we know more about bootleg whisky than you do."

"There is a word I do not doubt, at last," said MacIvor. "I know little of that trade, but a little is too much. And I will find Breck today, myself."

"You're mighty sure of it, ain't you?" Gail shook his head. "Look here, Dave—there's no sense in your getting a bullet in your back over this thing. Let me and Harley handle it. Harley's paid to do it, and sworn to do it, too It's no business for you."

"I make it my business, then. I shall lose two carloads of good fruit over last night's work, but I count it a small price to pay. For today I shall find Breck's still, Gail."

"You got a notion where it is, then?"

"No, but I know I am to find it. That seems no more than a boast to you, Gail, but it is true. I know that I shall find——"

Gail laughed softly. "I reckon I get you now, Dave. You figure you're going to get led somehow. You think somebody's going to take hold of your bridle and bring you spang to the right place?"

"Just that, Gail. And it seems folly to you?"

"No, it don't." Gail sobered abruptly. "We got different words for the same notions, that's all. I got what I call a hunch that my luck'd take me where Breck's at. You got the same feeling, only you say that something else—Providence, maybe—is going to take hold of your bridle and lead you straight."

"And if I have that belief, Gail, shall I turn back, and put my faith rather in you, and the blind god you know as luck? Would you, in your turn having at stake as much as I have, be content to leave the issue to me and what I call Providence?"

GAIL laughed happily. "You're right, Dave. I wouldn't. Reckon you got to go through with it, feeling that way. But it's right funny, all the same—you and your Providence headed the same way as me and my luck! Makes me think of the place in the Bible where some old prophet got a fire going in wet wood, after the heathen priests fell down on the job. Which way you aim to look, Dave?"

"I had thought of riding again along the swamp. But——"

"But you been over it plenty times before now. No use wasting good time on it again. If either of us two is right, Dave, we don't need to worry it out by thinking. You don't believe in luck like I do. Used to find my lost marbles, when I was a kid, by chucking another one up in the air and looking close where it came down. Know how I aimed to hunt for Breck's still, Dave? I was going to drop the reins on my horse's neck and let him go where he was a mind to—like this!"

He knotted the straps loosely so as to shorten them and let them fall on the clipped mane of his mount. Jane, staring blankly, wondered why she did not laugh. She had encountered, more than once, this curious belief in his luck that was Gail's only religion, but never had it impressed her as anything more than the surviving, shallow superstitions with which she was familiar—the habit which made intelligent men touch wood after a rash statement, or quarrel over the grain of the card table. Now, she saw, he was in deadly earnest—as earnest as MacIvor could have been. And, glancing at MacIvor, she saw that the nonsense was as serious to him as to Gail. His eyes did not move from Gail's; there was no relaxation of the hard lines about his mouth.

"You have faith in your luck, Gail. And that is better than no faith at all." Slowly he gathered the loose reins and knotted them as Gail had done. "Your plan is good. I will follow it."

Gail nodded. "I reckoned you would, Dave." He twisted in his saddle to glance at Jane. "Must look plumb crazy to you, Jane—both of us."

She shook her head. In the still shadow of the pines it was easy to slip back into the mental state of the people who had seen mystery in just such silent spaces as there. She tried to reassure herself by reason; it was all pure folly. Neither chance nor God could be harnessed to a man's desire and purpose. And yet—she lifted a hand to her throat as MacIvor's horse started deliberately forward, as if in obedience to a command. It was natural enough—her own mare would not have stood half so long without the restraint of the bit—and yet she found it now significant and terrifying. Gail's horse followed, a pace or two behind, and, still keeping a tight rein, Jane let the mare go after the others.

They rode in silence, in this wise, for perhaps two furlongs. Here the track forked, one branch leading back to the Gail house, the other swerving off through the scrub and keeping to the ridge that overlooked the brake of reeds and marsh plants that flanked the swampy branch. Here both MacIvor's horse and Gail's turned to the left, without pause. Jane felt an absurd thrill of something like fear. Gail's horse, on the right of MacIvor's, would have taken, by habit, the right hand road over which they had just come, the road that led him back to his stall, but, from behind, Jane saw him turn at the left sharply, as if a hand had jerked unkindly at the bit. And yet Gail's hands rested easily on his thighs, and the knotted lines were half way to his horse's ears.

She kept a few paces to the rear, mechanically restraining the mare's impatience while she tried to persuade herself that she was silly to attach even a momentary significance to the accident; that it was nothing but superstition that made her doubt the outcome of this fool's errand. She knew it was nonsense, and yet, as she repeated the word in her thought, she discovered an obstinate contradiction that would not hear reason. Something had made those horses turn from a familiar, traveled road to this vague cart track along the ridge; something led them, now, past successive forks where the casual wanderings of wood carts had left rutted trails between the scrub oaks and young pines; something——

THE trail dipped almost to the swamp and climbed again; it turned aside to cut off a wide bend in the branch, and emerged a quarter mile farther down the stream, to bring her suddenly into a remembered setting. Below, where the stream narrowed between firmer banks, she recognized the ford where she had knelt to drink, that day when chance had shown her Rufus Breck's liquor jugs hidden under the inkberry bushes. She caught her breath at what seemed a confirming coincidence; it was down there, beside that bit of shining water, that she had watched MacIvor fight with Breck at the beginning of the quarrel that had led to this pursuit. Of course, it was only chance—there was no possible connection between that affair and the course that the horses had chosen, and yet—and yet——

She stopped the mare with an instinctive pull of the reins, watching the two horses before her lower their bodies down the slant toward the ford. And again she had a thrill of fear as they turned sharply to the right, into the faintly outlined track that led back over the ridge to the closed hunting lodge where she had come with Warren Borden—how many years ago? It wasn't possible that she was the same girl who had ridden down that lane—that less than a year had passed since she had faced Rufus Breck beside that ford! She had a sense of unreality, as if, knowing better the while, she allowed a vivid dream to frighten and convince her.

MacIvor and Gail rode side by side up the track; there was almost no sign of passage here and, following them, Jane told herself she would not have known it for a trail, a year ago. But the horses plodded on steadily, as if they were sure of their course; sometimes, she saw, Gail's pressed a little to the front, and again MacIvor would be a pace or two in the lead, but there was never much distance between them.

She saw that unless they turned aside again they would presently come to the hunting lodge, and the thought wakened memories of Warren Borden, of the girl who had come with him into the sandhills—a girl who seemed remote and strange to the Jane Gail who came back, now, to the scenes that she had avoided, without realizing it, ever since Miss Drummond had taken her away from them. That girl had laughed at David MacIvor; had almost hated him; had liked Sheppard Gail and believed him. Jane felt a quick impatience for her folly, as one resents the blindness of a friend.

She saw the horses turn again and leave the trail for one even less visible; it seemed at first that there was no track here, and her skepticism revived; she was disposed to be scornfully amused at the superstition which the men seemed to share. Neither God nor luck could be hired as a guide, she told herself. The whole affair was silly, stupid; the horses were wandering at random, no more.

FOR perhaps a quarter of a mile they rode between the young pines, veering away from the buildings in the clearing. She was glad of this. The thought of the lodge still repelled her; she did not want to revisit it, to revive her dulling memories of the last few hours there. She saw the men draw rein, and came up with them. The horses stood in a gap between dogwood thickets, and beyond them, a few yards away, she could see a square, solid structure of logs and clay, its roof in sagging repair, but the walls still stout and plumb.

It startled her. She had not known there was any building here, within easy distance of the lodge; she guessed that it belonged to the camp; something in the construction seemed to suggest that it had been built at the same time and by the same men who had erected the lodge itself.

"Raeford's kennels," said Gail, softly. "I'd plumb forgot they were still standing. Hated to have his hounds close to the house, Raeford did. Wonder what made the horses come this way—looks like we wasted our time, Dave."

MacIvor lowered himself deliberately to the ground, and took his pistols from their holsters. Jane saw that his face was strangely hard, even for him.

"You should know the smell of mash, Gail," he said quietly. "We have wasted no time. The still is yonder. Rufus Breck is shrewder than I thought him."

Jane caught the sour smell of fermenting grain, and held her breath as she glanced at the building. Above the crude chimney she saw the air bend and tremble, though there was no smoke.

"Be careful, David! He must be there now! He'll shoot."

MacIvor seemed not to hear. He strode straight to the slab door and flung it open with the barrel of a pistol. She saw him go in and waited, in the hypnosis of fear, for the sound of shots. But instead there was only a crash of metal on metal and, as she urged Silverheels closer, she could see, through the open doorway, that MacIvor had found an axe and was using it on the copper coils of the worm. Beside her she heard Sheppard Gail's quiet laugh.

"Too bad we both found it," he said. "Didn't prove a thing. Maybe it was luck and maybe not. Won't ever know."

He slid out of the saddle and went to the door, leaning against the frame and watching MacIvor's methodical destruction of still and worm and vat. He chuckled again.

"Reg'lar fox, Rufe Breck. No wonder Dave couldn't ever spot him by the smoke. Been burning charcoal!"

MacIvor emerged, the ax in his hands, his face expressionless.

"He is no fool, as you say. I should have found this long ago. He must have moved it when the lodge was occupied."

"Luck was sure with us, this morning, for a fact," laughed Gail. "Reckon you ought to say thanks, Dave. It was my notion."

MacIvor regarded him steadily. "I have not forgotten, Gail." His tone changed. "The man himself is not far off. There was fresh fuel on his fire."

Jane started. "Let's not stay here, then. He'll try to shoot you."

MacIvor glanced at her. "You should not have come with us, Mrs. Gail. You are right. We will go. There is a risk."

Gail sprang back to his saddle in a single, graceful motion. MacIvor lifted his weight slowly, and they rode away, as they had come. At the trail to the camp, Gail paused.

"Did you think to look for liquor, Dave? Strikes me that Rufe would be apt to have some hid up. His stuff was always aged a mite before he'd sell it."

MacIvor shook his head. "There was no sign of it in the cabin. But it is likely, as you say, that he has hidden a store of it somewhere. I will find it later. There is no need to search now, and Mrs. Gail is with us."

"That's right. Reckon we better get her safe before we go looking for more trouble," Gail nodded. "We can cut across past the camp and get home quicker than if we rode around the way we come."

HE turned his horse toward the lodge, and MacIvor followed. Jane repressed an impulse to object. After all, it was silly to feel so about the camp She said nothing during the few minutes that passed before they came out in the clearing. The closed lodge, its windows sealed with board shutters, gave her a pang of melancholy. She turned her glance from it quickly. But MacIvor checked his horse.

"The weeds are trodden," he said, pointing. "See—here is a path to the door."

He slipped to the ground and led his horse toward the porch. Gail hesitated. Jane saw him glance from MacIvor to her, and again to MacIvor, as if in doubt.

"Shucks, Dave—that don't mean anything. Nigras likely—seeing if they's a way inside."

MacIvor stood without turning. "No negro would come here, Gail. They think the place is haunted, as you know. It would be a safe hiding place for ageing liquor, and Breck has proved himself no fool." He bent over the clumsy padlock which closed the outer door.

"See!" He twitched the chain, and it came free in his hands, the staple dangling at one end like a drawn tooth. He pulled back the door and tried the inner one. It was not locked. He went inside. Jane sprang down from her saddle, drawn suddenly by a sense of panic. She was afraid to be out here, with MacIvor in the house. She half ran after him, Gail following.

The hall was in a half-light from the open door, but the rooms beyond were dark. Jane could hear MacIvor walking in the kitchen wing, and moved after him. She found him fumbling in the storeroom off the kitchen.

"I was right. He has been storing his liquor here. There are jugs and a barrel."

"Better open a shutter, Dave. Can't see a thing in here." Gail spoke from behind Jane. She felt a strange constraint in his voice. MacIvor straightened. In the faint light from some gap in a shutter Jane could see his face dimly, and she felt her nerves draw tight as he turned to Gail.

"Gail, I was waiting for that word. It was well thought of—as well thought of as the rest of your morning's work. I was not sure, till now, what was in your heart."

"I don't get you, Dave. All I was after was to help you locate Breck's still——"

"And you found it fast enough, when it matched your pleasure to lead me there."

"O, I see now. You want to make out I knew where it was at, all the time! Reckon some folks would think so, but I didn't look for you to do it, Dave. I know it was just luck that carried us to the kennels, but I had a notion you'd figure it was God." He laughed thinly. "Looks like you ain't got as much faith as old Elijah, Dave."

"GAIL, you have shrewd wits, but you take all men, except yourself, for fools. Did you think I could not see you touch my horse with your boot, when we sat waiting to try yonder plan of yours? Did you think my eyes so blind that I could not mark how you guided your own beast, at each turn, with the trick of the knee? Could I not see you choose the path, at every fork?"

Gail laughed again. "Seeing things, Dave! What for would I go making a fool out of myself! If I knew where Rufe had hid up his still, I could have gone straight there, couldn't I?"

"I wonder, Gail, if you could go straight to any goal. But I do not wonder that you chose the crooked path to this one. Luck, you say? I wonder how well you hold your faith in that luck of yours, Gail? Well enough to stand here, beside me, when I throw yonder shutter back? It was well planned, Gail—to let me find Breck's still and stand by to see him kill me, as you made sure he would. It was well thought of, when he did not shoot at once, to bring me here, so that he might have other chances. And it was clever to propose, just now, that I open the shutter. Did you see Breck in the wood, Gail? Or do you hope that he waits out yonder, with his finger ready on the trigger?"

Again Gail laughed, but this time the sound was forced and strange and there was no mirth in it.

"You're dreaming, Dave, or crazy. Rufe Breck wouldn't shoot."

"Gail, for your own purposes you proposed a trial between gods, this day, between your master and mine, believing in neither of the two, your tongue in your cheek as at a jest. You will find either of those two ill to challenge, Gail. See, stand here, as I stand, and see."

Before Jane could cry out he had leaned forward and opened the wide, single leaf of the shutter. A broad beam of sunlight flooded in on the two men and so closely on its coming that it seemed to Jane to be a consequence and part of that sudden illumination, a spiteful, echoing noise sounded in the clearing. She saw Gail sway backward, his hands outspread and groping. Then, as MacIvor reached toward him, he sank to his knees.

"Mighty poor shooting for Rufe Breck," she heard him say. "Missed you, Dave—missed clean."

He slipped from MacIvor's hold and lay still, grotesque, incredible, on the rough floor. Jane heard remote noises, shouts, the beat of hoofs, a clatter of shots, all at some infinite distance. She tried, as if in some benumbed dream, to lean down and touch the huddled figure at her feet, and could not. MacIvor knelt and fumbled for a pulse. Steps echoed in the outer rooms, a loud hail, and Harley Gail came in, breathless.

"We got Breck—claims he done killed Shep." His voice stopped short as he stared at the group. Jane was vaguely aware of a compassion as she saw the honest sorrow in his brick colored face. She seemed to stand outside of it all, to have no part in it.

MacIvor touched her arm, and the contact startled her to a sudden clearness of understanding. She yielded to the guiding pressure and walked before him to the sunlight cleanness of the gallery.

"I must wait here," he said. "There will be much to do. It would be best if you ride home. You will not be afraid?"

Again she bore the straight glance without flinching.

"I shall never be afraid again," she said.

(THE END.)

COSTUME FOOTNOTES FROM THE FOOTLIGHTS

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—There are certain erring ladies of the stage who are always doomed to die in the same costume. There is Camille, for example. It would be impossible to conceive this heroine overcome by fate in anything save the frocks of the second empire. Equally hard to imagine would be a Cleopatra attired by Patou or Chanel.

As for Pinero's Mrs. Tanqueray—well, here is another story. Every time this disturbing figure rises from the grave she does so in clothes that are right up to the moment. In fact, it would seem that the Stygian dressmakers to whom Mrs. Tanqueray resorts during her long periods of banishment from this sphere do a little bit more than merely keep abreast with the mode. They seem to be slightly in advance of our earthly artistes, and consequently every time that the sinful Pinero lady is reincarnated she is able to give us a few hints, not only of what they are wearing but what they will wear.

All this is anent Miss Ethel Barrymore's revival of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray." Miss Barrymore's clothes in this are beautiful and, although our celebrated American actress gives clothes more than they can ever give her, it would be foolish to say that complete justice would be done her tall and goddess-like figure by less tactful garments. Always, in fact, Miss Barrymore suggests to the woman of her own build—the true Juno type—modes which, without detracting from the majesty of her bearing, do—well, yes—they frankly attempt to slenderize.

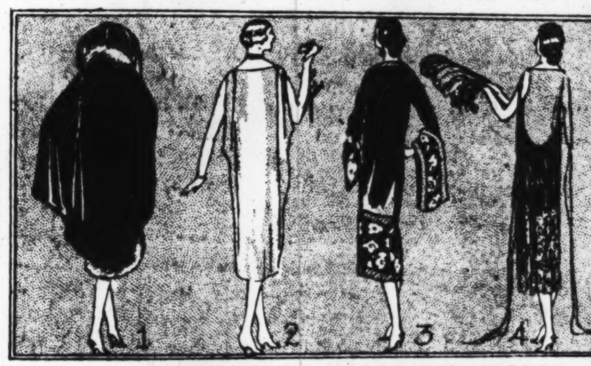
In "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" it will be seen how profoundly Miss Barrymore appreciates the value of the sloping line. First, there is the gorgeous evening gown of white velvet in which she makes her entrance. The front decolletage of this slants downward from a left shoulder strap of rhinestones to a much longer strand on the opposite side. In correspondence with this movement of the decolletage the skirt is draped upward at the left side. In such endorsement of the diagonal line does Miss Barrymore show her wisdom, for it is the sloping direction which lessens any appearance of heaviness in the figure. I know of no more disastrous combination—unless it be that of ostrich plumes and tortoise shell glasses—than the robust physique and straight encircling bands.

Again Miss Barrymore displays her clothes wisdom in the last act when she wears the black dinner gown sketched second from the right. This model is of chiffon over a foundation of crepe satin, and the chiffon is bordered with exquisite Chantilly lace. Black silk fringe is the last of the dramatis personæ, and this is adjusted with the same fidelity to the diagonal impulse. As you see, the front slants downward in a point and it is suspended from a waistline forming a deep curve. In the back the fringe preserves its curving mood, but here it is placed much higher. The U curve in which it is applied is elevated to such an extent, in fact, that it needs only one forward step to reach a first empire landing.

The final detail of the model occurs in long, narrow panels attached to the shoulders in the back. Yes, these trailing panels undoubtedly accentuate the majesty of Miss Barrymore's height, but they do also one other thing. The narrowness of their formation creates an illusion of slenderness. Quite aside, too, from the question of their adaptability to any particular figure, it must be added that the revival of the free panel is one of the features of the mid-season modes just being displayed.

Another element of this model that deserves universal interest is the fringe. This is a trimming which is capable of many interpretations, and the designers have made the most of that fact. It is used as a finish on several of the stage frocks of this winter, among which may be mentioned the lovely yellow chiffon dance dress worn by Violet Kemble Cooper in "Peter Pan." In this model a double tunic is bordered by deep matching fringe swaying beneath the hem line of the foundation.

When Miss Katherine Cornell's designers get to work on this gifted young actress' stage costumes it follows that they are not challenged by the same problems as those which must be met by the designers for the tall and mature figure. For anything that you say of the modern flapper's figure you may apply to Miss Cornell. She is medium size and slim and lithe. Lucky Miss Cornell! Unrestrained she may roam through the clothes fields which display NO TRESPASS signs for the most of us. Wrap her in acre lot plaids; cut her petticoats 'round about her knees; encircle her with bands and straight lines; apply to her physique life size portraits of California apples and African palm trees—do all this, and Miss Cornell will be unaffected by your experiments. She will remain slim and lithe.



OTHER VIEWS OF TODAY'S MODELS.

In the production "Tiger Cats," in which Miss Cornell is now appearing, the famous New York designer who made her clothes has taken advantage of all this margin of natural equipment. All of Miss Cornell's gowns are exceedingly short and some of them have a note of the bizzare.

In the center we are showing one of her most striking costumes—the gown worn by her in the first act. This is of black crepe, and it is banded in flame colored satin. There are quite a few of such bands and they operate in conjunction with great floral appliques of white satin. The skirt is not only short but also excessively tight, and against this background occurs a detail which would be fatal to the heavy woman. I mean by this the enormous cuffs which contribute a final suggestion of something eastern and exotic to the gown.

This model is one designed for those moments which the French call intime. Although not a negligee in the strictest sense of the word, it is destined for house wear. It might be assumed that this model would be limited in its function to the very rich, that it goes with the sort of household where madam descends to say to her social secretary, "Please write to my son today." Yet this is not entirely true. More and more has the need for such a frock crept into the life of the average woman. She, the A. W., wears it on the afternoons when she expects to be hostess at the informal tea, and she may don it also for the equally informal dinner in her own home.

Second from the left is a frock worn by Miss Margaret Lawrence in the first act of "In His Arms." This model of beige charmeuse is eloquent of several factors in the present day mode. The most arresting of these is that front panel outlined by self-binding. In one after another of the new models you find some such paneled treatment—one which begins above the waist line and continues to the bottom of the skirt. Sometimes the panel is plain, as you find it here, and on other occasions it appears in contrasting color and material. One of the voguish thoughts on the subjects is to fill in this panel opening with a series of flounces, and this is the method followed in several Palm Beach gowns that have just been shown. Another element of interest in this stage frock is the flare introduced almost entirely through the mediation of the panel section, for it will be observed that practically all of the fullness occurs at the front. A third and essential factor is located in the long rippling drapery attached to the shoulders in the back, a style point which always adds infinite grace to the straight line frock and one which invites every slender figure in the land. As you detect at a first glance, this gown, too, is awfully short. In fact, it may be said of New York stage gowns in general that they are as short as Paris prescribes, and nothing could be more abbreviated than that—not if it wished to maintain any standing as a skirt.

In proportion to the extent which the panel extending from above the waistline to the hem of the skirt has captured our imagination the vestee prolonged from neckline to below the waist has gained ground. Frequently there is a rectangular opening of this latter type which is filled in with a contrasting fabric—most often georgette in either plaited or ruffled form. In opposition to the cornered effect are frequent V's which are also completed by some substructure. But this does not exhaust the possibilities of such treatment. For in many cases we find the rectangle or the V defined by bindings that offer no contrast of color or material.

To this latter persuasion belongs the delightful creation of Philippe and Gaston worn by one of the members of the Odeon company, now playing here. In this model—one of the straight, unbelted types—self-fabric bands describe a deep, narrow V running down the front from shoulders to below the hips. Another similar band borders the skirt, and two more are employed down the sides. An untrimmed scarf of self-material finishes this gown, which owes its sole note of contrast to tapestry bands executed in dull reds. One of such appliqued bands occurs on the front of the skirt and the other two are administered to the sleeves.

HOW TO MAKE MARSHMALLOWS

THERE are excellent reasons why a freshly made marshmallow is more wholesome than a stale one. One of the reasons is also a reason why homemade marshmallows may be more wholesome than those commercially made. It is that you do not have to eat raw cornstarch—on the surface—which is generally used to dry out those commercially made.

There are other reasons why marshmallows and marshmallow preparations made at home and used within a day or two of the making are worth while. The great present popularity of these things suggests their most economical preparation.

A number of things may be made from a sheet of marshmallow paste—forms to please the children, pretty bits for garnishing salads and desserts [in place of whipped cream], or a freshly made marshmallow molded in some form may be used with a soft custard or other sauce for a dessert. As straight candy the marshmallow is easier to make, and does not carry so many of what may be disastrous calories for child and adult as most other candies. These are not unimportant reasons, when the question is up of whether it is worth while to make them or not.

Garnishes.

Turkish paste has lately been used to garnish fruit salads, and when the fruit flavors and the sours are all fresh and bright in such salads, with no addition to make the whole cloying, such a garnish makes a novel and not unwelcome bit.

Turkish paste or, at any rate, that homemade and so best for a salad garnish is hardly more than a filled marshmallow, the art of making which can more easily be learned after one has learned how to make marshmallows, and a plain marshmallow may be used as a garnish where the paste would be suitable.

Varous Uses of Homemade Marshmallow.

A freshly made marshmallow without the heavy powdering of the surface with sugar or sugar and cornstarch, is not essentially different from a Bavarian cream, and when put up in a fancy mold, to serve on the day made, is quite suitable for a dessert and capable of many variations in form and sauce. It can be served with plain and unsweetened whipped cream. It can be colored to suit. The batch made can be divided into three parts and each part colored differently, then the whole put together in layers which afterwards, when cut across, will yield the Neapolitan slice which it would be correct to call a sponge.

A thin layer of such a preparation might be put between two layers of fudge or caramel (cool so as not to melt it) in making what are called marshmallow fudges or caramels. By varying the flavorings of the marshmallow a [illegible] pleasanter choice in these can be introduced, and since it is not necessary that the marshmallow be made to keep a pleasanter product can be made than when the commercial marshmallow preparations are used, some of which are quite sticky and cloying so that the eater tires of them if they are served often.

A maker of home made marshmallows will at once recognize, when they have been just whipped up, that she has a base to which she might add whipped cream for a mousse or fruit juice for sherbet, of course freezing these after. But without the work of freezing, marshmallow desserts may be almost or quite as acceptable as those frozen.

Simple Marshmallow Recipe.

Formula: One envelope, half a package, one ounce or three level tablespoons of gelatin; two cups of sugar; one cup of water; flavor to suit; confectioner's sugar, and butter for pan or mold.

Method: Wet up gelatin with one-half cup of water and set on stove where it will not come anywhere near boiling but will melt, with stirring. Dissolve sugar in one-half cup water and let cook to 220 degrees, pour over gelatin slowly, beat for ten minutes or until white and rather stiff, and pour into buttered sheet mold, thoroughly sprinkled with confectioner's sugar. Sprinkle the same kind of sugar over top, and put away for several hours. Pour out onto a layer of sugar, and cut into square clocks with knife or use fancy cutter. Spread sugar with knife against a cut edge, and roll cut edges of pieces in sugar. If cut out with fancy cutters, the work should be done before the surface dries, otherwise the top will crack.

Beating of the Marshmallow Preparation.

A bowl and egg beater will do to use in making marshmallows, but if a poor beater is used the preparation may never "come," as we say of butter. When one is working alone, it is much better to have beater and bowl in one, as in the old egg beater or mayonnaise mixer. With a bowl and beater one really needs to have a second person to pour the slightly cooked sugar sirup over the gelatin. Since the beating must go on for ten minutes, it is much easier to use the combined beater and utensil, because the crank is large enough to take in the whole hand, and those on egg beaters must be held by the fingers and besides, this runs easier in every way and the beating is the main piece of work in this business, since the cooking of the sugar is less of a problem than in any other candy made. It is in the cooking of sugar that the amateur candy maker usually "falls down." By the way, the person who is fortunate enough to have a power beater will find marshmallow making about the easiest piece of cooking imaginable.

As to the importance of the beater and the beating, the following from a long article with the title, "The Manufacture of Marshmallow," which appeared in the Manufacturing Confectioner, gives a hint:

It says: "When a manufacturer sells you a beater, he waxes eloquent on its beating qualities, the speed of its operation, the small amount of gelatin required, size of the yield, and range of the temperatures it will handle. This being the case, it is evident that a less efficient beater will require more gelatin, a more careful cooling of the batch, etc. The fact is that the stronger and more complete the action of the beater, the quicker it will finish the batch and the lighter the goods will be. If an extreme swell is not required, the amount of gelatin may be reduced."

We are not as careful to secure the most effective beater for household uses as we might be, nor do we realize how much difference skill in using any beater makes. For instance, I can get twice the "swell" or bulk in beating eggs for sponge cake that I used to get. The first time I tried to make simple marshmallow—long ago—I did not succeed in beating the mixture up to white marshmallow grade.

There is more in the professional article about this matter of beating and an item that might well be quoted to a woman who fails in making sponge cake is: "It is quite a popular error to suppose that the faster the beater is run, the lighter the resulting drops will be. If run faster than intended, they will actually do harm, for in place of beating air into the goods they will simply knock it out again by breaking up the bubbles as fast as they are formed." Too fast beating of egg whites at the start breaks the stretchiness and you can get but small bulk.

Cooking the Sugar.

One recipe for making marshmallow in a reputable candy book for home use says to cook the sugar to a firm ball or to 245 degrees. Now, sugar cooked to that stage will remain a solid mass in any liquid, hot or cold, unless dissolved by heat, and cannot be beaten. The sugar needs hardly to be cooked at all, after it is thoroughly dissolved, and some recipes give 217 degrees as the temperature to cook it to, but 220 works well.

Cooking the Gelatin.

Some recipes call for a cooking of the gelatin at a boiling temperature. The professional article mentioned says it must not be exposed at any time to a temperature above 180 degrees F. This article says the gelatin must be sterile, and greatly emphasizes the quality, saying that if it is not good the backbone of the marshmallows will snap and they will become sticky and lose their form, and sometimes gases will be produced which will puff up a piece of marshmallow so that a chocolate coating will burst while the center will become soggy and the whole have a bad odor.

These items all suggest why freshly made marshmallows are the safest to eat, for in this business of eating it is the tiny harm of today, added to the tiny harm done us tomorrow and in a long succession of days, that breaks our health at some future date.

At a big candy exposition agar, or what we sometimes call "vegetable gelatin," was on display by one manufacturer, and could not fail to please those who like the purest possible candies. But just what proportion of water to use with this for marshmallows made by ordinary hand beating seems to be something that is still to be worked out for the housekeeper.

It is worth noting by those who like gelatin desserts and the popular gelatin salads (aspic and others) that failures may be due to overcooking of the gelatin. Not a few do fail with such things.

Fancy Cutting of Marshmallows.

Pastry cutters, cookie cutters or a knife may be used in cutting up a sheet of marshmallow. In using small and fancy cutters, well sugared, it will be necessary to wash the cutters after each use, if they get sticky. Wash and dry, rub well with sugar, and ease into the cake of marshmallow so as not to stretch the surface. This may mean pushing down a little way easily and then easing back. The idea is not to mash down with one hard stroke, especially if you are making garnishes from a thick cake of marshmallow that has stood for any length of time. If a knife be used it may have to be constantly dipped in boiling water; but, if sugar will stick to it effective work can be done.

Decorating Marshmallow Forms.

For children, all sorts of entertaining marshmallow forms, such as beasts and dolls, may be made with cookie cutters, and made still more realistic by sticking on such candies as may be taken from those used for decorating cake, often called "hundreds and thousands," for eyes and outlines. Colored icings may be piped on, or something like toasted cocoanut stuck on to imitate embroidery on the skirts of a candy doll. To stick anything of this sort on, melt one-half cup of sugar in two tablespoonfuls of water and stir over a low fire until it is just a little more than dissolved or until it comes to the boiling point and is really a sticky sirup.

Toasted Cocoanut.

Toasted cocoanut is really an agreeable confection of itself, especially in a sirup, and may be used on forms of marshmallow to make a brown bear, or on a cookie foundation. All that is necessary is to put the shredded cocoanut under the broiler and stir it a few times until it browns or in a hot oven

Beauty Answers

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

VIVIAN: YOUR BEST SLEEP IS with the stomach practically empty. It is believed by some that food eaten before going to bed causes sleep. It may put one to sleep at first by diverting the blood from the head, but it will disturb sleep later. Fruit may be eaten before retiring. A glass of hot milk is often taken by those troubled with insomnia.

NAN: I PREFER YOU TO MAKE your own decision, Nan. However, it is the opinion of hair dressers that the bob has come to stay—regardless of what is heard to the contrary. The bob is much to be preferred to the wigs which I understand are being put on the market now—and it is more youthful, too, don't you think? I'm for it every time.

BETTY: YOU EAT TOO MANY rolls, dear. Rolls are a form of bread, and bread is the article which causes more adipose than any other food. You must regulate your supply of bread as you do your meat and vegetables, and be satisfied with one helping. One slice of bread with each meal is sufficient, and if you will limit yourself to this amount you will be surprised and delighted with the result.

Millions of the best of families always keep a large 60 cent package at hand—they know its magic and druggists guarantee it.

The Fight Is Won by Haley's M-O

Nature Finds Perfect Ally in Battle for Better Health

There is no such thing as holding your own against the evils of acid (sour) stomach. You either conquer or lose.

The chances are you are losing if you have the regular symptoms of clogged intestines and bodily poisons—heartburn and belching, dark brown taste, black spots dancing before your eyes.

Here is help for you—Haley's Magnesia-Oil. Its pure mineral oil is an easy, effective lubricant for the intestines; its mild, sweet milk of magnesia is the finest antacid known to science. Combined in this perfect emulsion, they insure a wonderful effect.

Get a bottle of Haley's M-O right now. Start taking it tonight. See how it tones you up, clears your skin, takes away that dark brown taste.

Very delightful to take, too. The oldest and youngest alike can take it with perfect ease and confidence. At all druggists. Trial size bottle, 35c; family size, $1.00. The Haley M-O Company, Indianapolis, Ind.

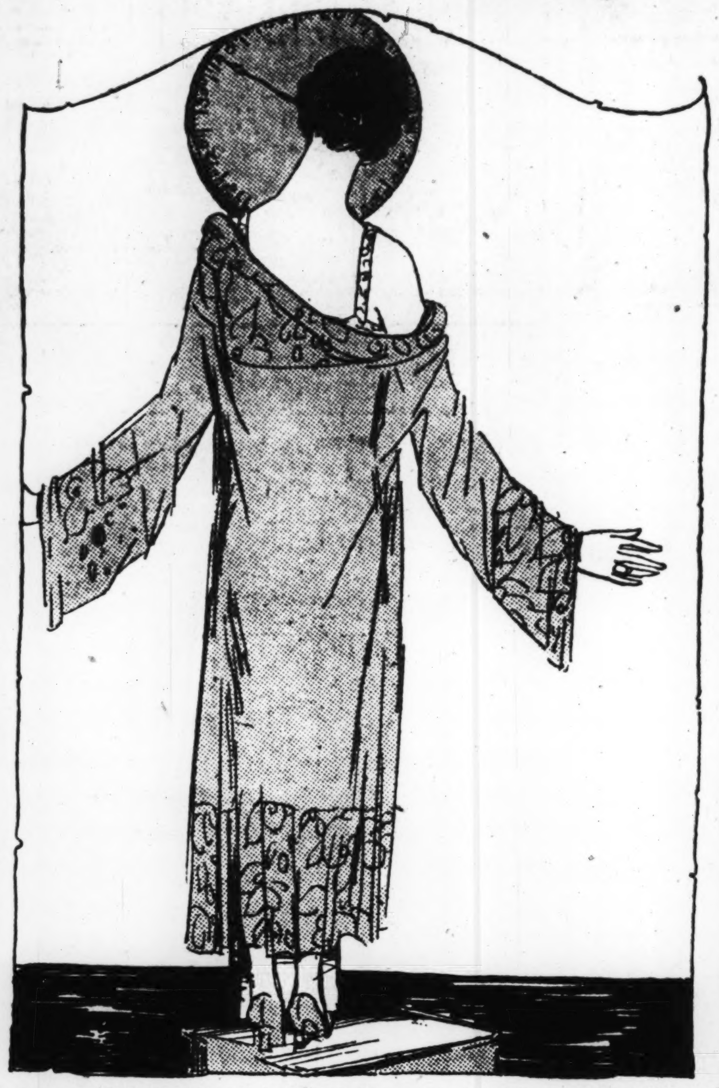
WEIGHT AT THIRTY IDEAL

by Antoinette Donnelly



NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—Any age over 30 that is weighted with excess pounds is the dangerous age. The closer you stay to the thirty year scale of height and measure, the better your chances for a long life, a merry one, an active one, and a handsomer one.

Do you know what your weight at 30 should be?

Here is a scale for you to check with:

[Weight at age 30 for various heights.]

MEN.		WOMEN.
5 ft.	....126 lbs.	4 ft. 8 in.	...112 lbs.
5 ft. 1 in.	...128 lbs.	4 ft. 9 in.	...114 lbs.
5 ft. 2 in.	...130 lbs.	4 ft. 10 in.	...116 lbs.
5 ft. 3 in.	...133 lbs.	4 ft. 11 in.	...118 lbs.
5 ft. 4 in.	...136 lbs.	5 ft.	....120 lbs.
5 ft. 5 in.	...140 lbs.	5 ft. 1 in.	...122 lbs.
5 ft. 6 in.	...144 lbs.	5 ft. 2 in.	...124 lbs.
5 ft. 7 in.	...148 lbs.	5 ft. 3 in.	...127 lbs.
5 ft. 8 in.	...152 lbs.	5 ft. 4 in.	...131 lbs.
5 ft. 9 in.	...156 lbs.	5 ft. 5 in.	...134 lbs.
5 ft. 10 in.	...161 lbs.	5 ft. 6 in.	...138 lbs.
5 ft. 11 in.	...166 lbs.	5 ft. 7 in.	...142 lbs.
6 ft.	....172 lbs.	5 ft. 8 in.	...146 lbs.
6 ft. 1 in.	...178 lbs.	5 ft. 9 in.	...150 lbs.
6 ft. 2 in.	...184 lbs.	5 ft. 10 in.	...154 lbs.
6 ft. 3 in.	...190 lbs.	5 ft. 11 in.	..157 lbs.
6 ft. 4 in.	...196 lbs.	6 ft.	....151 lbs.

Why pay a fortune teller a couple of dollars when by dropping a penny in the slot the indicator on the scale will forecast an active life, with every possibility of having success and money, or by the same token learn that you are going to meet with losses and disappointments due to muscular degeneration, faulty brain activity, or plain laziness, if you don't mind harsh words?

Excess Weight Danger Signal.

Dr. Eugene Lyman Fisk, medical director of the Life Extension institute, says the average person does not stand the best chance of living long. In fact, the man or woman who weighs 20 or 30 per cent below the average has the best chance for long life at most of the ages after early adult life.

Up to the age of 30, in the doctor's opinion, it does little harm to be overweight, as long as that weight does not reach serious proportions. But after 30 there is an increasing danger in overweight and an increasing advantage in being slightly underweight.

Dr. Fisk says the average individual reaches the ideal build at 30. If he can keep to that build for the rest of his life, he increases his chances for longevity. After 40 the danger, as shown by life insurance records, increases alarmingly.

No get thin quick medicines or any special set of exercises is proposed by the doctor as the means of getting rid of excess fat. Weight will not come down by exercise alone. Diet and exercise, with the heavier emphasis on the diet, are the logical methods of acquiring and keeping the figure at par. Eight hours of steady walking, he shows, will burn up only four ounces of fat. Cutting down on food at a day's meal will do more than that.

For the fat person of middle life strenuous exercise is advised against. Exercise for such must be begun gradually and increased by slow degrees.

Every one, young, middle aged and old, should know something about food values. At least, he should know the foods that are fat forming and those that are not. This knowledge should be brought to bear in ordering and preparing foods.

The Reducing Diet.

For the benefit of those who think appetizing menus cannot be made without fat forming foods, here is a list of soups without fat making properties:

Clam broth, beef broth, vegetable soup, bouillon, chicken soup, consomme, Julienne, and tomato.

Among fish you have this variety to choose from: Lobster, shrimp, cod, halibut, trout, and clams.

In meat there is: Beef (boiled, broiled, or roast), roast lamb, hamburg steak, chicken, and turkey.

The vegetable supply is generous: Asparagus, string beans, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, okra, sauerkraut, wax beans, stewed celery, cooked beets, mashed turnips, parsnips, rutabagas, stewed tomatoes, raw celery, cucumbers, Brussels sprouts, beet greens, dandelion greens, spinach, lettuce, watercress, endive, mushrooms, onions, squash, radishes, raw tomatoes, lettuce.

In addition, there are eggs, boiled, coddled or poached. Gluten bread, gluten biscuit, water cracker, rye bread. Brie and cottage cheese are allowed on a reducing diet.

In fruits we have apple, pear, orange, peach, pineapple, watermelon, muskmelon, grapefruit, raspberries, strawberries, blueberries, apricots, and prunes.

Beverages: Buttermilk, skim milk, lemonade, orange juice, tea with lemon and black coffee.

Potatoes in moderate amounts are allowed on some excellent reducing diets, but bread and potatoes should never be eaten at same meal. Cereals, bread, and cake should be taken in limited amounts.

Butter, fatty portions of meat, salad oil, cream, and nuts contain much that goes into fat.

Starchy foods, breadstuffs, biscuits, and pastry are fat producers. Sugars and sweets of all kinds are to be considered as just so much pure fuel.

The protein from eggs, milk, meat, and flesh food free from fatty oils supplies the material necessary for muscular tissue.

Bread and butter consumption is surprisingly responsible for much of the excess fat. In reckoning the food consumed a person will forget entirely to figure it. One eats a buttered roll while waiting for luncheon or dinner to appear, and counts it as no part of the meal. Every other item of food is served in helpings—one order of meat, one order of vegetables, one of soup and so on—but bread is consumed without respect to its being a second or third helping.

Next week I shall give you menus for seven days by which you who would like to attain your ideal weight may successfully do so.

LOVE LETTERS

ON THE BLUE SKY TRAIL.

DEAREST LONESOME GIRL: Remember what I told you when we came down from the sky and landed that last time a couple of miles east of Hagerstown in that little field, with the glory of autumn woods around us? I do! It was then that I told you I loved you. I hope my eyes and kiss showed it. I don't think my voice did, for it failed me, and I wasn't sure whether you liked me just a tiny bit or not, and I was afraid to ask you, and before you could answer your friends were over the farmer's fence and the roar of my motor drowned out your good-by as I took off into the sky where we had a few moments before held our only sanctuary since I met you.

But your letter, which I have just received, seems to cast all doubt from my mind. For in it I read between the lines, and there is a deep throbbing lonesomeness that seems to come from your heart and stretch itself out across the air lane which brought me a few days ago so swiftly from you. The letter is so much like you. That is why I like it.

I could see your smile as you sealed it to mail; a smile, perhaps sad—I hope, just a small bit. I'm sure nothing but the truest, bluest, little heart in the world could have sent such a tender meaning.

Ruth, dearest little girl, I'm sure your letter said all through it, "I love you, Eddie." Didn't it?

I'll never in the world be able to say on paper how much I'm missing you. I'll have to do the best I can till I return from Iowa. Think blue eyes can wait that long? I doubt I'll be able to. On my long hop over there I wish I could take you with me. There will be a lonesome front cockpit in the plane.

You'll just have time to write and let me know if you'll let me take you with me west. I'd like to show you a better glimpse of that garden of my heart, where we'll fly along the blue sky trail straight into the setting sun. All my love.

Marvelous New Shoe

—that will end the pain of a woman's aching feet—

—a shoe that relieves and corrects the cause of painful callouses on the ball of the foot.

—a shoe that corrects the tendency to run over the heels of your shoes.

—a shoe that aligns and straightens ankles which lean inward or outward.

—a shoe that ends the pain of fallen aches.

—a shoe that is adjustable to your foot, building your foot structure to its natural lines.

—a shoe that fits, feels and looks as graceful as though tailored to the foot.

Exactly what you have longed for in a shoe—comfort, fit, foot relief, adjustability—all without the sacrifice of style. Whatever may be your conception of how a shoe should feel, how a shoe should look, how a shoe should fit, you'll find in this marvelous new creation the

Arch Builder
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
SHOE
ADJUSTABLE TO THE FOOT

The framework of the human foot consists of 26 bones. Nature put every bone where it belongs, but you upset nature's plans. More than likely you wore shoes that crowded some of the bones out of place, causing dull aches or sharp twinges of pain. Relief will come only when the pressure is relieved and the bones restored to their normal position.

Adjustable at Arch, Ball and Heel

Beneath the smooth leather insole of the Arch-Builder Shoe is a series of overlapping pockets at the ball of the foot. There are others at the inner arch and at the heel. This arrangement permits adjustment at any part of the foot.

By placing thin leather inserts in the pockets, the lowered or misaligned bones are gently restored to natural position. Immediately there is a most remarkable transformation in your aching feet. They rest comfortably and naturally on the cushions formed. The intricate bone structure is again in perfect alignment, restoring the youthful, graceful lines to your feet.

Arch-Builder Shoes are adjustable at the arch, at the ball and at the heel. You'll realize how essential this is when you stop to consider that no two feet are alike. Arches even in feet requiring same size shoes vary greatly in height, length and shape. Arch-Builder shoes, adjustable, give you the proper correction at any part of the foot you may need it.

Furthermore, the adjustable features make the Arch-Builder Shoes look and feel as though they were fashioned to your feet. Neither too tight nor too loose at the ball; no gapping or cutting at the instep; neither pinching nor slipping at the heel.

This Week—Special Demonstration

in our Special Fitting Department

That you may know how comfortable your feet can be made to feel, we have arranged a Special Demonstration this week to introduce these marvelous new shoes to you. Skillful Arch Builder foot fitters will be on hand to serve and advise all who have any trouble with their feet or shoes. Consult these experts. There is no obligation. We merely want you to know how wonderful your feet can be made to feel in these marvelous new Arch-Builder Shoes—which will end your foot troubles!

WHAT IS NEURITIS?

Neuritis is an inflammation of the nerves that produces sharp, darting pain very similar to that of rheumatism. In fact, the disease is often mistaken for rheumatism and treated as such, with the result that the sufferer gets no lasting benefit.

Neuritis is usually brought on by colds, injuries, bruises, nervous exhaustion, malarial poisoning or infectious diseases. The pain may be confined to one spot or it may move from place to place. Sometimes it is accompanied by soreness in the muscles, numbness in the hands or feet, lame back, stiff joints, eye strain or severe headaches.

The only way to obtain permanent, lasting relief is to heal the affected nerves—get rid of the inflammation. Ropa Neuritis Tablets are compounded for that very purpose. Harmless, pleasant and effective. A trial package will convince you. Price $1.00 from your druggist or send direct to the makers. Postage prepaid on receipt of price or sent C. O. D. if preferred. Boericke & Runyon Co., Mfrs., 881 Folsom St., San Francisco.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

WINTER RESORT CLOTHES FOR THE DEBUTANTE.

By Bettina Bedwell.

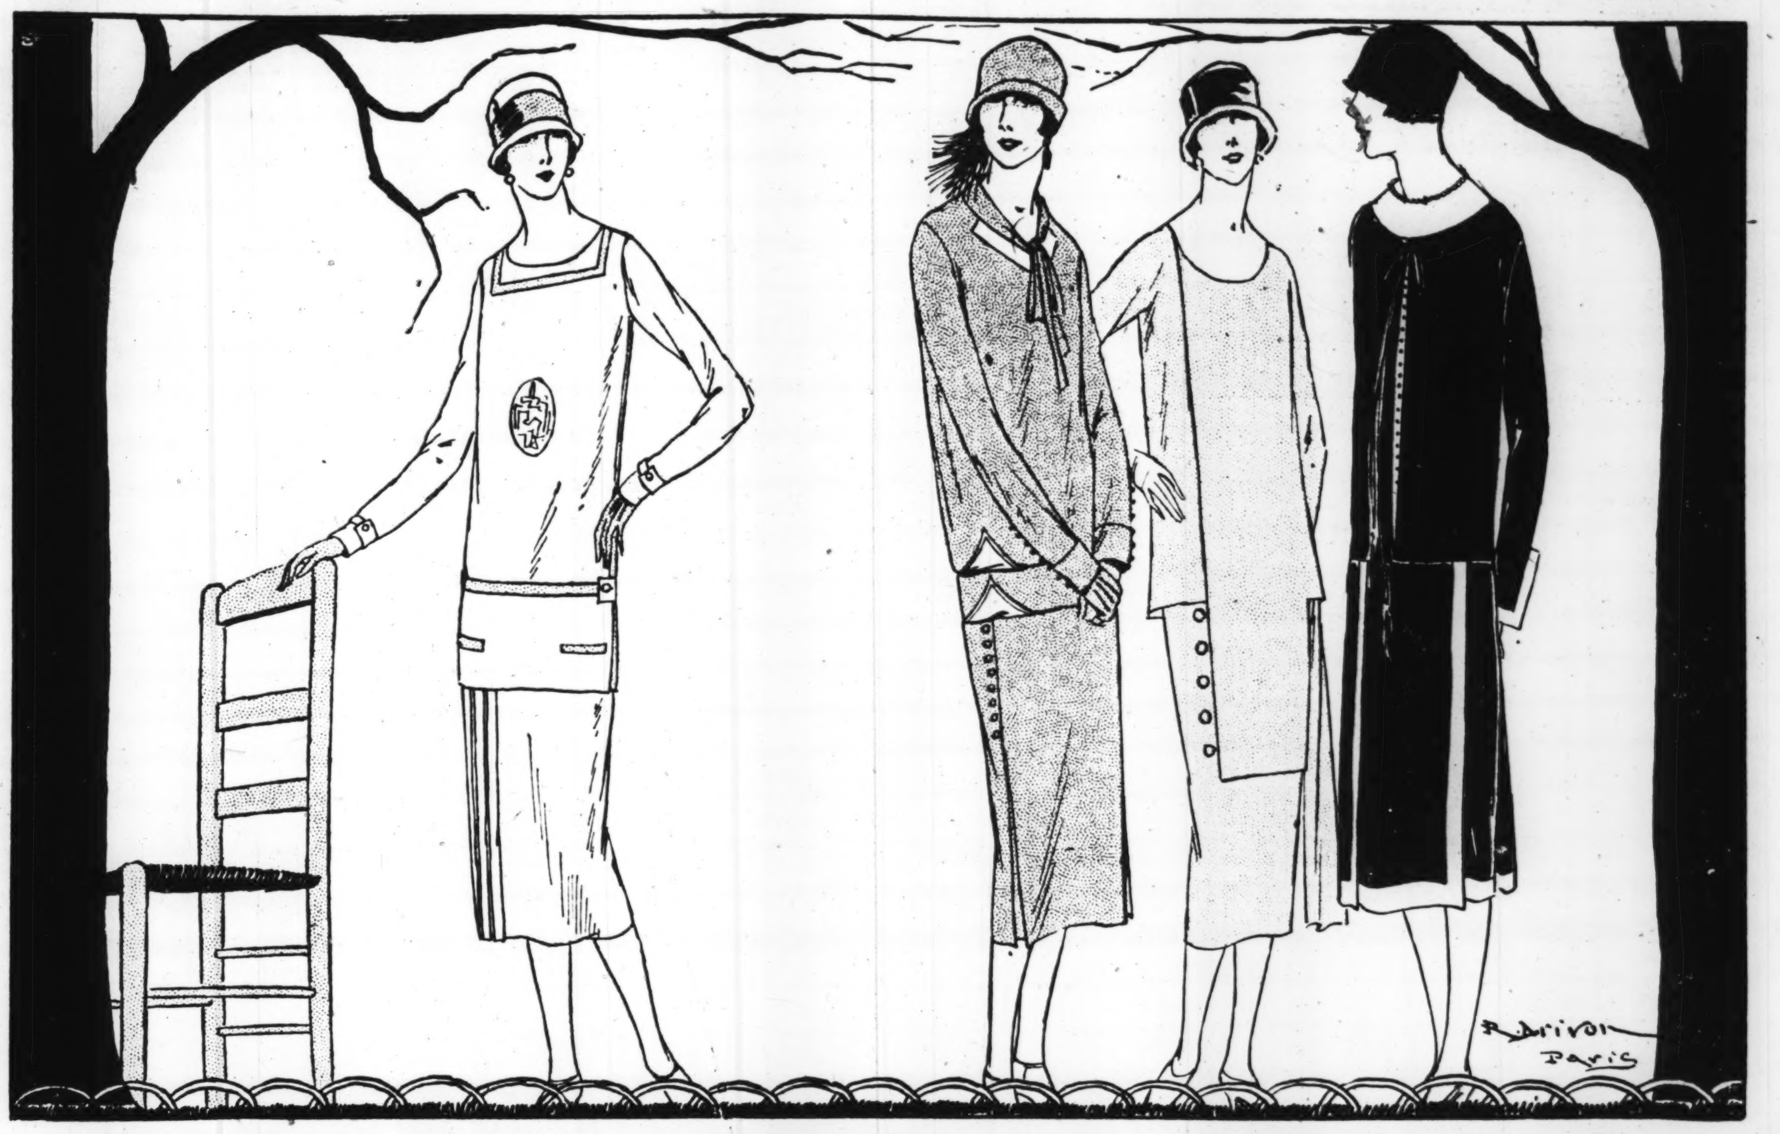
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—If you are a girl in what we after-thirties call "the happy years," somewhere between 16 and 24, when mislaying your vanity case with its rice powder coated puff isn't a tragedy, because even a shiny youthful nose is a charming accident, you may call the mode yours. It is, indeed. For every one who can qualify in appearance the years do not matter. There is a landslide of fashion in favor of the young frock of crepe or serge, which gives the advantage to you over all other candidates for smartness when these favorites are up for consideration.

One of the important trade marks of this season's styles is the jumper dress, a development of the Peter Thompson and middy suits we used to wear at boarding school. It has been given a rigorous course af Parisiennizing, passing through several seasons of this transformation process, and they have turned out the completed and cultivated product for the winter resort season. Such frocks are in the majority for Cannes, St. Moritz, and the other European places where the sun goes when he turns his back on Paris and leaves her at the mercy of the daily winter rains and clouds.

The first of our models is a little offering from Cyber for the young girl, made specially to be worn on the Cote d'Azur or in Switzerland. It was first presented a week or so ago at Biarritz, in a special showing of the models of this house, and was voted by the fashionable audience the most successful model seen. M. Cyber calls it "Chamonix," a bit of humorous suggestion on his part, for it is intended most especially for a climate of considerably higher temperature than that of Chamonix. The material is kasha, that first cousin to serge on one side and to cashmere on the other, and the color is red, bordering on the fuchsia. This tone of the season is one that is quite ravishing, but, entre nous, extremely trying to all but the most youthful complexions. For the young girl it is marvelously becoming, and really does some extraordinary enhancing to her clear, unblemished skin.

In this case Cyber has combined it with white, which is altogether the most suitable complement to it. He has cut the blouse a straight jumper that has no traffic with the curved line and hugs the hips closely after its undeviating course from shoulders down. The skirt is short, indeed, coming only a few inches below the knees and thus increasing the handicap of youth. There are six deep plaits at the side. The white has been used to pipe the inset pockets, to form the bands that hold the long, fitted sleeves close about the wrist, and to make the oval of embroidery on the front of the waist. Cyber has made an attempt to square the circle in the neck line, rounding the chiffon yoke and then squaring it on three sides. An innocuous little dress, you will say, but don't you think it has a great deal of chic? More than that, it has a demurely intriguing simplicity that is mighty effective, added to its greatest popularity reputation.



The next frock, too, is one of those little things that look so much like other current creations of the jumper dress, and yet deviate just enough to be awfully smart and distinguished in a youthful way. It is made from dark blue serge, our old standby, of which the French never tire, no matter how many novelty fabrics are introduced in a season, and it is trimmed with suede, white and so awfully thin and supple that it looks and behaves like crepe de chine. By the way, this type of suede has become all of a sudden very smart as a trimming. They say it is for those new sixteen button flesh colored gloves that all the smart ladies wore at the plage this summer, but you see it sailing along the boulevards cut up into the cutest little designs and sewed on to debutante frocks, or else it forms facings to revers and such like fancies of the couturier.

Blanche Lebouvier, who designed our second model, has used it—in white—to line the ties and the revers of this frock. The puzzle is, naturally, to find the revers, because they are not at all in their proper place—that's the little Parisian touch, to put 'em at the double lower edge of the jumper blouse. This blouse is cut, as if by mistake, to end well above the hips and then pieced by a four inch band to extend down to them. That's another of its little secrets of distinction.

However, the collar is the piece de resistance of the model, for what starts out apparently to be an undecorated round neck all in one with the waist suddenly becomes wayward and splits into two suede lined ties in front, with a rounded slice cut out below to show the suedelike surface of a fine white skin. The tale of the skirt is short and simple, with an inverted box plait at the right side and a half row of serge covered buttons.

Our third young girl model is from Sandra, a new couturiere, who started out as a councilor in Russia under the Kerensky government and, after the advent of bolshevism, went to London and ended by making clothes for the British aristocracy under the auspices of Lady Carson. She calls this frock "Chouquette," and makes it out of sand colored kasha, a fabric that is one of her favorites, and also fashion's. The cut of the blouse and the knee length front tunic alone would give it distinction, but the full, floating side panel that migrates from the left hip to the bottom of the skirt is thrown in for good measure. The loose flowing lines of the blouse put it effectively in the debutante class, and they form the deadline for anything that borders on the thirties. It is essentially for the youthful figure, and for it alone. The buttons are really cute little balls of fur, a feature that the season's fashions have found acceptable, and the long, tight sleeves are also fastened with these same tiny round fastenings of fuzz. There is no fastening, really; you simply writhe into it as you do into 98 per cent of Paris gowns.

Our fourth frock for the debutante is intended to eliminate the ancient American idea that black is old. It is, like a lot of other colors, easy for youth and often difficult for age, which needs the softening influence of some lighter tone. It employs the four panel skirt, which is one of the little changes of last season that has lived through in good health in this. Lebouvier has banded each of these panels, which are made from the dull finished side of black crepe satin, with white crepe romain, and tucked them at the top with little clusters of three tucks to give added fullness. They float around the scenery whenever the wearer moves rapidly or dances, and form a sort of sartorial aura which is exceedingly pleasant.

The blouse is straight-lined and simple. It is slit down the center front to show a tiny gilet of white crepe romain and a row of romain covered buttons so tiny they are no larger than little French peas. There is a tie of black with small tassels and circles of carved ivory at the ends. The sleeves are of the type seen on 90 per cent of our smartest daytime frocks—the long and tight—and they have stiff cuffs made of white crepe romain.

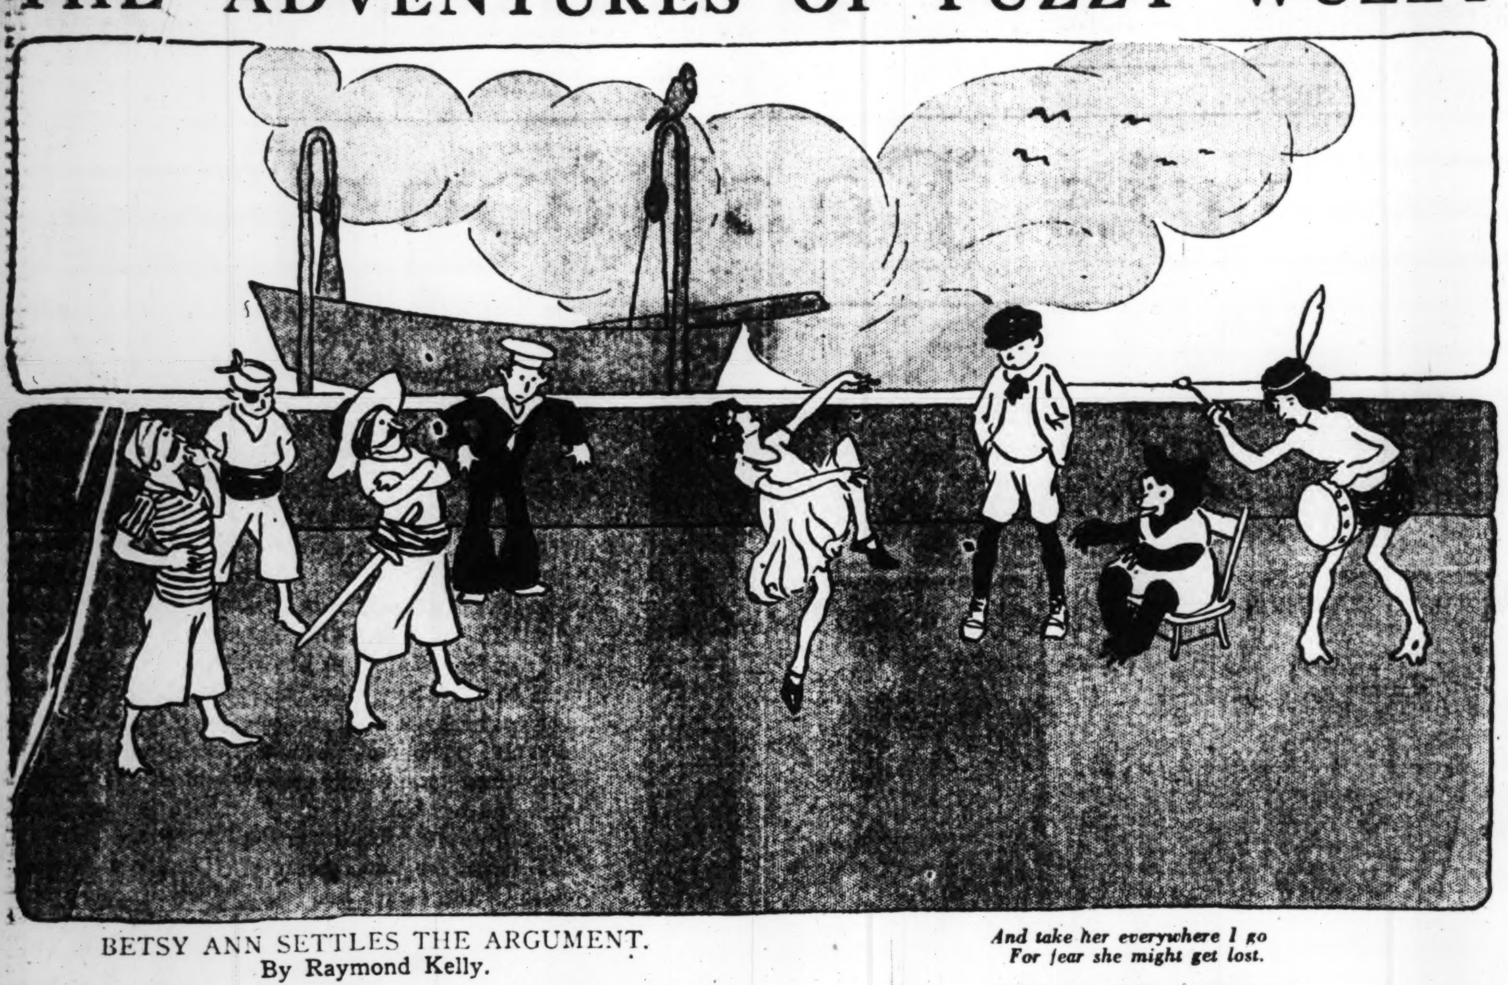
THE ADVENTURES OF FUZZY WUZZY



BETSY ANN SETTLES THE ARGUMENT.

By Raymond Kelly.

THE raft wasn't any more, because it was a boat with masts and sails and everything, as I told you before. Besides it had a crew with a captain and a crowd of pirates with their chief. Then, too, there were Betsy Ann with her doll, and Bobby, Hawk Feather, and our little friend Fuzzy Wuzzy. Besides there was Grumpy, the mechanical frog, who could wind himself up at will.

But who was boss? That was the big question. Hawk Feather said he was, because he'd found the raft. Grumpy said he was, because he was the only self-winding frog in the world, or anywhere else for that matter. The captain of the crew said he was boss because he had a brass plate on his hat, and the pirate chief claimed the honor, because he'd captured the ship and was the only one who knew where the treasure was and how to find it.

Now a question like that just naturally has to be settled; so everybody was interested when Betsy Ann said, "You're all wrong, for none of you is boss, because I am, and I'll prove it to you. But first let us all go up on deck. I want to watch the flying fishes while I talk. You may carry a chair up on deck for me, Mr. Pirate."

"Gladly, madam," answered the pirate chief. "I'd even carry your doll for you, and that's giving in a whole lot for a pirate, I'm sure."

"Thank you, Mr. Pirate," said Betsy Ann, "that's perfectly lovely of you; but I never entrust the handling of my dolls to any one. Somehow it doesn't seem quite respectable. But if I were to allow any one to do it, I'm sure it would be a pirate," and, with her best bow, Betsy Ann sat down in the chair, placing her feet on the pink silk cushion that Fuzzy Wuzzy laid on the deck for that purpose.

"I might as well wear my crown, too," said Betsy Ann, "because, even though it is only a paper one, it will help in getting used to queenly ways. Now, as to who is boss here and why, you see it's this way. I'm boss because I'm a girl and because I'm company I'm willing to be the best boss that ever was and do everything you want me to do; so I'm sure nobody will have the least objection to minding me. So perhaps you'd all best vote on it," which they did, and everybody agreed that Betsy Ann was boss. Everybody, that is, except Grumpy, the mechanical frog, who was taking another nap.

"What title are you going to be called by?" asked Fuzzy Wuzzy of Betsy Ann.

"Why, I'm not particular," she replied, "Your Royal Highness is all right, but if you think that sounds the least bit too proud I shan't mind at all if you merely say 'Your Majesty. And to prove that I'm just as good natured as I claim to be, I'm going to show you the new dance Miss Perkins taught me. She's my dancing teacher, and she's awfully nice. I sing while I dance, too."

So Betsy Ann sang and danced while Fuzzy Wuzzy sat on the deck and rocked back and forth to the music. Hawk Feather beat his tom-tom, the crew jingled the bells they wore for buttons, and the pirates twisted their moustaches. And this is the song she sang:

O, I have just the nicest doll,
I call her Beauty Blue,
Although she has no hair at all
And one arm's missing, too.

I've lots of newer dolls, you know,
But I love Beauty most,
And take her everywhere I go
For fear she might get lost.

I think t'would be an awful crime.
Too bad to print in books,
If I forgot her just 'cause time
Has kind of spoiled her looks.

"It's a beautiful song, your majesty," said the pirate chief, "and I'd love to hear you sing it again some time, but just now I have a favor to ask of you."

"Speak, Pirate," said Betsy Ann kindly. "If possible your favor shall be granted."

"Well," said the pirate chief, "I'm a bit afraid my men will go stale for lack of exercise. Would your majesty object if we had a few sword fights and then looted the ship?"

"Are you sure you'll put everything back the way you found it?" asked Betsy Ann.

"O, yes, your majesty, no first class pirate would expect any one to pick up after him."

"Then you may loot to your heart's content," said Betsy Ann, "and if you find any silk pieces you may bring them to me. I'm thinking of making a new dress for Beauty Blue."

So they had some lovely sword fights, and then everybody turned in and helped the pirates loot the ship. But they put every thing back except what they ate as they went along, which, of course, didn't count.

Best Laxative for Men, Women, Children

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton DuPuy.

ISN'T it odd that the boring beetles, to the last individual, should be smothered to death by the plants they cultivate as food and upon which they subsist most of their lives!

The beetles live in tunnels they dig in the sapwood of great logs. Here they lay out gardens which they tend carefully and in which they grow a crop for all the world like tiny asparagus.

This food crop is called ambrosia, which once signified "the food of the gods," and from it this beetle is called the ambrosia beetle.

The insects prepare the asparagus beds, manure them, plant the seed. They are expert gardeners.

The asparagus, to be good, must be cut at a certain stage of its development just as must that of man. If so cut it will sprout again, grow crop after crop from the same roots as does the sugar cane of Cuba.

If it is not cut, however, it becomes a menace, grows rankly, goes to seed, fills up the tunnels. The beetles must not plant more than they can keep cut.

The ambrosia beetle lives in a felled log or dying tree. The fermenting sap of it gives the ambrosia just the condition in which it thrives.

The female beetles seem wiser than their husbands, know that a time will come when this log will dry out. At the right moment they leave it, bearing their unborn children, fly away in search of another, a fresher tree. The males stay behind, reveling in the luxury of their comfortable quarters and abundant food supply.

Now that the females are gone, however, there is too much asparagus. The males cannot keep it all cut. It gains on them, crowds them out. They retreat from tunnel to tunned. They club together in certain passage ways and eat for their very lives. But the increase of the fungus goes on inexorably. Eventually the last beetle is smothered.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune

Patricia and her mother were hurrying to catch a street car, but mother protested that she could not run another step.

"Never mind," declared small daughter, "I'll wave my hand and wait it for you." E. L. R.

Robert was anxious to do the shopping for his mother. She asked him if he would go to the meat market and get a pound of pork tenderloins and have them flattened. He would not have her write it down, because he was sure to remember.

When he reached the market and the clerk asked him what he wanted, he could not remember.

After trying to explain the kind of meat he wanted, he finally said, "Give me a pound of meat that you first stand 'em up and then knock 'em down." A. S.

Clara was anxious for her birthday to come so she could invite her little friends to a feast; but the day was a good way off.

"Well, can't we give a party anyway?" she pleaded. "We kids are hungry enough for ice cream and cake any old day." M. E.

New German Oil Formula Rubs Out Rheumatic Pains

Remarkable discovery promises quick, soothing relief for rheumatism, gout, neuralgia and neuritis sufferers.

German Chemistry that has given to the world the boon of Aspirin for the relief of headache pain, and Novocain for painless dentistry, has now come forward with another scientific discovery that promises to make nerve, joint and muscular pains a thing of the past for thousands who have suffered terrible tortures.

A new combination of certain oils has been discovered which produces a clear amber liquid that affords immediate relief from pain in many instances. It is so penetrating that it disappears within a few seconds; so that it must be entirely absorbed by the body tissue. Even in the most advanced and stubborn cases the use of this remarkable oil has shown astonishing improvement at once in many cases. Tired muscles regain life, creaking joints with the pain all gone become supple, the nerves are quickly soothed and the annoying twinges cease.

Rheumatism, gout, neuralgia and neuritis are due to internal infections which throw off poisons. These poisons are carried by the blood to the nerve tissue where they inflame and irritate the nerve sheath. The New German Oil is designed to neutralize these pain-causing poisons, bringing almost instant soothing relief.

So astonishing have been the results from the use of this oil that the American distributors have authorized local druggists to dispense it to rheumatic, gout, neuralgia and neuritis sufferers in this city with a positive written guarantee, signed by themselves, to return the full purchase price of the first bottle if the pains are not wonderfully relieved. All sufferers should take advantage of this liberal offer. Unless you get relief from the very first bottle, your druggist will return your money. It is called Buhler Oil, and can be had at most good druggists, such as Buck & Rayner (6 stores), Public D. C. (265 State St.), Walgreen & Co., Arrow Drug Co., Home Drug Co., Economical Drug Co.

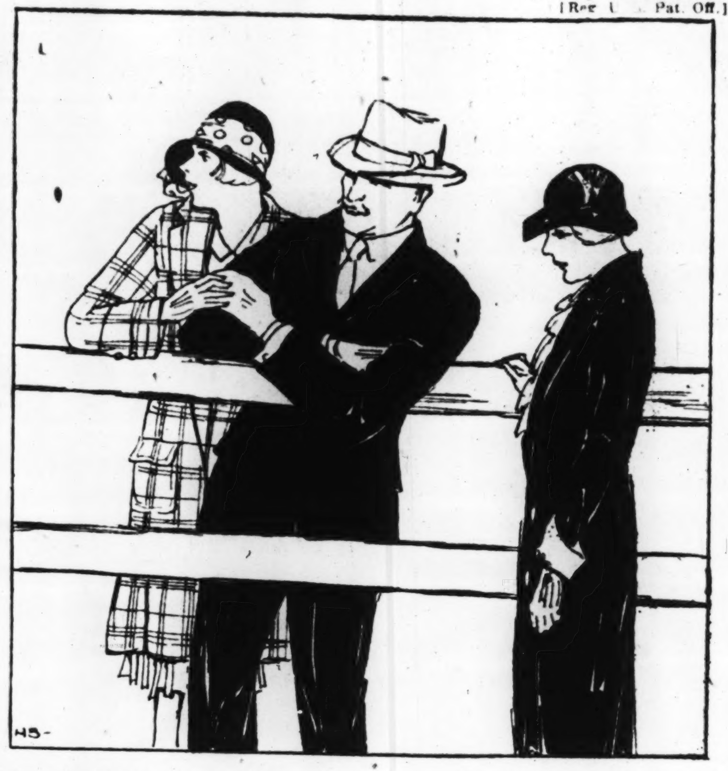
THE HOUSE DIVIDED

by Doris Blake

[Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.]



In a Doting Father 'And Pal Daughter Combination Where Is Mother's Place?

A CURIOUS situation is revealed in a letter to me. In a family of three, father, mother and 18 year-old daughter, the house is divided against itself. Mother believes herself to be the outsider. Father who, in the early years of marriage, was a devoted lover now, according to mother's story, is wholly engrossed in the daughter. She is his one and only thought. She is his pal. They have little jokes on which mother is not let in. They go to ball games, to shows and on Sunday morning hikes. Mother is left at home. It makes her miserably unhappy to be neglected or, as she puts it, to see her beautiful young daughter succeeding her in father's affections.

Mother says she is occasionally invited to go with dad and Helen, but she feels they would be glad if she declined, and decline she does.

One wonders whether jealousy is not at work in this family circle; whether mother is not one of the kind of parents whom psychologists explain as resentful of a daughter's fresh beauty and fearful lest daughter become a rival in the affections of her husband. Or, the situation may be one that is occasional—daughter frankly wanting always to be the favored one in father's affections. There are cases where the girl-child, emerging from the immediate supervision of mother, shows a distinct tendency to transfer her love to a father, and sometimes with such fervor as to look upon mother as a rival, whose claims to love from her father stand in the way of his love for herself. The strife between mother and daughter lasts until the girl transfers her love to some male outside her family circle.

Again, it may be father's fault. He may show his pride in his daughter too plainly. His doting affection may give the girl an inflated idea of her own importance, developing in her an attitude of overbearing superiority which mother gets the brunt of.

Breaking In.

In any event, it is unfortunate for all three that this state of affairs should exist. It strikes me it is up to mother now to win her way back somehow into the old groove, when both father and daughter depended upon her for many ministrations.

I would advise her to look closely into her own heart and determine whether or not jealousy is gnawing away at her better sense. If it is standing between her and participation in the family romance, it ought to be easy enough for mother to face it squarely and figure herself as having far too much to lose to allow it any further tenancy. The next time there is a little party on with dad and the girl, mother should say she would like to go along—then get ready in her snappiest clothes to go along—and be a thoroughly good sport if dad and daughter continue to have their little jokes together. Tease them good naturedly into letting her in on them. If they refuse, don't fuss, but laugh at their "closed corporation" attitude.

Staying at home and brooding never got a woman anything much but the privilege of keeping on at the wrinkle raising pastime. But to be up and doing for any kind of fate the rest of the family has in prospect soon entitles her to class A membership in the party.

Even though there may be a slight temporary estrangement, mother has it within her power, in the dozen kindly things that may be done for those within the home circle, to keep that breach from widening. But one of them is not in sitting back and railing at fate that things are as they are. Unhappiness need not remain in the heart if the spirit is willing to change it.

Facing It Honestly.

The trouble with many women is that when they feel the sting of neglect they think of everything but themselves as the possible reason. In nine cases out of ten the answer could be found in their own misguided judgment.

The estrangement in this particular instance may have started with mother's first refusal to accompany father and daughter on the Sunday walk; mother, perhaps, a little too unenergetic to shake herself out of her comfortable house slippers into a pair of street shoes; maybe a little too indifferent to consequences when she settled for the evening instead of trotting along with the more active pair to the movie down the street.

Mother has to be up and doing every minute these days with a progressive looking husband and a live young daughter. She has to safeguard herself against the modern young miss' assumption that mothers are old fashioned and behind the times.

Sometimes I think mother has a hard rôle. But, then, what woman who makes a success of any undertaking but is the subject of frequent and constant demands to keep moving with the procession or drop out? Certainly no woman in public life, professional or business, but must be on her job every minute. The reward of love in mother's case as measured against fame or financial success of the professional woman makes the former's efforts doubly worth while.

Brooding Won't Help.

The mother of today has to be up to date. She must be broad minded without discarding the moral standards which she inherited from her own mother. It is only in this way her influence will survive and her companionship be sought.

There may have been a time when woman had reason to fear the loss of her own personal charm at an age which an 18 year old daughter would normally contribute, but not in this day of excellently groomed and attractive flapper's mothers.

To enhance the attractiveness, jealousy must be guarded against, however, as daughter grows older and more charming to look at. In a doting father and "pal" daughter combination mother could train herself to see the girl's response to the one who returns her affections most lavishly, and then make up her mind to give some of that affection herself.

To the mature girl, the ideal companion mother is one full of sympathy, understanding, tenderness, love and forgiveness. Not one who takes herself off into lonely isolation, aloof, wearing the hurt and injured air of self-inflicted martyrdom.

DORIS BLAKE'S ANSWERS TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake care The Tribune Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Far from Right.

"Dear Miss Blake: A girl friend of mine goes out with a boy who loves her very much, but she does not love him. He thinks she loves him. She only goes out with him because he spends his money on her. Do you think this is right of her to do?

"BRIGHT EYES."

No, Bright Eyes, it is not the right thing to do, and it shows she is a selfish and inconsiderate person. She cares nothing for another's feelings, merely wishing to work others for all she can get out of them. She may get away with it for a while, dear, but eventually she will be repaid in her own coin.

Beautify it with "Diamond Dyes"

Just Dip to Tint or Boil to Dye Garments, Draperies, – Everything!

Perfect home dyeing and tinting is guaranteed with Diamond Dyes. Just dip in cold water to tint soft, delicate shades, or boil to dye rich, permanent colors. Each 15-cent package contains directions so simple any woman can dye or tint lingerie, silks, ribbons, skirts, waists, dresses, coats, stockings, sweaters, draperies, coverings, hangings, everything new.

Don't risk your material in poor dye that streaks, spots, fades, or runs. Buy "Diamond Dyes"—no other kind—and tell your druggist whether the material you wish to color is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton, or mixed goods.

The Causes of Fat and How to Overcome Them

Now excess fat can be overcome—each day thousands are being aided by Jack Sprat Bread to combat fat. The principal elements in all foods which cause overweight are starches, sugar and fats. In bread, our most common food, and white bread in particular the principal fat forming substance is starch, so leading authorities agree. Avoid starchy and other fat forming foods—eat no other bread, simply Jack Sprat—then watch your weight come down—note a new ease and bodily comfort. Jack Sprat Bread is the easy, natural aid to weight reduction. No strenuous exercises, no dangerous dieting are necessary.

Jack Sprat the Palatable, Efficient Food, Low in Starch—Rich in Nourishment

Jack Sprat Bread is low in starch. It is a certain aid to weight reduction. Then too it is delightfully palatable and rich in nourishment. Jack Sprat is made under a secret formula known to no other baker and from a special flour we blend ourselves—one flour ingredient from which most starch is removed costs 900% more than white flour. The process is slow and costly—thus Jack Sprat is low in starch—rich in nourishment—protein to build tissues and muscle. The mineral salts as nature provides them are also available to build bone.

Jack Sprat Bread is more than merely an aid to weight reduction. It is a nourishing, satisfying food. One that builds health and strength—aids elimination and digestion. So try Jack Sprat on our Guarantee of Satisfaction as told above.

Get the Happy Jack Sprat Habit Eat Three Loaves a Week

Eat Jack Sprat in place of fattening foods. Eat 3 loaves a week for 2 weeks—then note how delightful you will feel. For greatest aid read the directions and helpful suggestions in the circulars that come in each package. Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The best cough medicine you ever used. A family supply easily and quickly made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for coughs, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant—children like it.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for healing the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK : : : : By Clotilde

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

TATTING A BABY'S CAP.

THIS lovely baby's cap may be used all the year—varying the warmth of the silk caps worn underneath; and if the mother understands tatting, it will be fascinating work making it.

Two balls of white crochet cotton, size 100, will be required for making; and make all picots short.

1st row: R 2d, 6 p separated by 2 d, 2 d close r, break thread.

2d row: Join thread to picot; ch 6 d, p join to next p, repeat all around.

3d row: ch 8 d, p, join to next p, repeat all around.

4th row: ch 10 d, p, join to next p, repeat all around.

5th row: ch 3 d, 4 p separated by 2 d, 3d joining to next p, repeat all around and break thread.

6th row: r 3 d, p 3 d, join to first p of motif, 3 d, p, 3 d, p, 3 d closes r. Ch 2 d, 5 p separated by 2 d, 2 d. R 3 d p, 3 d join to 4th p of same ch of motif, 3 d p close 3 d r. Ch 2 d, 5 p separated by 2 d, 2 d, repeat from beginning all around, break thread.

7th row: R 4 d, join to first p of ch, 4 d close r, ⅛ in thread, repeat all around, joining rings at every other picot, and break thread each row.

8th row: R 4 d, join to center of ⅛ in thread, 4 d close r, ⅛ in. thread, repeat all around. Work three more rows, making threads between rings slightly longer each row until the thread measures ¼ inch.

12th row: R 3 d, p 3 d join to thread of previous row 3 d p 3 d close r. Ch 2 d, 5 p separated by 2 d, 2 d repeat all around. Break thread.

13th row: Work first three rows of center motif, next row 2 d, 4 p, separated by 2 d, 2 d, join to next p and repeat 4 times. Ch 3 d, p, 2 d, p 2 d join to 4th p of ch of main portion of cap, 2 d, p, 2 d join to p of motif. Ch 2 d, p, 2 d join to 2nd p of next ch, 2 d, p, 2 d, p, 2 d and join. Work 14 more motifs.

14th row: R 2 d, 3 p separated by 2 d, 2 d close r, *3 1-16 in. thread, r 2 d join to last p of last r, 2 d, p, 2 d, p, 2 d close r, repeat from *all around, joining every 6th ring to 3rd picot on ch of small motif, leave next ring free and join center p of following ring to 2nd p of next ch of motif.

15th row: R 4 d join to thread of previous row, 4 d close r, 3 1-16 in thread, repeat all around and work two more rows.

18th row: R 3 d, 3 p separated by 3 d, 3 d, close r, *⅛ in. thread joining to thread of previous row. R 3 d, join to last p of last r, 3 d, p, 3 d, 3 d close r, repeat from *all around.

19th row: R 4 d, p 4 d, p, 4 d close r. Ch 5 d, r 3 d, join to 2nd p of last r, 4 d, p, 4 d, close r. R 4 d, p, 4 d, p, 4 d close r. Turn work, ch 5 d. R 3 d, join to last p of previous ring, 4 d, p, 4 d close r. R 4 d, p, 4 d, p, 4 d close r, turn work. Ch 5 d, r 3 d, join to 2nd p of last r 4 d, p, 4 d, close r. R 4 d join to p of 2nd ring, 4 d, p, 4 d close r, turn work. Ch 5 d R 3 d, join to p of last ring made, 4 d, p, 4 d, close r. Repeat from beginning 33 times.

20th row: Same as last row joining 4th and 5th rings at free picots.

21st row: Same as 19th row joining first and eighth rings at picots of 2d and 3d rows and beginning with 4th pattern of 3d row join 4th and 5th rings to picots on last row of cap skipping one ring between each pattern, leaving last three patterns free break thread and work 3 more rows same as last three rows, joining to cap with small flower motifs as illustrated.

Fill in triangular space with small rings with ⅛ in thread between rings as illustrated.

Finish front of cap with ch 4 d, join to first free picot of last row 4d. R 4 d p, 4 d close r. Ch 4 d p, 3 d, 3 p separated by 3 d, 3 d. * R 4 d, join to p of 1st r 4 d close r. Ch 3 d, 3 p separated by 3 d, 3 d. R 4 d, join to 2 last rings 4 d, close r. Ch 3 d, 3 p separated by 3 d, 3 d. R 4 d join to 2 rings, 4 d close r. Ch 4 d, join to free p of next r, 4 d. R 3 d, join to last p of 2nd last r. Ch 3 d p, 3 d close r. Ch 4 d join to p of next ring 4 d. R 4 d, p, 4 d close r. Ch 3 d join to p of 2nd last r, 3 d join to next p of ch, 3 d, p, 3 d. Repeat from * across the front of cap.

Lower edge of cap. Ch 3 d, p 3 d. R 3 d, 3 p separated by 3 d, 3 d close r. Ch 3 d, p, 3 d. R 3 d, join to last p of last r, 3 d, p, 3 d close r, joining center picots to cap so that this row forms a straight edge.

Beauty

A Gleamy Mass of Hair

35c "Danderine" does Wonders for Any Girl's Hair

Girls! Try this! When combing and dressing your hair, just moisten your hair-brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! You can do your hair up immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy—a mass of gleamy hair, sparkling with life and possessing that incomparable softness, freshness and luxuriance.

While beautifying the hair, "Danderine" is also toning and stimulating each single hair to grow thick, long and strong. Hair stops falling out and dandruff disappears. Get a bottle of "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter and just see how healthy and youthful your hair appears after this delightful, refreshing dressing.

Ease!

The two-way elasticity of Kenlastic means everything to the comfort and fit of your corset. This perfect fabric adjusts itself instantly and naturally like a stronger, more elastic skin to all curves in all directions, and to every change in motion or posture—no bulging; no buckling; no lines of excessive pressure.

Kenlastic

—"the knitted elastic"

In America's finest corsets—your guarantee of unvarying quality and lasting resiliency. Kenlastic holds and moulds the figure without restraint. Kenlastic lets your body breathe!

"A little book about Happiness" giving facts and viewpoints that you can never forget—about personal beauty, sustained youth, mental and physical poise—is now being printed. Soon it will be available—at corset departments. Or write me where you buy corsets and I will mail you one of the first copies. Address: Pamela Hill, care James R. Kendrick Co., Inc., Germantown, Philadelphia.

—this time they wrote to Mrs. SANTA CLAUS

THEY'VE been sending their letters to her this year—the women of America. Their hearts are set on one gift—they call it the "Miracle of Monday."

It's the blessing and relief of a washer that washes 50 lbs. of dry clothes in sixty fleeting minutes (twice the capacity of ordinary washers)—tubful after tubful, as quickly as a woman can wring them out. And mark you, sparkling, hygienically clean—and in addition, it eliminates that most trying task, the handrubbing of cuffs, wristbands and collars.

And these are only some of the wonders of the Gyrafoam principle, that genius soul of the Maytag Washer. No other washer has it.

Make no mistake about the gift that's "wished for" this Christmas. Think of the Mondays that are to come. Your wife or your Mother needs the Maytag—more perhaps than you may think.

THE MAYTAG COMPANY, Newton, Iowa

9 Outstanding Maytag Features

1—Washes faster. The Gyrafoam Principle creates a more highly energized, turbulent and continuously effective water action. No idle water.

2—Washes cleaner. The Gyrafoam Principle mixes the soap evenly through the water, and forces the super-cleansing, soapier washing solution through the meshes of the clothes. No idle suds.

3—Largest hourly capacity in world—50lbs. ordinary family wash per hour.

4—Most compact washer made—takes floor space only 25 inches square.

5—Cast Aluminum tub—can't warp, rust, rot, swell, split nor corrode.

6—Easily adjusted to your height, and height of tubs.

7—Clothes can be put in or taken out while washer is running.

8—Tub cleans itself in 30 seconds.

9—Metal swinging wringer. Low. Swings into 7 positions. Adjusts itself automatically for handkerchiefs or blankets. Automatic drainboard. Instant tension-release. Allparts enclosed.

9 Reasons for World Leadership

For homes without electricity the Maytag Gyrafoam is available with Multi-Motor* attachment.

*The famous Maytag Gasoline Motor.

A Wonder Gift of WONDERGLASSES

6-POWER Achromatic Prism BINOCULARS SEE OBJECTS MILES AWAY

These are the genuine famous imported Foth Feld and Oigee German Army Officers' Achromatic Prism Binoculars. Fitted with the best German lenses in the world. Regular price $40.00. Owing to the great need of ready cash by the German manufacturers, we were fortunate in obtaining a limited quantity of them, brand new and perfect, to offer to our customers at a real bargain.

A new world will open up for the recipient with a pair of these Wonder Glasses. People great distances away appear so close to you that one will feel like stepping aside to let them pass by. The greatest pleasure-giving gift you can make.

A pair of these Wonder Glasses enables one to see things others can't. They delightfully broaden the field of vision. The joys of outdoors are not complete without a pair of these remarkable glasses. Indispensable for all outdoor sports, baseball games, automobiling, camping, tramping, hunting, races, viewing scenery, etc., etc.

The recipient will derive just as much pleasure with these Glasses in the Fall and Winter when nature is covered with a mantle of snow, as in the Summer. The magnificent view obtainable will make the world seem like a fairyland.

$23.75 $1 FIRST PAYMENT $4 MONTHLY Same Price Cash or Credit Sent on 10 DAYS' FREE TRIAL

Let us send you a pair on 10 DAYS' FREE TRIAL, and the recipient will tell you he wouldn't part with them for hundreds of dollars. A most wonderful gift to make. They will afford an endless source of entertainment and pleasure. And—don't forget the easy payments—only $1.00 a week; small sums you will never miss.

Note: These glasses weigh only 16 ounces. They are very high class in appearance, have centre focusing adjustment, are finished in black and come complete with genuine leather carrying case with straps.

To Give the Hair a Naturally Wavy Effect

Ever since the virtues of the Silmerine hair-curling method first became known in this country, druggists here have been having a really extraordinary demand for liquid Silmerine. Its effectiveness, its convenience and its entire harmlessness doubtless have been responsible for its increasing use among well groomed women.

One need only apply a little of the liquid with a clean tooth brush before doing up the hair and the tresses will have a beautiful wavy and glossy appearance which bears no marks of artificiality. There is no discoloration, no sticky, streaky or other unpleasant feature. Liquid Silmerine is fine for bobbed as well as long hair.

"Keep Your Powder Dry"

The early American soldiers couldn't fight without dry powder. The "powder" of business today is its records—files—which are worthless unless ready for instant work. Executives who control the records and files are highly paid—a profession open to women, young or old, with ambition and ability to think. Finding a Profession instead of a Job is an interesting book. 2215—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 36 inch material.

1987—Wooman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 40 inch material with 4½ yards of braid.

2075—Girl's dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2 yards of 40 inch material.

How to Use the Patterns

SATIN back crêpe in black or some becoming color would make up beautifully by pattern No. 1987, and there would not be much additional expense in the way of trimming. The design will be particularly becoming to any woman having a full figure—the long front panel emphasizing length instead of width. The back is cut in one piece, and in the front there are the two side front pieces and the panel. The full length, flaring, one piece sleeves are dressy and the opening on the upper side towards the back is different from what one usually sees. The collar is cut becomingly—fitting close about the neck in the back and outlining the panel in the front.

Fullness is let in at the sides of the skirt part at a low waistline, and the lower skirt edge is finished with a deep hem. A belt of the dress material starts and finishes at the front panel, and two small buckles or handsome buttons should be used.

The opening is at the left side of the front panel, and can be made perfectly invisible if small snaps are used, set on three-quarters of an inch apart and one-eighth of an inch in from the edge on the upper side.

Use the satin side of the crêpe for the collar, belt, and front panel, and trim as the picture shows with narrow silk braid, which comes in all widths and colors, as well as color combinations. This braid might also be put on to cover the seams where the fullness is let into the skirt on the sides.

If you use a lock stitch machine be sure to take a double thickness of the crêpe and try stitching on it to see that the length of stitch and the tension are right. Nothing will take away from the new appearance of material more quickly than much handling, such as ripping and stitching or basting several times.

Challis would make up prettily by this design for a dress to wear at home afternoons, and wash materials would be all right too—using short instead of long sleeves.

Pattern No. 2075 is an unusually smart looking design for a school or afternoon frock for a young girl. For school wear there could be nothing prettier than navy blue serge—that old standby that is always to be had. One of the pretty striped flannels or an all wool challis would also be suitable; while if one wants the dress for afternoon wear, blue or brown velveteen is attractive.

The front and back of the dress are each cut in one piece, and the plaited sections on the sides are cut separately and set in. The little front inset and facing are cut in one and rolled to form revers. Two belt sections, finished in points at both ends, cover the joining of the plaited section to the dress; and the sleeves may be cut long or short—the short ones being finished with prettily shaped turned back cuffs and the long one piece sleeves being gathered at the bottom and set into narrow wristbands.

I imagine pattern No. 2215 will be what many women and girls will fancy, for it is smart and not difficult to make. Allover lace flouncing for the skirt and a matching, allover lace for the waist will make up attractively for a dancing frock or for dinner wear. Satin, taffeta, or crêpe will make up beautifully, depending mostly on what sort of a dress is needed.

The upper part is a long waisted bodice, with the short sleeves cut in one with the dress. There are shoulder seams, and a shallow, round yoke is attached to the neck of the waist. Yokes of something contrasting are seen on many of the new dresses and make an attractive neck finish. There are perforations on the lower part of each seam, and the waist is to be gathered between these perforations and the gathers pulled up to fit properly.

This makes the lower edge of the waist rounding, and to this edge the gathered lower section is sewed.

It will be necessary to leave an opening on the left shoulder, and this should be finished so that the faced hem is on the front and the extension hem on the back. In sewing on the tiny snaps, be sure to set them on the faced hem a good eighth of an inch below the turned under edge. Then they will not show from the outside.

Have You Tried This New Way to STOP COLDS Right at the Start?

ARZEN
FOR COLDS
For all Inflamed Conditions of the NOSE, THROAT and EAR

ARZEN

No medicine to take internally. Nothing to upset the stomach Nothing to affect the heart action. No harmful drugs.

JUST snuff a few drops of this pleasing oil well back into nose and throat. (Use handy glass dropper which comes with each package). Arzen goes right to the spot where the cold germs are causing the inflammation that usually spreads down the throat and frequently into the lungs. Arzen stops the trouble right where it starts. It quickly destroys the cold germs. Your head clears. You breathe freely. Your cold ends.

Perfectly safe even for children.

One Size—Everywhere—50 Cents

At All Good Druggists

Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.

Arzen also relieves Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Hay Fever—in fact, all irritated conditions of nose and throat

If Every Woman Knew What Many Women Know

few would suffer the ills so many women now endure. Constipation is the cause of most of the ills that annoy and distract the woman of today. And it's all so unnecessary, because Beecham's Pills relieve constipation, giving women the sought for relief. They are gentle and efficient, tasteless, non-habit-forming, purely vegetable, small, and the easiest of all to take.

Good for old and young alike, men, women and children. If you suffer from constipation, sour stomach or biliousness, get relief today by taking Beecham's Pills.

The HOOVER
you darling!

For Christmas—the ideal gift!

An advertisement especially for men

EVERY man who shares his home with a wife or mother has an opportunity, this Christmas, to make happy the days of her life for many, many years to come.

Not by the gift of some trinket, which will linger but a short time in her memory, but by meeting one of her greatest needs—the need for a new and easy way to keep clean the home you both love.

You may not be fully mindful of this need. But she is! Always, as she faces her cleaning tasks, she is wondering how much longer she will have to do without a Hoover.

A Hoover! What could be a more ideal gift! Think of the happiness which will be your portion, this Christmas, as you see her eyes light up with joy at your thoughtfulness.

Think of the days to come when, as you leave her in the morning, you know that she is not facing a day of drudgery—more tiring, even, than you would care to anticipate.

And the evenings, when she greets you. How charming she looks! For she has had time to rest, and to dress for dinner—things she has always looked forward to.

Think of these things, men, and you'll be counting the days till Christmas like the youngster you were in the years gone by. It's a great chance!

And your enthusiasm will be none the less when you realize how easily you can secure this most prized of Christmas gifts.

For the cost of a Hoover is less than that of many things you might consider, and you need pay but $6.25 down, if you so desire, for the newest model, complete with attachments.

The balance can be distributed over any number of months up to ten, and the payments will be no burden on even the most modest income.

Come, now, you husbands and sons. Make this a real Christmas! Let the Authorized Hoover Dealer in your neighborhood show you the latest model Hoover that has completely revolutionized the household cleaning in over 1,500,000 homes.

And let him take your order now, that there may be no chance that she will be disappointed, this Christmas.

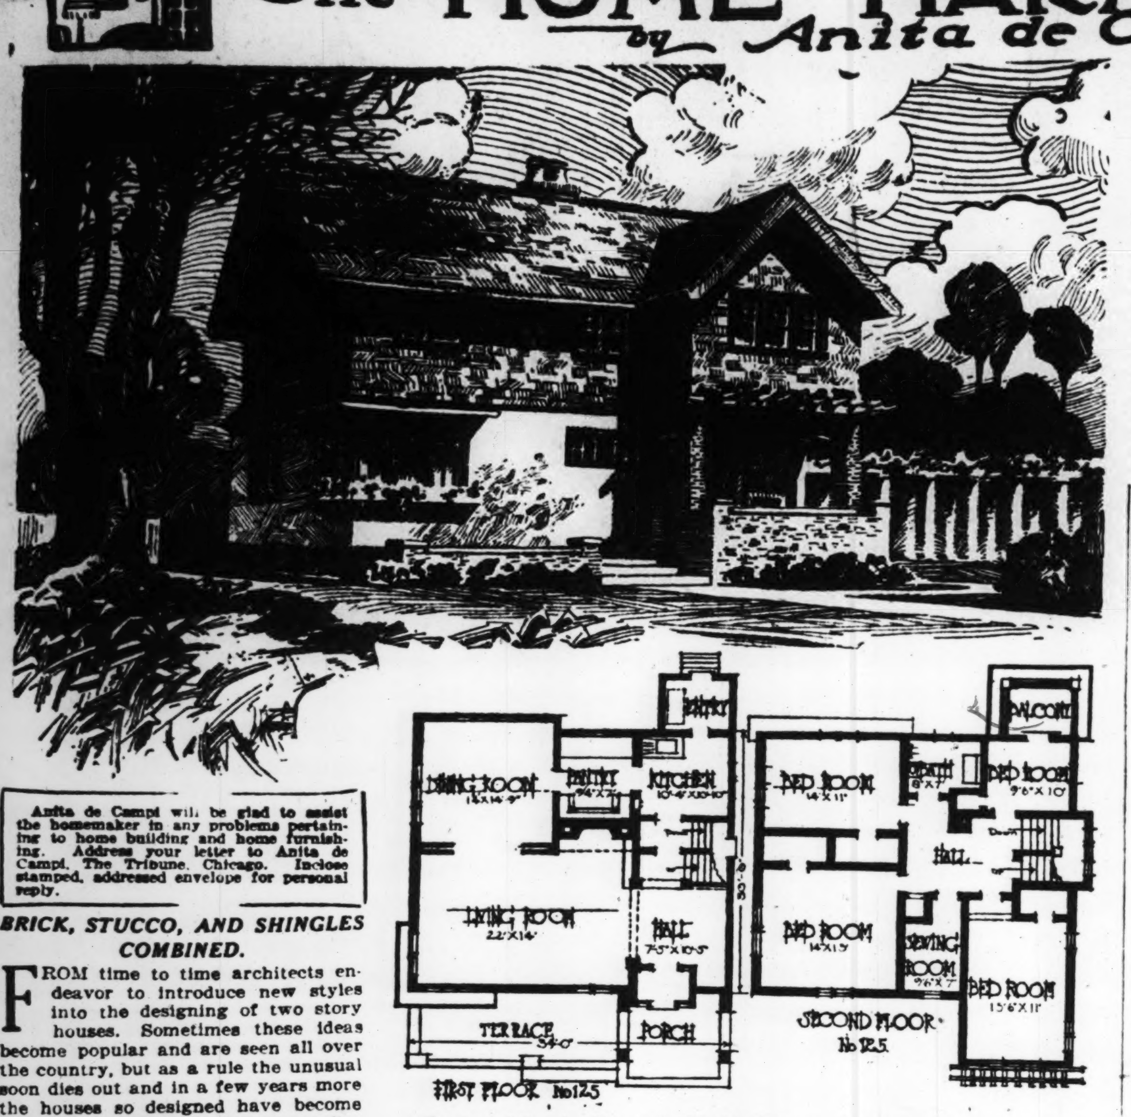
The HOME HARMONIOUS

by Anita de Campi



Designed by Architect J. W. Lindstrom of Minneapolis, Minn.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

BRICK, STUCCO, AND SHINGLES COMBINED.

FROM time to time architects endeavor to introduce new styles into the designing of two story houses. Sometimes these ideas become popular and are seen all over the country, but as a rule the unusual soon dies out and in a few years more the houses so designed have become conspicuous oddities in the community, and their values so lessened that it is hard to rent or dispose of them even at a sacrifice.

For this reason it behooves every one contemplating the buying or erection of a home to study the exterior design carefully, not only to see that it conforms in general with modern architectural treatment but also that it is of such design that the owner will not tire of it.

The house shown today is an excellent example of a well built, conservative type of home which was good ten years ago, is modern in every way today, and will be just as popular ten years hence. It has been designed by Architect J. W. Lindstrom of Minneapolis. It is equally well suited for a city lot, a suburban garden, or a country estate. The lines are massive without being crude, while the entire building has been so worked out that erection costs have been held down to a minimum.

The exterior permits of a wide selection of materials. As illustrated here, the lower half of the house is of rough textured stucco, with the porch of red face brick, while the upper part is of stained wood shingles and composition shingles on the roof above. However, an equally pleasing combination may be worked out by using stucco on concrete blocks for the lower part and face brick above, or face brick may be used throughout.

Three steps lead up to a broad paved terrace which extends across the greater part of the front of the house, and from this there are two more steps to the covered porch protecting the entrance. A tiled vestibule opens off the porch and into a fair sized reception and stair hall. Immediately in front is a broad stairway to the floors above, while to the left and connected by a cased opening is the living room. The architect has given ample dimensions to this room; in fact, it might be mentioned here that all the rooms in the entire house are large, light, and airy.

Attention is called to the pleasing manner in which the fireplace is put back into a recess in the manner of the inglenook of early colonial days. The fireplace is specified to be of rugged red brick, with a generous hearth of the same material, and so constructed that an honest to goodness old-fashioned fire of coal or wood may be built in it.

French doors separate the living room from the dining room, which is practically square, and, being a corner room, is well lighted on two sides. The serving pantry is located between the dining room and the kitchen, and is well provided with shelves and cupboards. However, by a slight rearrangement, the home builder, if he desires, can have this room built as a breakfast alcove.

The kitchen is modern in every respect. Two large windows in connection with the three doors supply plenty of light and facilitate ventilation. The ice box is located in the entry just off the kitchen. The stairway to the basement is under the main stairway and is convenient to both kitchen and front part of the house. An outside entrance to the basement will be found on the stair landing at the grade level.

On the second floor are three large bedrooms for the family and guests, a smaller room for the maid, a spacious tiled bathroom, and a sewing room. Every bedroom is provided with a large clothes closet, the maid's room also having a closet. A linen closet is located in the hall, convenient of access to the bathroom. Every sleeping room has windows on two sides, so that a cross current of air and plenty of light are assured. In addition, the maid's room has a balcony over the kitchen entry, thus giving her the pleasure and privacy of a porch in summer.

Those desiring a separate bathroom for the family may easily convert the sewing room into a room for that purpose and connect the bathroom in the rear directly with the maid's room by cutting a doorway between.

The stairway continues to the third floor or attic which is specified to be floored and may be finished off into bedrooms or a den for the boys, if desired.

Since the only means of egress from the second and third floor is by means of the stairway, these stairs should be protected by materials which will insure that this is a safe exit in the event of fire. One of the most economical methods of achieving this is the use of metal lath and plaster on both sides of the wood studded partitions inclosing the stairway, and on the underside of the stairs themselves. This is said to insure protection for at least one hour. This kind of lath also prevents unsightly plaster cracks which are most likely to form under the stairs, because of the hard usage to which they are put. Vibration tends to crack plaster off ordinary lath.

The entire basement may be excavated. This permits ample space for the heating plant, fuel storage, and laundry room, and still leaves sufficient room for a billiard table. The floor is of cement, which is verminproof and also insures a dry basement at all times.

In a house of this size either a steam, hot water or vapor system should be used for heating purposes, in any of which crude oil may be substituted as a fuel. There are so many good makes of oil burners on the market today that their convenience and economy are well worth consideration.

CORNS Lift Right Off With Fingers

No pain at all! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers.

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the foot calluses, without soreness or irritation.

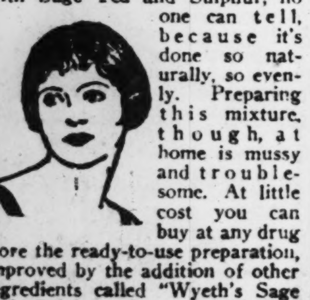
EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR



When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

TO BOYS AND GIRLS.

I'M appealing to you this week, boys and girls, because I know you're thinking about Christmas and I have a fine plan for you. I know you're wondering what you are going to get for Christmas and I know you'll get just lots of lovely gifts. That means you'll have toys that you'll just put in the corner when all the wonderful new things come. Wouldn't it be splendid if we got all these things together and gave them to poor children who won't have any Christmas unless we help?

Here is a letter that came to me from an 8 year old boy:

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: I wonder if you could help us. There are five of us, boys and girls, in our family. Papa is sick and we have a new baby and mamma says she's afraid Santa Claus won't stop this year.

"I don't mind so much because I'm 8 years old, but I know my little brothers and sisters won't feel happy when Christmas comes, so I'm asking can't you get something for them? Dolls for the girls and a sled or train for the boys. Mamma will be better then and we would be so pleased if the children were not disappointed."

And that isn't all—there are requests from widows who won't be able to afford to buy toys—and from mothers with invalid children—and from children just home from the hospital. We must help to make Christmas a happy day for them all.

Now, just think what you have, and I know we can make Christmas bright and happy for all these boys and girls. You have lots of toys you don't play with any more. You have cars, trains, games, if you're a boy; dolls and extra doll clothes if you're a girl. If all of you just gave the things you never use any more we could have a wonderful Christmas for all these poor children. Then when Christmas comes and you get lots of new toys you can all remember that somewhere in the city other little boys and girls are happy because of your generosity.

And please remember, too, if you have outgrown clothing or shoes with wear in them that they will help a lot. Many a boy and girl in Chicago hasn't a coat, any many a child is going to school wearing shoes that are almost soleless. Think what a wonderful time they'll have if they get both toys and clothes that will make them comfortable and keep them well all winter!

Think it over now—boys and girls—and pelase let me know right away what you have to give. I'll tell you how you can make some boys or girls happier than they've ever been in their lives.

Begging for Tricycle.

"There are four children to provide with playthings, and there is one gift that seems impossible. My little girl, looks forward to a gift of a tricycle, and will be so disappointed on Christmas morning, for we simply cannot buy one for her. I wonder if some reader has a tricycle no longer in use to pass on to us. MRS. W. H. S."

Their Hearts' Desires.

"I hope there will be some one to help me get together a few toys for the children for Christmas, and I have no way of buying the things their hearts desire. Rita is begging for a doll bed and Buddy would be too happy for words with a tool chest or a drum. I would love to have a baby swing for the youngest, but I am afraid I am asking too much. MRS. W."

Crippled Child's Appeal.

"What I want most in the world is a pair of cork legs. The ones I have are too short for me to wear any more, and I cannot go to school. It costs so much money to buy a pair, just the rich people are able to afford them. My feet were cut off when I was 2 years old. OLA."

This letter is one of the many letters written to Chester Gump, who has offered to bring back presents from Australia. It came to us by mistake, perhaps by fate's decree, so different from most little girls' wishes for Christmas.

MEN'S FASHIONS

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

BY A. T. GALLICO.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—This is just a word to the wise mothers, sisters, cousins, aunts, wives, and sweethearts who are going to do their Christmas shopping early, and are up a tree when it comes to picking out gifts for their men folks. There's nothing new in the world, according to the scientists. And this applies to Christmas presents as much as to anything else. But at least one can vary the sameness of Yuletide gifts, and make the donation different from last year or the year before.

There are such a number of odds and ends of clothing that a man can always use, and that make attractive Christmas gifts, that one can make the rounds of them from year to year and still find something that he hasn't had from you. For unless your particular man to whom you must give some recognition of Christmas is like one of our young friends, who feels it a personal insult if anyone gives him something he can wear, the clothing presents are always successful.

Heading the list is the proverbial Christmas necktie. No matter how many ties are given away every Yuletide, they will always be considered a satisfactory present. The reason so many Christmas ties end up in the wardrobe of the ash man and the janitor is that the donors select them with such indiscriminate eyes.

They say to themselves, "I will get him some ties, because I don't know what else to get." Then they go out and wrest from the hands of the nearest haberdasher any old ties they first set eyes on.

If they would try to think of the colors of the suits that the recipients of the ties are wearing this season, and choose good looking ties with color schemes in mind, they would not only be giving a gift that meant something, but would do a great service as well. For every man always needs a new tie to fit into some color scheme, but doesn't always feel like going out and buying one for himself.

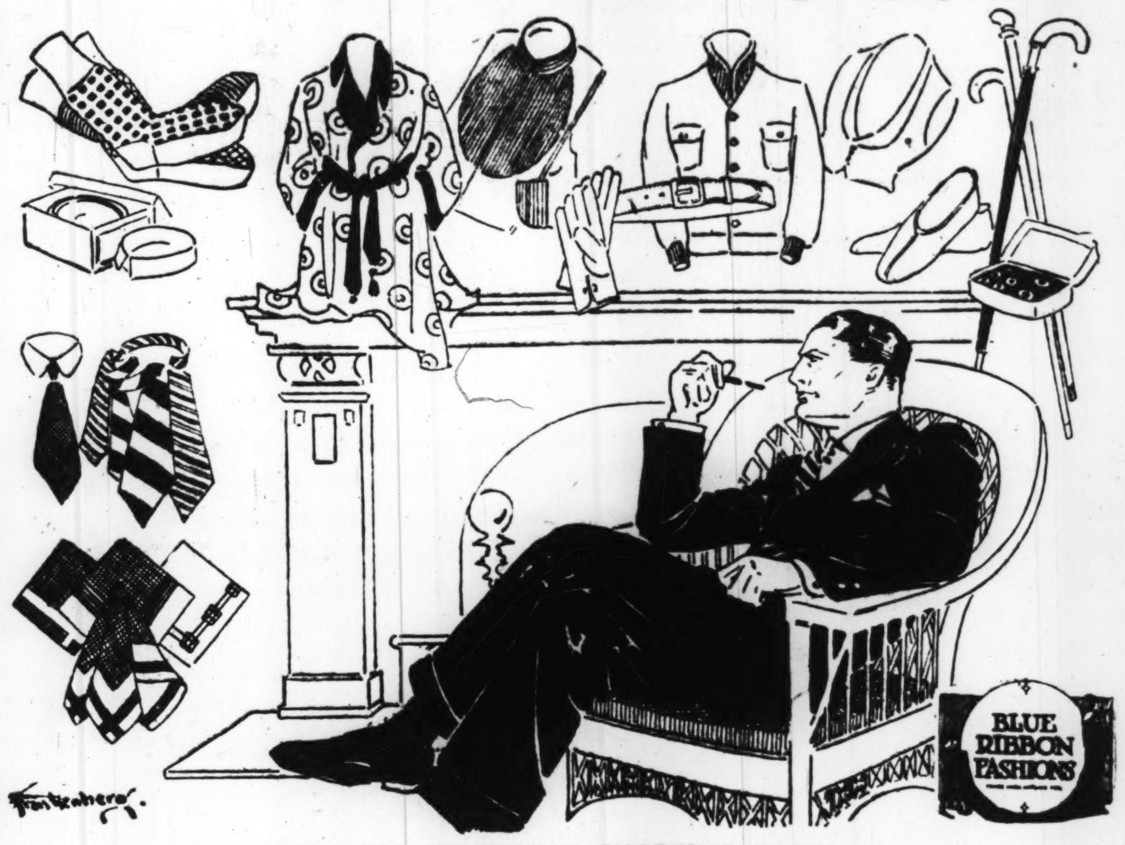
If you don't know what color ties the man is apt to want, refrain from investing in neckwear, and get him something that doesn't need so much to be in keeping with other parts of the wardrobe.

For instance, a good looking dressing gown is always an acceptable present, if you want to do well by your man. A dressing gown is also something that the average man hesitates to get for himself. If you know that his tastes do not lie towards the fancy and elaborate, don't consider the brocaded or velvet or satin gowns, but get him something in a striped flannel, or a handsome terry cloth, or a blanket robe. If the man is young and of gay spirit, he will possibly welcome something on the order of a red and black striped flannel robe. There are any number of attractive striped robes in both flannel and terry cloth.

If you are feeling especially generous, you can get a pair of slippers to go with the robe. In some cases it is possible to get slippers to match. If not, something in a harmonizing way is all right.

A handsome pair of gloves makes a fine Christmas gift—mocha or suede for dress wear, or cape or pigskin buck or chamois for informal occasions. If you want his hands to be warm during the winter treat him to some fur lined gloves.

Sometimes a belt makes a good gift. Perhaps last summer you heard him express a wish for a white belt to wear with his white flannels. Think ahead to next summer, and provide him with this desired article of apparel.



DOING HIS CHRISTMAS SHOPPING EARLY.

Handkerchiefs are like neckties. They can always be used, and one can never have too many of them. But, like ties, they must be selected with some eye to the colors with which they are to be worn. Unless one is getting only white handkerchiefs. It's a good idea to get a colored handkerchief along with a necktie, so that they are in harmony. You can go still farther, if you wish, and get a muffler that will go with both of these. Then it's up to the man to see that all three are made into a pleasing color scheme with suit and shirt.

If you know what size can be worn, socks are a possible gift. They need not be a prosaic offering, because of the bright and cheery colorings that the woolen socks are showing. All sorts of checks, diamonds, stripes, and mixtures are to be found in giddy tints.

If your taste in presents runs towards jewelry, there is always the possibility of a stud and cuff link set for his dinner clothes. Or if he is getting a full dress suit for the first time, he will be wanting a set for this. For the dinner suit a set of black mother of pearl, or black enamel makes a pleasing change from the white that is demanded for full dress. Of course, if you have just made a fortune in an oil well or a gold mine, you can show your Christmas spirit by getting him one of those single pearl studs—so simple, yet so expensive. This single pearl may be worn with either full dress or dinner coat, with the single stud dress shirt.

Barrymore Makes It Worth Seeing

"I AM THE MAN."

Produced by Chadwick Pictures. Directed by Ivan Abramson. Presented at outlying theaters.

THE CAST.

James McQuade	Lionel Barrymore
Corinne Stratton	Flora le Breton
Julia Calvert	Seena Owen
Daniel Harrington	Gaston Glass

GOOD MORNING!

It may be taken for granted that pretty nearly everybody will go to see this picture for the reason that Lionel Barrymore is in it. Lionel Barrymore is an always good reason for stepping out to view any film that may boast him as the star. The film may have its weak points, but he won't be one of them.

LIONEL BARRYMORE.
[Moffett Photo.]

He makes his appearance as a spoiled, bossy, pig headed, and worse politician, accustomed to having his way in the town. Not only does he dominate affairs. He is also accustomed to tender consideration from the fair sex. Not that this last means so much in life—but just the same he's used to it.

Until comes the exception that proves the rule. Julia Calvert, much in love with another man, looks at the spot where he stands and can't seem to see anything there. Julia Calvert, becomes then, an obsession with this strong man.

Merely wanting her and telling her he does, he soon finds out, will avail him nothing. He casts about in his fertile mind for the way to win the fair lady—knowing that there always IS a way of getting anything one sets out to get, if the setter-out starts in the right direction.

It's Been Done Before.

The story writer—Ivan Abramson—here languidly abandons all attempt at originality, and sinks back upon the cushions of the soft old coup of "framing" father. Mr. James McQuade "frames" Miss Julia's father.

NOW will she marry him!

What will become of father if she doesn't?

It seems that father will die. The question then before the house is shall father die a regular death or shall Julia submit to a living one?

As do all good daughters in the movies, Julia relinquishes hope of and hold on happiness, and goes to the arms of James McQuade—who leads her a life, I'll tell the world!

As if one McQuade weren't enough, Jim's brother Bob hails from parts unknown. He's another hard boiled outrage—four sides to him and two faced on all of them.

And now affairs become complicated. Little Miss Cor-

CHAPLIN MAY TAKE HIS BRIDE TO PARIS

By Grace Kingsley.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Charlie Chaplin and his bride are going to spend their honeymoon in New York, with a possible trip to Europe following, according to Charlie's announcement. They expect to leave here as soon as Charlie's present comedy is finished. Of course, one always prints things about Charlie with one's fingers crossed, because he does just revel in changing his mind. But Lita Grey Chaplin longs to see Paris, and it is quite likely she will get her way. From present indications Charlie's picture, at present called "The Gold Rush," will be finished some time in January.

LITA GREY CHAPLIN, the famous comedian's youthful bride.
[Spurr Photo.]

Charlie and his bride are keeping as close at home as two turtle doves. Lita loves the big house which Charlie lately built, and says she wouldn't change one thing about it.

That is, since Pola's picture was removed!

You see, Charlie ordered Pola's portrait taken from the wall, but by some oversight it wasn't. And when Lita saw it still hanging there—well—you know what these Spanish beauties are. However, Lita is deeply in love with her clever husband, so all was again soon sweetness and light.

There was talk of a big public reception to Charlie and his bride, but the comedian is absorbed in his work and his home, and doesn't seem much excited over the idea.

Lita Grey will probably not work any more after the present picture.

Triumph for the Gishes.

Lillian and Dorothy Gish will probably receive the greatest ovation of their lives when they appear at Grauman's Egyptian theater next Saturday night, when "Romola" opens. Positively everybody plans to be there.

Mary Pickford will probably be in the Gish party, as Lillian and Mary have been close friends ever since the old Griffith-Biograph days. In fact, it was Mary who introduced the Gish sisters to Mr. Griffith down at the Biograph studio.

The sisters called to see Mary one day, and Mr. Griffith in that eccentric way of his, just to kid Mary, went about singing "She'll Never Bring Them In!" "She'll Never Bring Them In!"

Of course, Mary did.

Dorothy told me once that they didn't catch Mr. Griffith's name, and they went about calling him to each other "Mr. Biograph."

Belle Bennett, who used to play in Thomas H. Ince pictures, and who just returned to pictures after several seasons on the stage, was married on Thanksgiving day to Fred Windermere at the home of Blanche Upright, playwright.

Blanche Upright's house is one of the show places of Hollywood, and it was gorgeously adorned for the occasion. Even if Miss Bennett has been thrice married, and even if her two sons—her own and step—were present at the wed-

Whether to Love or Loathe Opera

By Edward Moore.

EVIDENTLY believing that both sides of a question should be presented, a recent issue of Musical America does its bit for and against opera. The credit side is a quotation from one of its own editorials.

"Opera," it says, "stilted and artificial as it may be, still cultivates what the drama disdains or abjures. The few attempts that have been made to invest with music subjects such as chiefly concern our Broadway dramatists have not succeeded in convincing composers, librettists, critics, or audiences that the time has arrived when music can be used to delineate a scene in a department store or a police court. 'Louise' promised more than has been fulfilled. Doubtless there are enthusiasts who would applaud bolder experiments along this line, but the tendency unquestionably still is to seek operatic subjects in the remote, the exotic, the idyllic, the heroic, the fantastic, or the classic, rather than in what mercilessly mirrors the quotidian city life of our harried millions.

VITTORIO TREVISAN, in "The Barber of Seville"
[Underwood & Underwood Photo.]

"So, too, the element of spectacle, the medieval processions, the efforts to reproduce the mysteries of ancient rites, the search after effects in costumic and scenic splendor—tinsel and canvas though they may be—are keeping alive a very desirable phasis of theatrical art largely departed from the spoken stage. To some extent motion pictures are filling the want, but here the highly important element of color is lacking—and in its opportunities for color alone the operatic institution is decidedly worth while."

As a corrective to this possibly too favorable view it clips this from the Standard, which it says is the paper of the Ku Klux Klan:

"It is unthinkable and impossible to imagine that the real Americans of the type who made this country, such as Washington, Franklin, Jefferson, or Monroe, or the devout and God fearing Pilgrims who preceded them, should voluntarily sit and watch corpulent Italian, Spanish, French, or German aliens and a few Americans trained in Europe and alienized, enacting upon the stage scenes of Latin passion, seductions, betrayals, murders, assassinations, insanity, jealousy, disease, and death. The horrible nature of operatic librettos is intensified by poignant, passionate music, acting, and singing. The American mind, even in its worst phases, cannot produce a genuine grand opera. It is distinctly a foreign, alien expression, with a far reaching influence for evil. Today every one knows the mental nature of cause and effect, and one cannot witness horrible scenes or be mentally a participant in corrupt and degraded situations without receiving a poisonous taint."

MISS CHATTERTON IN SONG AND DANCE

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Ruth Chatterton can dance a little and sing a little more. But why, being an acceptably good comedienne, she should want to do either professionally it is not easy to understand. And less easy to understand after seeing the musicalized version of "Come Out of the Kitchen," which is supplying her with the opportunity. Her competition is too keen.

RUTH CHATTERTON venturing this time into musical comedy.
[Nickolas Muray photo.]

"The Magnolia Lady," they call this entertainment, and as musical plays go it holds up very well. There is something of the original story left, but not much. You may recall it as the experience of four aristocratic young southerners, who hired out as servants to the lessee of their ancestral estate rather than see the lease broken. They needed the money for father's operation. A. E. Thomas dramatized it from a story by Alice Duer Miller.

Miss Chatterton is Lily-Lou, the heronine who leads the band, and Richard Gallagher is her roguish younger brother, who supplies the fun. It is Richard (known out Chicago way as Skeets) who waits on table and explains after a stalk of asparagus has inadvertently dropped down the back of the hostess, that he feels sure he could recover it, although the lie is bad, if he had not forgotten his niblick.

Being assigned to one of the other guests, he puts her completely at her ease by the unconventionality of his approach.

"You will, of course, excuse my round shoe laces," he ventures.

Henry Miller has provided Miss Chatterton with a handsome production and a good cast. Ralph Forbes, a personable young Englishman, who came over with the war play, "Havoc," plays opposite her. The comedienne is, of course, excellent in the few dramatic passages.

Emma Dunn Doing Her Best.

Tom Barry's "Dawn," in which Emma Dunn has been playing a flustered but defiant mother in the west, has reached Broadway. It is not the type of melodrama this town likes, but it offered the neighbors gathered for the first performance one good kick at least.

The story is again of the rebellious younger generation. This time it is in New England, and our Puritan ancestors come in for an awful drubbing.

Because she has been spied upon in the apple orchard by her suspicious father, one girl kills herself rather than again face the family circle. And Judith, the daughter of the heroine mother, having succumbed to a young man's cocktails and moon talk, is of a mind to do likewise.

Being halted by her mother, Judith hears herself called wanton by her father and ordered to marry the young man responsible. She will, she swears, never do that. She hates him. If she marries at all it will be the young man she loves. And when father insists no decent man would take to wife a woman of her sort, knowing her to be bad at heart, mother interferes with a statement that is shattering:

Mr. Shaw's Good Play About Jeanne

By Frederick Donaghey.

SAID the woman back of me to the woman alongside her at Monday's performance: "Of course, Chicago is unfortunate in not seeing the play as it was done in New-York, where the Theater Guild knows just how to act Shaw. From all I've been told, 'Saint Joan' was something wonderful there. . . . Still, having read the play, you and I know how the actors ought to play it: eh? As I said to your aunt only the other night, about something else, we may always be of real help to the actors if we go to the theater in the right frame of mind." . . . She said more: she out-talked Shaw, quantitatively; and most of what she said was just as good as what I quote.

MISS MARY FOWLER
She's the "emotional heavy" in "Cheaper to Marry."

But what I quote has to do with how "Saint Joan" is acted in the Blackstone, which is pretty well. The actors who were best in the Theater Guild's performances are in the cast here: Mr Leigh and Mr. Travers; and they are so good, as the Dauphin and as the know-it-all chaplain, that I am unable to understand what they were doing in a Theater Guild cast. . . . Miss Arthur as Joan gives more to the rôle than would any other available actress who comes to mind. She knows what is in the part and what Shaw wishes to have taken from it; and she achieves an impersonation. I have seen her twice within the week, and have twice taken from her Joan something more nearly like satisfaction than I had obtained from her in any of her earlier rôles.

A Matter of Pace.

Most of the other players are adequate or better than adequate. All, including Miss Arthur, suffer from a deficiency of tempo in the general performance: there are times when it seems that the director seeks to make a ritual of what is, in fact, one of Shaw's best plays. There is too much of an air of "reverence" when that is the last thing required to make "Saint Joan" effective in the theater. . . . It is not a question of "speeding up," and is one of pace based on the sense of the scenes and the urge and life of the lines. Cues are not taken up with that facility which carries a sense of give-and-take in dialogue. (An example of how this thing may be done is to-hand in Miss Cowl's revival of "Romeo and Juliet.") . . .

The play, as acted in the Blackstone, runs three hours and twenty minutes, with entr'actes that are reasonable in their brevity. If the actors were directed into a more alert attack and if the attitude of stunt were taken from some of the passages in the performing, three or four actual minutes might be gained,—and the seeming gain would be of an hour or more. The trick of good directing is to send an audience into the street at the final curtain with the illusion that it has been in the theater through not more than half the time spent in observation. Most of us appreciate that seven hours on a fast train to Cleveland seem shorter than three hours on a slow train to Milwaukee. . . . Shaw

THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

EDITED BY Professor J. ARTHUR THOMSON

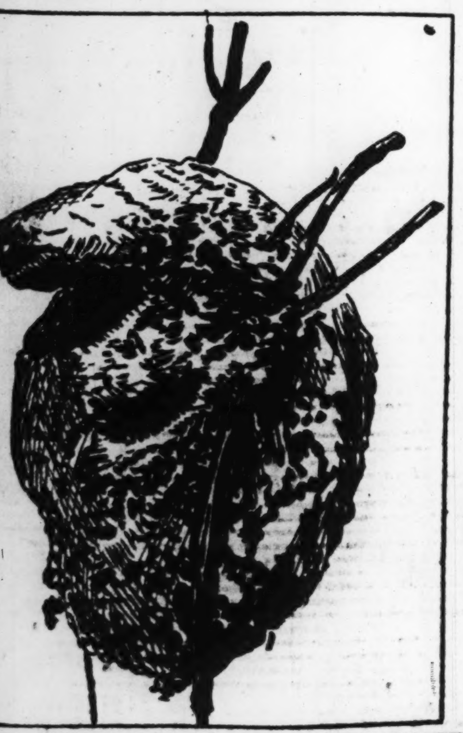
A PLAIN STORY SIMPLY TOLD - - - - - - LI.—BIRDS: PLUMAGE, COURTSHIP, AND MATING

IT does not come within the scope of this work to go into the question of the general classification of birds; neither can we consider in detail the characteristics of bird structure or of feathers and plumage. A bibliography is given at the end of this chapter which will be useful for readers who wish to have more information on these interesting subjects. A volume might be written on any one of them. We cannot pass over altogether, however, the nature of feathers and plumage.

The acquisition of feathers must have been one of the great steps in the progress of birds toward their present position as the supreme flying animals par excellence. It is, indeed, but to forge another link in that evolutionary history to find that feathers are modified scales and, therefore, closely akin to the typical covering of reptiles. Let us notice, too, that the unfeathered parts of a bird bear ordinary scales, the one form, as it were, simply replacing the other where it is more suitable. The scales on the toes are often suggestively reptilian in appearance, and when there are also feathers about the toes they grow not on the scales but from between the scales—from between the other scales, we may indeed say to emphasize the point.

The feathers of many birds are richly colored, and even those of sober hue may be beautifully marked. In some cases the colors may be due to actual pigment; but in others, especially blues and greens, the minute physical structure of the feathers is responsible, and wonderful effects of iridescence are produced.

Brilliance of plumage is often associated with the mating season, but this is far from being a general rule. In some instances the male has a special breeding plumage, and sometimes both sexes have this, examples of each kind being found among the plovers. In other cases the male has brilliant plumage for most of the year, like the mallard, while his mate is always dull. In many species, on the other hand, the sexes are alike and have a similar appearance all the year round; this permanent plumage may be dull colored, as in the song thrush or curlew—wonderfully beautiful birds, nevertheless—or brilliant, as in the kingfisher. Most birds that have a permanent bright plumage, however, are dull in their first year, as is the case with the afterward splendidly iridescent starling, but in some cases, such as the kingfishers and the parrots, the gorgeous plumes have appeared before the birds leave the nest. One other kind of change must also be mentioned—namely: the seasonal changes of the ptarmigan, which is white during the season of snow and of duller appearance when its native hills are brown once more.



THE WONDERFUL NEST OF REMEZIA, THE PENDULINE TITMOUSE.—Note the funnel-shaped opening leading to the chamber below is a pocket which is supposed by some to be a roosting place for the male bird. The nest is made of cotton and seed down, and to the touch resembles a fine felt carpet.

Courtship and Mating.

SOME of the most interesting habits of birds are those associated with the mating season. In many cases there are curious ceremonies of courtship, often with wonderful "display" of brilliant plumage or with great exuberance of song, and sometimes there are fierce fights between rival males. The peacock spreads and erects his magnificent train, the Argus pheasant displays long plumes on his wings as well as on his tail, and the different birds of paradise glow with gorgeousness in their almost every feather. Many a relatively "dowdy" bird—as judged by human eyes—may also be seen posturing in much the same way as his more ornamental brethren, and we must be chary of denying to any bird strange beauty in the sight of his love!

In the ordinary black grouse we may find a habit of display as well marked as that of any inhabitant of tropical jungles; it gives, indeed, an example not only of individual display but also of a collective "tournament" in which rival black cocks strive to impress the gray hens which they wish to win as mates. In Scotland, say, the fortunate may perhaps witness a gathering of black cocks at break of day early in the breeding season. The birds assemble in some open spot and indulge in the wild whirring calls that form their song of love and war, and the racket may be heard two miles off.

Then the tournament begins. It may be mere skirmishing, a display of fencing or "sparring," or, as sometimes happens, these harmless encounters may develop into fierce fights and sometimes a duel to the death.

"At intervals during each separate fight black cocks emit a curious call; it is almost a hoarse screech, resembling the noise too painfully familiar to us—namely: that of cats on housetops supplemented by the said animals being afflicted with sore throats. The sound is both wild and unmusical in the extreme.

"We will suppose that the observer has come early on the scene, before the gray hens have made their appearance. The approach of one of the latter is the signal for an immediate cessation of hostilities on all sides, and intense excitement prevails amongst the assembled black cocks. Her approach has been observed by a single bird, who has been sharper than the rest in detecting the lady afar off . . . he will suddenly draw himself up to a rigid position of attention, till he is sure she is really coming. Having settled this in his mind to his own satisfaction, he throws himself into the air and flutters up a few feet, uttering the while hoarse notes with all the power and effect he can muster.

"This is, of course, done to impress the lady in his favor, and to arouse in her breast a proper sense of admiration, which he considers his due. His example is immediately followed by all the others, who, on alighting, dance about in the most absurd manner, each one trying to see who can screech the loudest and be the most ridiculous in his antics.

"When a hen has alighted on the playing ground the male that is nearest to her pairs with her and fights off any other that disputes his possession. She then meanwhile walks sedately round her lord and master, picking about the grass coquettishly, and pretending to be feeding. Each hen on arrival causes the same general excitement and is appropriated by one or other of the successful cocks till the harems are filled up, one cock having at times as many as six or seven hens. As the season advances, after the first few mornings of the hens' coming to the ground they resort to the same spot each day and stay with the same cock that has previously trodden them, and are not interfered with afterward by other cocks, which acknowledge the superior claims of the male to which they rightfully belong."[1]

In some cases there are special aids to display, such as the pouch in the neck of the great bustard, which the cock can distend at will and use as an aid in the erection of his feathers; pigeons, too, have a similar habit of inflating their "crops," although they lack special plumes; and the frigate bird has an external pouch which itself serves as an ornament, being of naked skin, bright red in color and extensible.

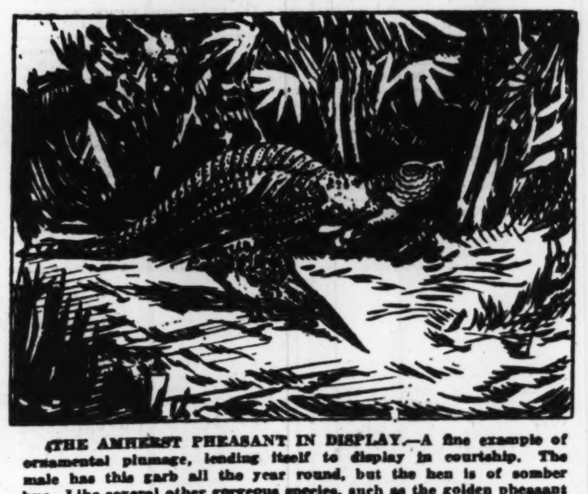
The Bower Birds of Australasia.

EXAMPLES could be multiplied almost indefinitely, but we must here confine ourselves to one other case which has a novel feature of its own. The different species of bower birds found in Australasia build various types of bowers which serve as playgrounds in which the cocks court their mates. These bowers are often large and complex structures of twigs or flower stems and are decorated with collections of blossoms, shells, or brightly colored berries. One species builds a little cabin, some two feet high and three feet in diameter, at the foot of a tree and with a wide mossy lawn in front, while another makes a tunnel several feet long and completely roofed over with twigs. These bowers form the birds' courting grounds and are quite distinct from the nests, which are built in trees at a later stage.



THE AMHERST PHEASANT IN DISPLAY.—A fine example of ornamental plumage, lending itself to display in courtship. The male has this garb all the year round, but the hen is of somber hue. Like several other gorgeous species, such as the golden pheasant and Swinhoe's pheasant, it is a native of China.
[Reproduced by courtesy of Messrs. Methuen & Co. from "A History of Birds," by W. P. Pycraft. After a painting by G. E. Lodge.]

Fighting with rivals plays a part of varying magnitude in the loves of different birds. Some species are well known for their pugnacity, the familiar robin for instance; and in cock fighting this has been turned to account as a source of human entertainment. In the domestic cock and in pheasants the development of spurs as weapons of offense is well known, and in some kinds of birds there are several pairs. Other birds fight with their wings, and lapwings may be seen buffeting each other in midair; an Egyptian relative of the lapwing, the spur-winged plover, has a weapon on its wings which is said to make a fatal result no uncommon occurrence. The ruff, a kind of sandpiper now numbered among the rarer English birds, has a frill of feathers round the neck which is a shield of defense as well as an ornament for display in the regular tournaments which are held; the females, called reeves, lack the distinctive adornment.

Voice.

THE seat of the voice in mammals is in the larynx, at the top of the windpipe. In birds, however, the vocal cords are at the foot of the windpipe, in a special enlargement called the song box or syrinx. The sounds are due to the rapid passage of the air over the tense cords. In the course of evolution the significance of the voice has broadened out. From a simple parental call it became a means of recognition of any kindred, and in the course of ages it became expressive of particular emotions—emotions of joy and of fear, of jealousy and of content. While a certain amount of vocal ability is part of the hereditary makeup, there seems little doubt that the gift requires educating. The song of the first year is sometimes what one might call tentative and generalized. It improves with practice and is probably helped by emulation and imitation. The way in which some birds—for example, skylarks—steal snatches of one another's music suggests the importance of imitation as a factor in educating the vocal powers.

Song.

WE have spoken of song as the vocal part in the display of courtship, but it would be wrong to think of it as being no more. Song is, indeed, not confined to the breeding season, but the periods differ with the species; the extent to which the females can sing also varies. It is not possible to draw a sharp dividing line between true song and the notes which constitute the ordinary language of birds, and this gives another reason for not overemphasising the sexual significance of song.

The definition of song must not be too strictly confined to notes which sound musical to human ears. Outside the ordinary songbird group, there is quite commonly found some note or cry which is especially associated with the breeding season and which may be regarded as the equivalent of a song. Many of these cries seem harsh and discordant to us, but others have an obvious charm, at any rate, in their native surroundings; amid the rugged beauty of a wild moorland the weird bubbling spring call of the curlew is perhaps more appropriate music than the dainty lilt of the sweetest warbler. There are other notes, too, which are not vocal: pigeons, for instance, can clap their wings loudly together in flight, the white stork rattles the halves of his beak like castanets, and the snipe bleats or drums in springtime, as we have already remarked.

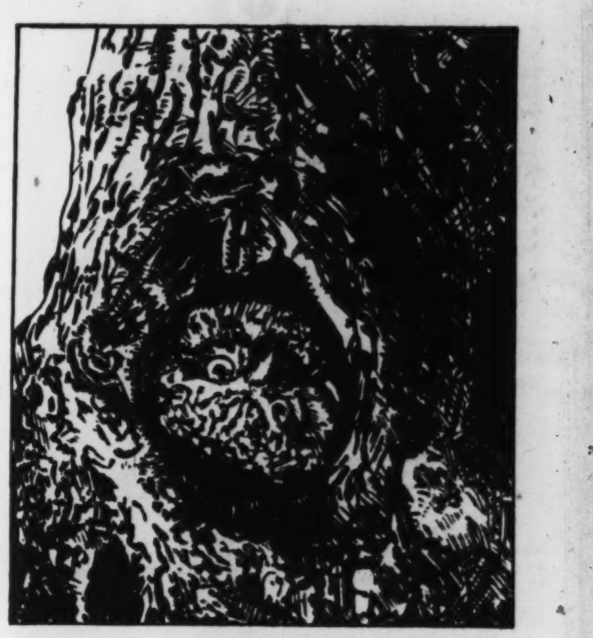
Nesting Habits.

IF the earliest birds were arboreal, as we have reasons for believing, the primitive nesting sites were doubtless also in trees. The elaborate structures made by many present day birds, however, are obviously products of a highly specialized habit which has been evolved in the course of ages. At an earlier stage the eggs would be laid in such natural sites as were available without the necessity of building, and modern examples of a similar habit are not wanting. A species of white tern, for instance, inhabits tropical islands and frequently deposits its single egg on the strong horizontal leaf of a palm tree. As Dr. H. O. Forbes says, "The egg is laid in the narrow angular gap between two leaflets on the summit of the arch of the leaf, where it rests securely, without a scrap of nest . . . yet defying the heaving and twisting of the leaves in the strongest winds. The leaf, as in all palms, goes on drooping further and further till it falls, and among the settlers [on Cocos Keeling island] it is a subject of keen betting, when they see a tern sitting on an ominously withered leaf, whether the young bird will be hatched or not before the leaf falls. The result . . . has always been in favor of the bird; if the leaf falls in the afternoon, the tern will have escaped from the egg in the morning!"

Examples of birds which nest in holes in trees, in accordance with the probably ancestral custom, are the owls, the parrots, the titmice, and, of course, the woodpeckers.

Another hole nester is the hornbill, of which various species are found in many tropical lands, and its story is a strange one indeed. When the eggs are laid and the hen begins to sit, the opening in the tree trunk is walled up with mud by the cock until only a small orifice remains through which the sitting bird can put no more than her head. The device is doubtless a means of defence against snakes or other enemies, but it involves the imprisonment of the hen during the whole period of incubation. During this time, however, she is by no means left to starve, but is fed assiduously through the grille by her devoted mate, who is indeed said to work so hard and to forage so unselfishly that he is worn to a mere shadow of his former self before the task is done.



A LITTLE OWL IN ITS NESTING HOLE.—This small and amusing species has become common in parts of England, owing to artificial introduction from the continent. It is more frequently to be seen in the daytime than some of its relatives.
[From "Wild Life in the Treetops," by Capt. C. W. R. Knight, F. R. P. S.]

Among the tree nesting birds the most primitive type of wholly artificial nest seems to be the platform of sticks or twigs made by such birds as eagles, herons, and pigeons. These structures are often of great size, being added to year after year. The simplest platforms are quite flat, but others are more or less cup shaped, as in the case of crows. Finally, this type reaches its highest point in those birds which add a dome shaped roof.

More promising material is used by most of the small birds which nest in trees or bushes, and with pliable twigs, grasses and roots, moss, and perhaps animal hair, much more complex structures are possible. The finches, for example, make elaborate and beautiful cup shaped nests, while others, such as the wren and the dipper, make spherical nests which can be entered only by a small hole in one side. In addition to the actual structure there is often a distinct lining of specially selected material; for this purpose small feathers, hair, and fine fibers are greatly favored, but in the familiar case of the song thrush, for instance, a complete lining of hardened mud is a characteristic feature. Few nests reach such a high development as that of the tailor bird of India, so called from its habit of sewing leaves together to make a beautiful pouch, a triumph of the nest builder's art.

By Frederick Donaghey.

knows that his play is too long by at least half-an-hour: he says so in the preface, and then argues that, if he cut it, the producer would seize upon the time thus gained to clutter the stage with bevo-pageantry, real water in the Loire, and like junk. And Shaw knows that this is twaddle. Forbes-Robertson put on "Cæsar and Cleopatra" with considerable theatrical splendor, and did not thereby injure that play,—which is another of Shaw's best.

Slovenly casting, as well as defective directing, is responsible for what in these performances seems to be a slow start of the play. The first scene is dulled by the three men who take part. As a beginning for this particular play, the scene as written is perfect. Shaw's purpose here is to "establish" Joan: to make clear without delay or waste the effect of the Maid on this and on that manner of man as she goes eagerly from one to another and asks for help. But Miss Arthur's associates here give out no sense of an opposition difficult to overcome, so that the end of the scene leaves the audience without the feeling that Joan has achieved a desirable point in winning them over. The bullying Baudricourt, the superstitious steward, and the staid Poulegny are acted without color or design; and Miss Arthur, for this scene, is accordingly unable to get Shaw's plan across.

Why Not See It?

Put against the many merits of the performance, these errors classify as minor; and they are easily remediable. . . . And attendance should be larger than it was last week. The play is a real adventure in modern drama, and is bully entertainment. In it, Shaw is gentler than of old: there is leniency in his mood; and he is sympathetic where in other plays he has been contemptuous as to the frailties, the imperfections, and the dishonesties of the churchmen, the statesmen, and the warriors. His "Saint Joan" is a topical document, eloquent about many things that concern us in 1924, although we are not aware that they concern us until he stimulates us into attention. He is racy, live, keen, and mischievous. He makes Dunois quote Voltaire, to the effect that God is with the better army, three hundred years before Voltaire put the epigram into a communication. . . . I shall henceforth have a patience and a credulity about Joan that I have never known.

Etcætera.

Miss Mary Newcomb and others are active in rehearsals of Melanie Weil Koll's play named "The Lady of the Streets," with a view of acting it in Chicago the week of the 21st; but a theater has not yet been announced for the venture.

"The Show-Off" is expected in Chicago early in January; and for this play, also, a theater is not officially announced. . . . The cast recently sent to London will be brought here.

Indications are that Charlot's Revue, long since listed as among the season's entertainments in the Selwyn, will be put into another theater, and at a date later than the 28th. . . . However, these shiftings matter little in the sum of things.

"And Then What?" is a comedy by F. S. Merlin and Brian Marlow, whose names seem new in the list of playwrights. . . . Miss Florence Eldridge, Moffatt Johnston, and Paul Kelly are to be in it.

When Raymond Hitchcock takes "Dumb as a Fox" to New-York, he will call it "The Sap," which is a better title. . . . Hassard Short's Revue, one of the costlier ventures of the season in New-York, is to be moved to Boston later this month. The complaint about it is that it isn't funny; and that's the complaint about all the season's revues in New-York, including the Ziegfeld Follies.

Alfred Lester, it is said, will be brought to this country in the Autumn as co-star with Miss Gertrude Lawrence and Miss Beatrice Lillie in a revue which will meanwhile have been staged for them in London. Lester is popular there, where he specializes in woe-begone, under-dog characters. He has already acted in the United States. . . . And the Misses Lawrence and Lillie, real comédiennes, are yet to be seen in Chicago.

Miss June Walker, here for a week last season in "The Nervous Wreck," and the season before in "Six-Cylinder Love," is mentioned as the principal actress in two plays soon to be done in New-York: "Processional" is one, and "Marguerite of Navarre" is the other. . . . The latter is an Hungarian piece which Ben Hecht, until recently of Chicago, is adapting; and he may change the title to "The Stork."

Report from New-York is that to the brief list of successes there "Lady, Be Good!" was added last week. There is praise for the "book," the verses, and the tunes, and high praise for Miss Adèle Astaire as a comic actress. . . . Miss Astaire indicated something of the kind when she was last in Chicago, in a feeble enticement named "For Goodness Sake!"

George Arliss is so nearly ready in Galsworthy's "Old English" that he is expected to perform in it in New-York on the 23d, after a brief try-out in Connecticut. . . . Mr. Arliss is quoted as saying that a crying need of the London theater is young actresses of talent; and that is a crying need of the theater here, too. Young actors of talent, also, could nicely be used there and here.

Emmett Corrigan, a good actor in more than one play in which he has appeared in Chicago, is to have the principal part in "The Bully," by Miss Julia Hélène Percival and Calvin Clark.

Frank Tinney is reported to be having a hard time of it abroad, although he started in London by making a success in one of the music-halls. . . . What seemed to be a boom for old fashioned variety-shows in London has collapsed; and one of the explanations is that many of the desirable performers are employed in the so-called revues.

It is rumored that the Theater Guild of New-York will open its own playhouse there with Eugene O'Neill's "The Fountain," although the organization's experiments with O'Neill's plays have not been happy. . . . Another rumor is that "Cæsar and Cleopatra" will be used for the opening; and that would be the logical thing: the Guild has done well by Shaw, and has found him profitable.

Miss Geneviève Tobin [the Tobin who was in "Little Old New-York"] is to go into "The Youngest," by Philip Barry, author of "You and I."

"Bunk de Luxe" is the name of a new comedy by Thompson Buchanan and John Meehan. . . . Buchanan has written a number of plays; and George M. Cohan says that Mr. Meehan is one of the best stage-directors in the world.

If the losses in New-York on the respective engagements of Firmin Gémier and Madame Simone were combined, it is estimated, they would total at least $125,000. He was there three weeks; she, six. . . . Gémier acted last week in Montreal, to what is said to have been large attendance. He came to this country largely because of the efforts of James K. Hackett, who will not live long enough to forget that he acted one performance of "Macbeth" in Paris as Gémier's "guest." Hackett worked so hard for the French actor's interests in this country that he even penetrated to the Administration, and managed to obtain some sort of an OK on Gémier from the Department of State, with Secretary Hughes' name in the headlines when the newspapers took note of it. . . . Gémier, who is director of the Odéon, and Madame Simone, who says she is eager to stage a new play about Jeanne d'Arc, are returning to Paris.

BACK IN THE SONG-AND-DANCE

MISS JOSEPHINE WHITTELL

SHE was known for her singing and such in the gay places with tunes until early in the season, when she took part in the La Salle performances of the songless, funless farce named "Early to Bed." Now she is in "No! No, Nanette!" a farce with both songs and fun, both songs and fun being of the best in kind. . . . Miss Whittell is the fifth to have her rôle—that of the wily attorney's wily wife: the name of one predecessor is forgotten; and the three others were Miss Anna Wheaton, Miss Blanche Ring, and Miss Lora Sonderson.

"When I came to you," she says to father, "I was as she is now."

And, before father can recover, the girl, encouraged by mother's confession, is on her way to join her true boy friend.

The last fifteen minutes of the play are thus made strong and holding. The rest of it, including a petting party of the flask set, is somewhat labored and conventionally mellow.

Miss Dunn is her sincere self as the mother, rising wholeheartedly to all her opportunities dramatic and sentimental, and Howard Lang is the flint hearted and mean minded Puritan husband.

New Music Box.

The spirit is one of mockery, but the range is broad. The new Irving Berlin "Music Box Revue" is less tricky than those that have preceded it, and it may be a little less showy. But it is equally good entertainment for those who like their fun in this form. Berlin is an intelligent producer, and shrewd. He also is easily the most popular of composers writing for the revue field. Therefore his songs are always a feature.

Two in this newest of his entertainments seem certain to swing around between the American coast lines for the next year. One is called "Listening," telling the familiar tale of waiting lovers listening for the footfalls and the door knocks of the other. And the other is "The Call of the Southland," in arrangement of which Berlin has melodiously joined a new sigh for mammyland with the "Suwanee River." Whatever did they write songs about before the Bronx discovered the sunny south?

Grace Moore, among the loveliest of the prima donnas, sings these hit numbers, assisted by Oscar Shaw, neat dresser and gentlemanly juvenile.

Fannie Brice is the leading comedienne of the new revue. Her character songs include a plaintive appeal by a Russian immigrant not to be sent back to her old home town. "It's turrible," she admits to the flinty officials at the island. But they do not hear her.

Clark and McCullough are again prominent. At least, Clark is prominent. He is the loud speaker and McCullough the startled but silent microphone. It is a big revue, and handsome. Less naked and less coarse than the competition. Better for the family trade and less likely to thrill the buyers.

We Are Rebuked.

A note sent somewhat anonymously from the Astor hotel reads:

"Mr. Mantle: Anna Ludmila, a Chicago girl and former premiere danseuse of Chicago Civic opera, received twice as much applause for her numbers as did Mordkin for his when Mordkin made his first appearance at the Greenwich Village Follies tonight. She deserved it. Why not conceal the fact from Chicago? C. D."

Why conceal it, indeed? C. D., whatever his (the chirography is masculine) personal interest, is that sarcastic I suspect he is or wants to be a dramatic critic. I was not a witness to either the Mordkin appearance or the Ludmila triumph. Which is one reason an account of neither has been heretofore given. But if Anna Ludmila is the happy recipient of much applause and C. D. is eager the world should know it, I am perfectly willing to do what I can to correct the oversight.

Playwrights—Attention!

Another play writing contest about which I am asked to tell you is for one act plays, and is being sponsored by the committee on publicity methods in social work, headed by Robert M. Kelso of Boston. The social workers are eager to get a few short dramas to be presented during the national conference of social work in Denver next summer. And to spur the laggard playwrights, they offer two prizes, one of $350 and a second of $150.

"The plays," they say, "will be judged on the basis of their value as entertaining drama and the importance of their social message. They should be written for an adult audience and deal with some phase of present day social problems such as are found, for example, in the fields of child welfare, recreation, immigration, or public health." And they should be sent to Paul Benjamin, Baldwin block, Indianapolis, Ind.

The final judges are Jane Addams, Winchell Smith, Zona Gale, Samuel A. Eliot Jr., and Julia Lathrop.

This contest gives you until Feb. 15, 1925. And they promise to announce the winners by April 1. Which is fast reading, if there are many plays.

Work for the Editors.

The John Golden contest is in its last month. This is the one in which the producer of spotless drama concerned with the loves and ambitions of high per cent Americans hopes to uncover a few unknown American playwrights. The new "Lightnin's" and "Turn to the Rights" must be in some committeeman's hands by the end of December. The sifting will then begin, and the awarding of the $3,500 in prizes for the three plays selected is expected to occur some time the following spring.

As the time for this contest shortens the inquiries concerning it multiply. How many eager young Americans, by birth or adoption, are trying for the Golden prizes no one knows, but I am perfectly sure there must be thousands.

The plays are to be sent in each state to the dramatic editor of the nearest newspaper interested. There are between 200 and 300 of these, and most of them report having received from four to forty manuscripts each, or promises that that many are on their way.

The intimation has been printed that the dramatic editors who have agreed to serve as play readers in this contest have in some way been tricked into the task by the Golden office. This isn't true. The contest was born of the producer's ambition to unearth new American plays. This he could do only by interesting new playwrights in the different sections of the country. Obviously the way to reach these playwrights was by broadcasting the prize play offer through the most popular of the newspapers in the various sections.

Before the offer of prizes was made the dramatic editors of the country were circularized as to their interest in the idea. Most of them, familiar with the complaint that it is impossible for the obscure playwright ever to gain a reading for his plays, saw that here was a chance to give everybody a hearing and split up the work.

Probably no one of them realized fully just what he was letting himself in for, but his impelling interest was genuine. Now that the plays are beginning to stack up and each of the committeemen finds himself forced to read, or arrange to have read, a dozen or more plays, he appreciates the joke.

Most of them, however, I hear at headquarters, are still interested and eager to give the growing playwright a chance.

The 350 participating editors will then vote on 175 of their number to read two plays each and send the better of the two on down the line. And so the reading will continue until the three winning plays are selected by a final committee of five.

Personally, I am vastly interested in seeing what the sectional response will be. Is the man (or woman) living in Arkansas trying to write a play for Broadway on a Broadway model? Or is he trying to do the safer and wiser thing by writing of the people and the section of the country he knows best? Will all the eastern plays be copies of the popular Broadway play and the western samples all reflective of the Hollywood influence? We shall see. But it is a pretty good guess they will.

A BIT OF A CRITIC, TOO!

MISS CECELIA LOFTUS

SHE'S unique among the entertainers of today, and something of a genius in mimicry that involves a mischievous criticism of her "copy." Much the same may be said of Miss Elsie Janis, recently with us for a week; and there is no competition between the two—no more than there is competition between Pavlowa and Karsavina, or between Ed Wynn and Walter Hampden. . . . Miss Loftus has been a favorite in this country since, back in 1898-'99, she was inserted in a New-York Casino piece, "A Dangerous Maid," although she had previously acted in the company of the late Augustin Daly. She has been E. H. Sothern's leading-woman; she was the late Henry Irving's for a time; she has been one in London's long list of Peter Pans; and she acted as a star in this country in a piece of Zangwill's, "The Serio-Comic Governess." . . . She bill-tops this week in the Palace.

New Playbills

What Is Due in the Chicago Theaters as Far Ahead as the Managers Know or Care to Tell About.

OPENING DECEMBER 21:

"Sitting Pretty" in the Garrick.—A farce with music by Guy Bolton, P. G. Wodehouse, and Jerome Kern, the authors of "Oh, Boy!" "Oh, Lady! Lady!!" and "Leave It to Jane!" which they made over from George Ade's good comedy of "The College Widow." . . . The Dolly Sisters, who haven't been here in a long time, and Frank McIntyre will be in it.

DECEMBER 22:

The Music-Box Revue [1923] in the Illinois.—Third of the annuals put on by Irving Berlin in the New York theater named the Music-Box, where the fourth was staged last week with what is said to be immense success. . . . Miss Florence Moore, Joseph Santley, Miss Ivy Sawyer, John Steel, and Solly Ward are of the company. . . . For the guidance of ticket-buyers, it is added that the first performance has been taken over by the directors of the Eli Bates settlement-house.

DECEMBER 28:

Miss Irene Bordoni in "Little Miss Bluebeard" in the Blackstone.—A farce from the French, made over by Avery Hopwood, with songs for the well-known soubrette.

The Passing Show [1924] in the Apollo.—Most recent of the revues staged in the New-York Winter Garden,—and, by report, the best in the series of like name.

SHE'S BULLY!

MISS JESSIE CROMMETTE

She is, so far as her rôle permits, among the hundred-percent players now active in Chicago: she is perfect in the part of a browbeaten, patient, adoring, and deploring housewife in "Applesauce." . . . And "Applesauce" has fuesslessly found a place among the season's successes in Chicago: it has been drawing all or nearly all the La Salle will hold.

Vaudeville Wit

RIALTO.

Walmsley and Keating:

"When a man marries, doesn't he swear with his right hand that he'll be true?"

"Yes, but at the same time he's writing down some other girl's address with the other hand."

"Do you believe love knocks once on every woman's door?"

"Yes, love does, but the installment collector knocks every week.

"I believe matrimony is simply a question of dollars and cents."

"Yes, women marry for dollars and cents. Men marry because they have no sense."

"Marriage is a queer thing, isn't it?"

"Yes, it is like running to a fire."

"How is marriage like running to a fire."

"After it is out, you walk back."

"I think love intoxicates a man."

"Maybe it does, but marriage sobers him up."

"Folks say marriage is blind."

"Perhaps it is. But the neighbors are not."

"O, marriage is just like a game of cards."

"Marriage is like a game of cards? How so?"

"It doesn't make any difference what kind of hand you draw, you have to stay in the game.

Stage-News

"Lightnin'" is to be staged next month in London. . . . The actor of the title-rôle is not yet announced.

Gilbert and Sullivan's "Patience" is to be revived in one of the two up-an-alley theaters operated in New-York by Eugene O'Neill; and that ought to be funny!

Walter Hampden is to give two weeks more of his Cyrano to New-York, before making his revival of "Othello." . . . Miss Florence Reed is all through in "Ashes."

Miss Ray Dooley, remembered from the Ziegfeld Follies, is to be with W. C. Fields in "The Comic Supplement." . . . Al Jolson is said to have a hit in "Big Boy," his new vehicle.

"The Skyscraper" is a new one by Langdon McCormick, a playwright who still believes in the "effects" of pre-movie days. . . . "Shipwrecked," by him, is on view in New-York.

It is said that $180,000 was expended on the new Music-Box Revue down to a fortnight before the New-York opening, and that the two weeks of final rehearsals added at least $30,000 to the investment. . . . Irving Berlin, the impresario of these Music-Box annuals, is quoted as saying that this year's is the last, because of the mounting costs and of the increasing risk of obtaining a return.

Godfrey Tearle, imported for "The Fake," says he will return to London when through in that play which is running in New-York. . . . It is said that he has had all sorts of offers to remain in this country, and that besides his wages for "The Fake," he is taking down $3,000 a week for acting for the films.

And his sister-in-law, known to most of us as Miss Adèle Rowland, insists, as she reappears in the varieties, on being announced as Mrs. Conway Tearle.

"Artistic Temperament" is the only play announced for production this week in New-York, where it will have Miss Elizabeth Risdon and Miss Gail Kane as its principal players. . . . It is by Thomas P. Robinson, a pupil in the class in playwriting which Professor Baker until recently conducted at Harvard. F. D.

Autopoint
The Better Pencil

Made of Bakelite

1925 MODEL
The new Autopoint has the simple mechanism of the famous Realite Pencil, with which it is now combined.
Now test this amazing new pencil for a week . . . at our risk
We guarantee that you will like it better than any pencil you have ever tried before. Read this unique test we offer

WE claim great things for this new pencil of ours. But we ask you to believe only after you have tested for yourself. We want you to have it only if it is better, finer than any pencil you ever used before.

We claim that, in at least three new ways this pencil beats any other pencil in the world. And these claims are based upon patents granted by the U. S. government. We know that it will please you, because hundreds of thousands of users today tell us it is the finest they know in writing tools.

This new pencil is the Autopoint. Today it is for sale in all stores, everywhere. Thousands will have no other. And tested, proved, we offer it to you. We know that you, too, will like it.

New scientific principles

Autopoint is made by four men who have spent their lives making pencils. One of these men invented the present mechanical pencil. Under his patents 30,000,000 of them have been sold all over the world.

Today these four men, with scientific, new principles and improvements, have perfected that old pencil of theirs in 3 big new ways.

The things they discovered are standard in the industry today. Now, with the new Autopoint, they set still higher standards.

Autopoint's 3 Outstanding Exclusive Features
1 The famous "neutral zone"—an exclusive patent. When the lead is exhausted, the feeding mechanism cannot "jam." This is what breaks ordinary mechanical pencils. In Autopoint the feeding plunger simply goes into "neutral"—that's all.
2 The Bakelite barrel—an unchanging, onyx-like lightweight material—cannot dent, split or tarnish. Most beautiful substance ever used for pencils.
3 Simplest, smoothest working mechanism. Nothing to go wrong—only 2 parts.

Now we want you to have an Autopoint. And we have arranged this unique test to persuade you to try it—just for a week.

Featherweight—yet unbreakable

Test it in any way you want. Convince yourself of its superiorities. Compare it with any pencil that you will. Compare its simplicity of reloading. Its permanent beauty, its sturdy mechanism. Its inviting comfort.

Today, go to your dealer. Select one of the new Autopoints—the one you like the best. They come in a variety of styles and sizes, and in prices from 50c to $3.50.

Then use this new Autopoint for a week. If then you will part with it, return it. If you do not agree that there never was a finer pencil—bring it back. Without question your money will be refunded. And this we guarantee.

So great is our faith in Autopoint that we make this offer to the world. For we know from what men and women have told us, that nowhere can a better pencil be found.

So please make our test.

Chaplin May Take His Bride to Paris

By Grace Kingsley.

ding, she wasn't to be denied all the sartorial effects of the bride, so she wore orange blossoms and a wedding veil. She looked lovely and very young.

The ceremony was impressive and beautiful with the bridesmaids and little flower girls. In fact, it was so impressive that some director had to murmur "Too much footage"—which caused a ripple of mirth even amid the solemnity.

Among the guests were Betty Blythe and her husband, Paul Scardon, who are renewing their honeymoon, since they have been parted so long, with Betty looking lovely in a champagne colored georgette beaded gown from Paris.

There is an orchid boudoir in Mrs. Upright's house that is so lovely that Betty asked her hostess if she, Betty, ever felt death drawing night, she might come up and die in that room, and Mrs. Upright, like a good sport, said she might.

Pola Buys a Pulpit.

Pola Negri is still living at the Ambassador, but is planning to move into Priscilla Dean's former home, which Pola lately bought.

Pola is buying all sorts of antiques for the new home to such an extent that it doesn't seem possible she can find a place for them all. She is especially collecting Polish antiques, and the oddest bit of all is a pulpit. Yes, m-a-a-m, a pulpit. It is so tall it will have to be kept in the living room, and Micky Neilan suggests that she bought it to impress the censors with in case they should happen to call. Some of the things she has purchased are beautiful, however, and compensate even for a pulpit.

Tuesday at Cocoanut Grove.

Everybody was out at the Ambassador Cocoanut Grove last Tuesday night, with Claire Windsor looking especially radiant as, clad in orange and white, she leaned on the arm of Bert Lytell. They dine and dance at the Ambassador almost every evening. Sometimes they come early, and Claire wears sport clothes or a dinner dress. One of the prettiest dresses is a plain black charmeuse, short, worn with a small black turban.

Alice Terry looked lovely in a simple black crêpe de chine dinner dress. She was with a Los Angeles business man—a nice bachelor—and the two seemed to enjoy immensely dancing together.

Alice says Herb Howe writes her from Rome that Ramon Novarro is most democratic. He is willing to hobnob with the nobility, but that he, Herb, cannot bring himself to do so, having known so much nobility playing extra in pictures in Hollywood. Of course, he says if a king wanted to meet him, that would be different. He would consider an introduction.

KICK KORNER FOR MOVIE FANS

Its Object—Objection

Out of Her Line.

Dear Miss Tinée: Why cast our perfect flapper, Colleen Moore, for she is nothing else but, as Salina in Edna Ferber's "So Big"?

I agree with Elizabeth that it will give the star an opportunity to display her versatility and ingenuity, but Colleen Moore has a vast following, and we all love her as the sweet, vivacious, flapping flapper. Miss Moore, no doubt, can fill the bill, but who would care to see Bill Hart in a Valentino rôle, or Mary Pickford play a Nita Naldi rôle or vice versa?

They are all good actors and actresses, but they are all suited to their particular rôle.

I disagree with Elizabeth when she says an actress becomes monotonous when she continues to play a certain rôle, for what is a better example than the way the theater going public flocks to see Rudy Valentino when he plays the lover or the sheik, and Colleen when she plays the flapper?

Colleen is our only perfect flapper—Norma Talmadge, Corinne Griffith, Florence Vidor could not flap as effectively, although they all are wonderful—so, why did they cast our little Colleen as Salina when there are so many others. But we'll just wait and see. GERTRUDE.

Dear Miss Tinée: May I make a plea for fewer and more intelligent comedies? It seems to me we still have far too many of the old hoary slapstick variety, and sometimes I am ashamed for the reputation of our American humor when I see them and realize they are going to be shown not only here in this country but in England, France, and many other parts of the world.

I have noticed that audiences will laugh as readily and as hard at really clever comedy as they will at the banana peeling and cocoanut pie kind. If you have seen that entertaining film, "The Galloping Fish," you will get my point, for in that long picture of six or seven reels there was practically no throwing of pots and kettles, but a great deal of witty titles, real acting, and droll situations. I remember that one of the longest laughs of the evening was when the marooned taxi driver went to the upper window of the house and, upon looking out and seeing the flood, the great expanse of water on every side, said, with a weary and annoyed expression on his face, "Who done this?"

"Dulcy" and "The Goldfish" went over like hot cakes, and both of them were comedies and not vulgar burlesques.

The "Our Gang" comedies are always popular because the fun in them is clean and refreshing and there is not too much slapstick. I wish we could see more of this kind. NELL.

Barrymore Makes It Worth Seeing

By Mae Tinee.

inne Stratton of the chorus blows in. She feels awfully sorry for the unhappy Mrs. McQuade whose jealous husband keeps her moping at home, and finally persuades that lady to step out a bit. She does nothing wrong, you understand. Just enjoys herself a vurry, vurry, little. With the result of MURDER!

Bob McQuade is murdered. That's all right—only the way things look to the police and the upright young district attorney (the man Mrs. McQuade has always loved) Corinne Stratton—pretty, high strung, undoubtedly reckless, little Corinne is the guilty party.

"I'll go out of my way to PROVE she's guilty!" shouts the demon James McQuade.

So, Corinne goes to jail. And Corinne weeps through the bars and everybody kisses her little waving, helpless hands and feels desperately sorry for her. And Corinne mounts the witness stand and tells the story of her life.

It comes out then that her real name isn't Stratton. Woodburn is the name and "My mother is dead. My father deserted us when I was little——"

Aha—what's the matter with James McQuade?

My children, if you aren't "on" by this time, then let the picture tell you who is the man, for I never will!

Throughout, Mr. Barrymore is a creepy proposition. The look qud of his eyes makes your blood run cold, and he puts on a mad scene that—well, it's a Barrymore scene rendered in most Barrymore-ic fashion.

The star, Flora le Breton, and Gaston Glass as the district attorney, give the best accounting of themselves. Other members of the cast, however, do acceptable work, and direction and photography are all right. Without Mr. Barrymore however, I'm afraid "I Am The Man" would fall pretty flat. He IS the picture.

See you tomorrow!

WHERE DID YOU GET THAT NAME?

Voice of the Movie Fan

Praise for Gloria.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have just seen Gloria Swanson's new picture, "Wages of Virtue," and she is simply immense! All my old love for the lady has flamed anew. I hope she will continue to charm the masses for a long, long time.

I think Glenn Hunter is the same kind of actor that Zasu Pitts is an actress. Their pathos gets them over big. They are both artists in their style of acting.

I have read your recent criticism of "The Border Legion," and I quite agree with your opinion of it. I remember—a long time ago—when Helene Chadwick and Antonio Moreno played opposite each other in "The Angel Factory." Miss Chadwick was new to the screen then, but I can still recall her charming performance as the girl in the story. Mr. Moreno's characterization of the philanthropic young hero also refuses to be buried beneath the débris of old time pictures.

And, in "Lily of the Dust" I wasn't a bit disappointed because Lily married the would-be artist, Raymond Griffith. The boyish soldier wasn't good enough for her.

Here's hoping the rest of your vacations will be few and far between—for our sakes, Mae. MARY BEE.

One Who Knows.

Dear Miss Tinée: Once again I greet you and also ask if you can tell me wherein Richard Dix "sinned" in "Unguarded Women." Dix is a fine fellow and does some good acting, as do also the Misses Daniels and Astor, but this seems to be a sort of plotless play; in fact, was there a plot? You know we picture fans like something that leaves a good afterthought, but in "Unguarded Women" there is simply nothing to it outside of pleasant scenery.

Men do not do such unheard-of things as giving up the women they love most to appease some sudden impulse given on a deathbed scene. Those things are most far fetched and unnatural.

Now for "Merton of the Movies." There was a picture worth seeing several times. The acting can't be beat, there's a good lesson to be learned, and it leaves pleasant memories.

Right now I must tell you Viola Dana is a pearl. O, boy! What a mother she would make. Glenn Hunter I have always liked in every picture or play that I have seen him in. He is the most natural artist in photoland up to date that I have seen and plays such wholesome parts. Yes, we have an awful warm spot for Glenn. Wouldn't Viola and Glenn make a good pair to draw from?

Here is wishing them and you lots of success. I'm off for the circus—good-by. A. T. O.

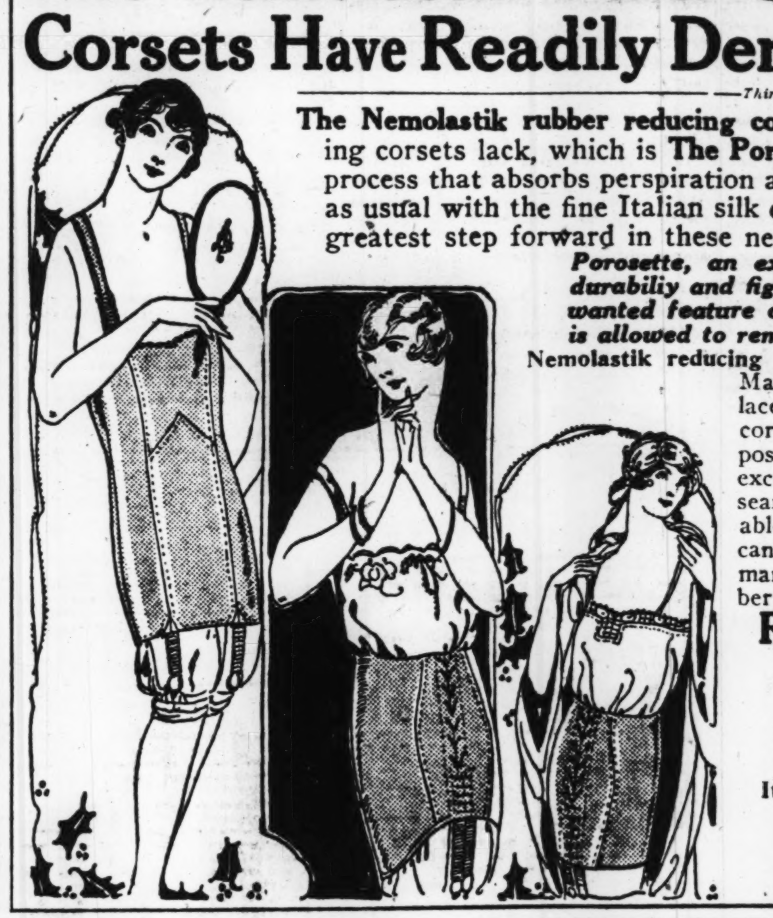
The Nemolastik Para Gum Rubber Reducing Corsets Have Readily Demonstrated Their Worth

—Third Floor—Dearborn Street—



The Nemolastik rubber reducing corset possesses that something all other rubber reducing corsets lack, which is The Porosette Process. The new and exclusive Nemolastik process that absorbs perspiration and is also extremely durable, the outer side covered as usual with the fine Italian silk coating that makes it a dainty garment as well. The greatest step forward in these new Nemolastik-Porosette lined garments.

Porosette, an exclusive fabric, soft yet firm, adds mightily to the durabiliy and figure controlling features. Porosette brings the much-wanted feature of absorbing perspiration. No irritating perspiration is allowed to remain on the skin.

Nemolastik reducing garments remold the figure—absorb perspiration and reduce. Made in a variety of models for all figures. Front lace—back lace. No cause to fear any ill effects when you reduce with this corset—it is entirely safe. The pure gum rubber, which composes the corset, provides a constant gentle massage which causes excess flesh to disappear. Indestructible seams, a new method of boning, non-breakable front, and hose supporters that can't rip off are a few more of the many merits of the New Nemolastik Rubber Reducing Corset, at................ 12.75

Rubber Reducing Brassieres

The new Nemolastic rubber reducing brassiere that does for the figure about the waist line the same effective reducing done by the Nemolastik rubber reducing girdle below the waist line.

Made of the same Italian Jersey silk coated pure Para gum rubber used in the girdles, but lighter.

It flattens the bust and reduces flesh at shoulder blades, and comes well down below top of corset. This garment answers a long-felt want for figures plump above the waist; sizes 34 to 48, at 5.75

Famous Alex. Smith & Sons Sample Room Rugs: Save

—Ninth Floor—

As in many seasons past we offer for Monday a timely sale of all the sample room rugs from Alex. Smith & Sons' Chicago offices (210 S. State Street), at about a third below wholesale prices—an event that shrewd home furnishers attend for the marvelous values always awaiting them. They know that the slight crease in the rugs from being fastened on show racks is in most cases scarcely noticeable, and aside from this one fault the rugs are perfect. The smartest of designs and colorings produced only by Alex. Smith & Sons will be found. A few of the many items.

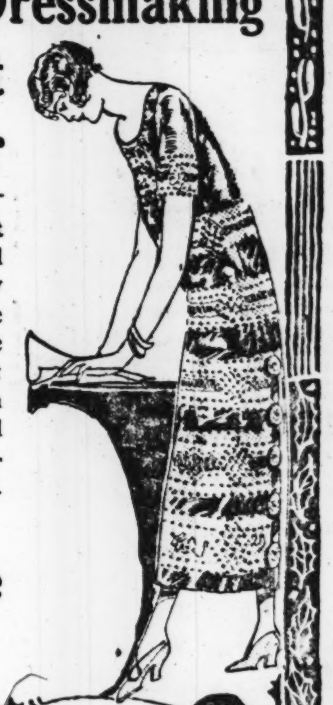
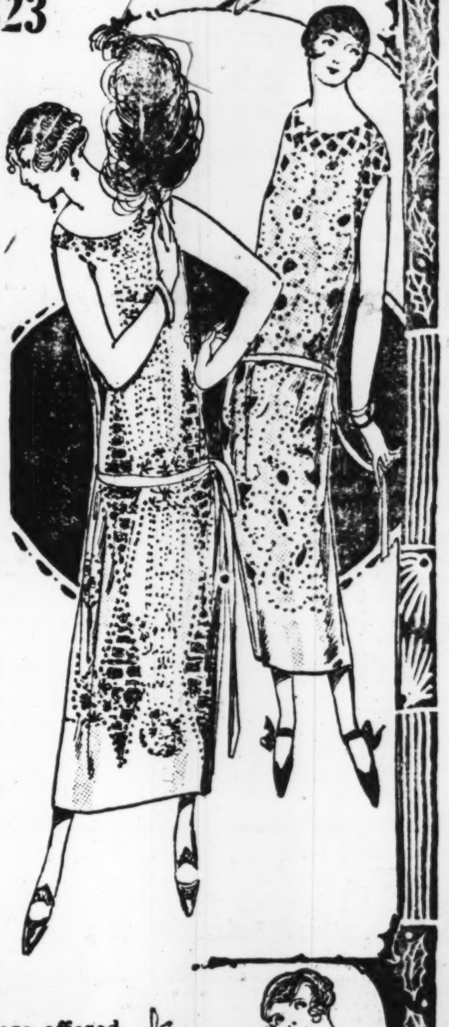
Six Weeks Ago These Women's Exquisitely Beaded Dresses Were Still in the Parisian Dressmaking Shop of a Foremost French Designer

—Fifth Floor—



Paris designed these wonderfully smart dresses, Paris made them and Paris intended them for her very own, but a leading New York importer secured them at quite the lowest price we've ever heard of—for the newest, freshest, prettiest, Frenchiest dresses of the year—because he paid cash for the entire lot, 820 in all—knowing full well how quickly we would purchase the entire lot on the same terms at so low a price. And so, here tomorrow, there are

$50 and $60 Paris Made Dresses—Full of Chic and Sparkle at $23



A boon, indeed, for the woman or miss who wants theatre, dinner, evening and dance frocks—a boon, indeed, for that great group of women who always plan to have a new frock for the holiday festivities. Exquisitely beaded in innumerable beautiful new designs, in the most attractive color combinations with crystal, amber, red, white, black and steel beads—the frocks are made of

Gold Lace	Chiffon Velvets
Silver Lace	Canton Crepes
Flat Crepes	Roshanara

Straight line and long tunic effects, in sleeveless, cap and short sleeve styles. Please note the excellence of the fabrics and the excellence of the making. A group of dresses that you'll just want to choose from—for here, too, are the newest colors, such as:

Black	Navy	Brown
Orchid	Jade	Cocoa
Rose	Peach	Maize
Powder Blue		White

No dresses made in America that are offered for $50 and $60 compare with these in value, none at this moment equal them in style. What woman, who is thinking of a new frock, will want to miss such an occasion? A hint, too, for the perplexed gift seeker. No mail or phone orders. $50 and $60 values. Choice at

Whether to Love or Loathe Opera

By Edward Moore.

man theater in Rochester a few days ago, being one of the first fruits of that city's American Opera company.

Two scenes from Moussorgsky's "Boris Godunoff" and the whole of Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci" were sung, with what was, as far as the newspapers were concerned, complete success. They made it a subject for extended critical and editorial mention. In many ways it must have been an interesting performance. One learns that it was a company of young artists—the surest proof that the performance was given as earnestly as is humanly possible—and that the principals of one work served as choristers in the other, and vice versa. Eugene Goossens conducted "Boris" and Frank Waller, who used to do conscientious but unobserved labor as an assistant conductor with the Chicago Opera association, was the director of "Pagliacci."

All of which goes back to the original question, How much does the public, that buys tickets and is the only force that can make any kind of opera possible, care about it all? How liberally will opera in English or any other language be supported as an entertainment? It must stand and fall upon its merits as entertainment, and not as a civic or patriotic or educational matter. So much is certain.

Whether anything but famous singers will be sufficient to lure people into performances is bound to remain a question. Naturally, if English opera should suddenly convince the public that it is a good investment in the family entertainment budget, English opera will be patronized and managers will present it. Some of them may have to be given a forceful lesson, something like an imaginative member of the fraternity—if there are any—going out and making a fortune on it, but if this happens, others will follow.

In the meantime, this department remains a bit skeptical about anything but big names in opera being enough of a magnet to make opera possible. It is willing to be shown, but it is not yet convinced.

At the Auditorium.

Several big operatic names enliven the course of the Civic Opera company at the Auditorium during the coming week. The eminent Russian, Feodor Chaliapin, promises two appearances—one as the music master, Don Basilio, in "The Barber of Seville," this afternoon; another in the name part of "Mefistofele" on Tuesday night. In the Rossini farce his associates will be Graziella Pareto, Tito Schipa, Giacomo Rimini, and Vittorio Trevisan. As the prince of darkness, Boito version, Claudia Muzio, Cyrena Van Gordon, and Angelo Cortis will have a share in the proceedings.

"Lakme" will be sung on Thursday evening by Pareto, Schipa, and Edouard Cotreuil; the long cast of "The Jewels of the Madonna" on Saturday afternoon will be headed by Rosa Raisa, Forrest Lamont, and Rimini. Wednesday night's "Rigoletto" will be practically a new performance, with Joseph Schwarz as the only connecting link with the former presentation. Florence Macbeth and Alfred Piccaver will sing in it, and Henry G. Weber will conduct. "Tannhäuser" tomorrow, "Carmen" on Friday, and "Traviata" on Saturday night classify in the repetition list.

Triple Functions of the Orchestra.

For a reason that does not occur at any other time of the season, the Chicago Symphony orchestra will appear this week in all three of its most important functions, playing a "pop" on Wednesday night, a children's program on Thursday afternoon, and its two subscription concerts on Friday afternoon and Saturday night. The reason is that next week is the annual winter vacation hiatus, which brings silence to the organization until after Christmas.

Enrico Tramonti, the harpist of the orchestra, will be the soloist in the subscription concerts, and will play Widor's Chorale and Variations for harp and orchestra. The program is constructed pretty well on a light hearted, holiday mood. It includes the prelude to Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel"—which opera, by the way, is due for performance at the Auditorium not long from that time—Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, Palmgren's "From Finland" Suite, and Casella's "Italia" Rhapsody.

The "pop" program, always warranted to register well up in the world's most attractive music, will contain a suite from Moszkowski's "Boabdil," the slow movement from Beethoven's Second Symphony, the ballet music from Goldmark's "The Queen of Sheba," with cello obbligato played by Alfred Wallenstein, Saint-Saëns' "Dance of the Skeletons," and Chabrier's "Espana" Rhapsody.

Some one mentioned to Mr. Stock the other day the only trouble with the children's concerts was that the adults needed a similar course. "And vice versa," said Mr. Stock. For this program he has scheduled Berlioz's "Rakoczy" March, the andante from Beethoven's First Symphony, Saint-Saëns' "Dance of the Skeletons," and Strauss' "On the Beautiful Blue Danube" Waltz. The song will be John Alden Carpenter's "The Home Road." As usual, Mr. Stock will give explanations and illustrations of points on the program.

With the Melody Makers.

American music is the subject of the Haydn Choral society's concert billed for Orchestra hall on Friday night. Chadwick's "Phœnix Expirans" is listed as the principal number, with the explanation that there will be shorter numbers by other American composers. Cyrena Van Gordon will be the soloist and Haydn Owens will conduct.

The Uptown Civic Concert series will close a populous sextet of musical attractions this afternoon at Arcadia auditorium. The Little Symphony of Chicago, conducted by George Dasch, and John Charles Thomas, the baritone, will provide the program. Mr. Thomas will sing arias from Verdi's "Masked Ball" and Massenet's "Herodiade" with the orchestra and a group of songs with piano.

The second concert in Mrs. Edna Richolson Sollitt's series will take place on Tuesday night at Kimball hall. She will be the soloist in Chopin's F minor Piano Concerto, with the Little Symphony and Mr. Dasch providing the rest of the program.

Renée Chemet, the violinist, will play for the first time in Chicago on Tuesday morning at the Blackstone hotel. She will appear in joint recital with Reinald Werrenrath, baritone, as an item in the Kinsolving musical mornings.

Among other pleasant and commendable prospects of this afternoon's music, one is able to select the song recital by the soprano Helen Stanley at the Studebaker, the Flonzaley quartet in its fine demonstration of chamber music at the Playhouse, and Paul Kochanski's violin recital at Orchestra hall. The last named artist will present two works that are both novel and look to be important. They are De Falla's "Suite Populaire Espagnole" and Ravel's "Tzigane."

That the pessimists who hold that phonographs and radios are causing the downfall of music are all wrong is the opinion of Rudolph Wurlitzer, the manufacturer of instruments. He writes about it in the American Magazine, and maintains that as the mechanical devices spread the local orchestras grow. He claims that 30,000,000 people in the United States now play musical instruments of one kind and another, and that this is twice as many as the number five years ago. Persons with leisure turn to music, he adds, and that is why the state of California buys twice as much music per capita as any other state in the country.

There is only one conclusion to be drawn from Mr. Wurlitzer's remarks, and it looks inescapable. If radios and phonographs are increasing, likewise musical instruments, and if, as the managers are saying, the concert business is decreasing, it is because patrons get more entertainment out of radios and phonographs and instruments. Wherefore the job confronting the music makers of concert, opera, and recital is to work out an idea that in its entertaining qualities will compete with these.

Blair Fairchild, the American composer, has completed another ballet and submitted it to the Paris Opéra. He calls it "Songe d'Isfendiar."

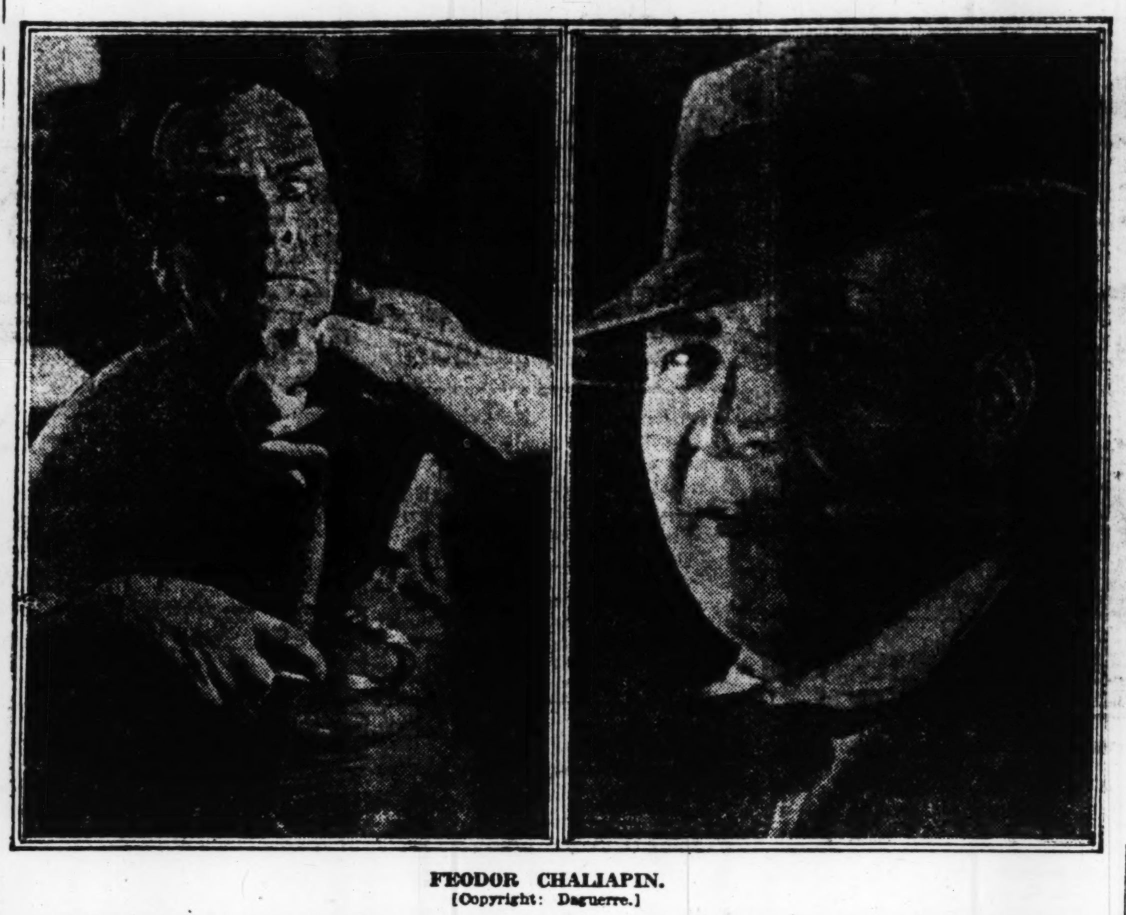
They like Serge Koussevitsky, the new conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, after having heard him in New York. They speak of his dramatizing imagination, his intensity, and his passion for accentuation, adding, however, that his desire to italicize everything sometimes leads into undue languishings. It is at least evident that he takes little for granted.

Arturo Toscanini is to come to America again, but not for another year. He is announced to conduct some concerts with the New York Philharmonic orchestra in January, 1926.

The soloists of the Friday noon recitals at Kimball hall for the rest of the month are thus announced: Dec. 12—Louise Fernald, soprano; Mark Love, baritone. Dec. 19—Mrs. Hildred Hostetter, soprano; Marie Ludwig, harpist. Dec. 26—a program by pupils of the dance.

All the way from London comes the information that Margaret Sheridan, a young Irish soprano, will be with the Chicago Opera next season. She has been singing for three seasons at Milan's La Scala.

A BIT OF MAKEUP



FEODOR CHALIAPIN.
[Copyright: Daguerre.]

It is a bit doubtful whether, having seen Chaliapin as Mefistofele in Boito's opera of the same name, you would be likely to recognize him if you met him on the street. The cut shows him in both guises. You can see what a few lines in grease paint skillfully applied are able to do in making a change of expression, and, for that matter, a change of personality. The wig and the pointed ears are, of course, extraneous.

IN RECITAL

[(C.) Underwood & Underwood Photo.]

Mme. Stanley used to live in Chicago and sing in opera under the leadership of Cleofonte Campanini. She now claims New York as a residence, and sings recitals all over the country. She will appear this afternoon at the Studebaker theater.

A PARTNER OF SUNLIGHT

Cod-liver oil has aptly been called the partner of sunlight. Both out of Nature's storehouse of energy are of supreme importance to a child with rickets.

Scott's Emulsion

and sunlight have been used for decades to give strength to weak-bones. A little of Scott's Emulsion with each feeding does wonders for a malnourished child or adult.

Keep your boy or girl out in the sunlight and give them Scott's Emulsion everyday—regularly!

OVERSEAS TESTS WHET APPETITES FOR DISTANCE

Many Fans Urging Early Repetition of Trials.

BY STEPHEN GILCHRIST.
[Radio Editor.]

Despite the bloopers; despite the thousand and one types of inductive interference to which the American owners of receiving sets are unhappy heirs; despite all other reasons that are citeable to the contrary, the trans-Atlantic tests were a "howling success."

That is a bit too literal, perhaps, for the very few of the tuners-in who were able to escape the bloopers; but for the rest of us, it scarcely tells the story.

Vast Interest Shown.

Yet the tests were successful from the standpoint of interest. Just how great is evidenced alone by the pile of mail that has accumulated, for lack of verification data, in the radio editor's desk. It has swamped the department; and when it is remembered that every other newspaper and every radio publication is in exactly the same boat, the popularity of the tests, despite the handicaps with which it was surrounded on every hand, is understandable.

All that radio writers have said about the lure of distance reception being on the wane has been relegated to the scrap basket by the voices of listeners, expressed in telephone messages, telegrams, and letters, demanding data as to the transmissions of this or that station abroad, so that fragmentary logs may be patched up and reception of music or voice from overseas be verified.

In view of the fact that super-sets of various breeds and kinds had no better success in reception because of interferences than receivers of less pretentious types, there is no authentic log of European transmissions available in this country. And right here comes the rub. THE TRIBUNE has kept the cables hot in the last few days trying to get across authentic logs of the European stations, so that all readers who were unable to identify stations heard may satisfy their minds by comparison as to whether they received transmissions from abroad.

FAIL TO KEEP LOGS

It had been assumed that authentic logs would be kept by the stations transmitting, but such seems not to have been the case. The following from THE TRIBUNE's chief London correspondent brings a rather disappointing outlook for many fans;

"British stations transmitted in the trans-Atlantic tests from 4 to 5 o'clock in the morning. Time assigned for the British stations occupied this hour for the days of Nov. 25, 27, and 30.

"The programs were unimpressive, consisting of organ recital on Nov. 25 and piano and phonograph concerts on Nov. 27 and 30.

"The same programs were transmitted from all British stations, including London, Bournemouth, Cardiff, Birmingham, Manchester Newcastle, Glasgow, Aberdeen, and Chelmsford.

British Stations Silent.

"Cardiff, Manchester and Glasgow were silent in the tests of Nov. 25. Bournemouth, London, Newcastle, and Chelmsford were silent on Nov. 27. Birmingham, Belfast, and Aberdeen were silent on Nov. 30.

"While all British stations sent the same musical numbers at 2LO, London, various stations used a few special announcements for the occasion, but the speakers' names and the subjects were not recorded."

In other words, so far as the British stations are concerned, there is no official log available. It was one of the important details of tremendous undertaking that was overlooked and one that means disappointment to thousands of American and Canadian listeners.

Private Logs Sought.

However, a ray of hope still exists in the rounding up of private logs kept on the other side of the water, and cabling of these, after they have been checked, one against the other, for authenticity.

In view of the fact that the majority of persons who heard what they believed to be European stations broadcasting are able, through logged receivers, to state pretty definitely the wave length at which transmission was encountered, for checking purposes, the call letters and wave lengths of all broadcasters of Europe participating in the tests are printed in another column. These are the official participants. Besides these, transmitters in Denmark, Danzig free state, Norway, and Sweden got into the air, but there is no record yet of any having been heard on this side of the water.

Reports that St. Petersburg [Leningrad] was heard on this side, cannot be verified yet; but many listeners-in of experience are inclined to the belief that someone on this side of the water put something over on the American staff of radio supervisors.

WANT MORE TESTS

Many letters received by THE TRIBUNE urge repetition this winter of the trans-Atlantic tests, some going so far as to advocate a regular schedule on one hour weekly for European stations with American and Canadian silent and one hour for transmissions from this side.

These writers fail to realize the tremendous amount of correspondence and organization necessary to trials of such character, and it is doubtful if, under present conditions, European stations could be gotten into line for early duplication of the feats of a week ago.

But the time is near when the broadcasters of the western hemisphere will realize how very popular distance reception is when it is reasonably possible, and it is probable that before this winter is over some sectional broadcasting schedule, with all other stations silent for a one or two hour period, may be under consideration.

POOR LUCK ABROAD

BY DON SKENE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Dec. 6.—A careful check on the details of the international broadcasting during the week of Nov. 24 to 30, shows many interesting results, but the tests failed to meet the complete high success expected, according to leading radio writers this week.

American listeners had far beter luck than the British. Atmospheric conditions here were very unfavorable during the first days of the test. KDKA was the best American station received in Great Britain, with fair results from WBZ, WGY, WFI, and WHAZ.

YULETIDE SPIRIT HELPS CAUSE OF FUND FOR BLIND

Large Increase in Gifts Anticipated.

BY CHARLES D. WARNER.

Some attention has been paid the last week to observation of the affect the Christmas spirit, which now pervades many human activities, has upon charitable enterprises, particularly the campaign THE TRIBUNE is conducting to raise funds for the purchase of radio sets for the needy blind in coöperation with the American Foundation for the Blind and the American Radio association.

There is a noticeable showing of the liberal Christmas heart in the letters received containing contributions, and it is anticipated that there will be a gradual increase during the holiday season. As has been said, "It si the period that presents an opportunity to test the quality of a man's soul."

In Perpetual Dark.

Seated in an arm chair whiling away the time, the blind man. At the work bench with odds and ends of things, the blind man. Groping along the street in the company of a friend, the blind man. Living in the world of perpetual night—in the world of sound and not of sight struggling through life with all his might, but never enjoying the faintest light—the blind man.

Everybody else enjoys the sight of crowded streets, the gorgeous displays in the store windows, imagines how this or that would please a certain member of the family; sees the sky, the sunlight, the faces of dear ones—but not the blind man.

Little need, however ,to portray the existence of the unfortunate blind. But great need to point out that their lives can be made infinitely happier and better by means of a radio set. Out of touch with the world, a radio set will bring into their lives the sweet music of the world's great artists, instructive talks that will give them something to talk about or amuse them with the prattle of comedians. No greater opportunity of doing good toward unfortunate fellow beings was ever offered the world than this Radio Fund of the Blind.

Cardinal Indorses It.

Word comes from New York that his eminence, Cardinal Hayes, has taken notice of the effort being made to help the blind. Stephen J. Donahue, secretary to the cardinal, sent the following letter a few days ago to Alfred M. Caddell, secretary of the American Radio association:

"The efforts which your association is making to raise funds for the purpose of providing radio sets for blind persons throughout the country have come to the attention of his eminence, the cardinal archbishop. He bids me write you that he is deeply impressed with the fine spirit and purpose of this campaign. The opportunity which you are seeking for the blind will certainly be a source of great joy and inspiration to those who are deprived of so much else in life. His eminence gives his hearty indorsement to this movement and hopes it will receive the thoroughgoing support of the American people."

Poland Forming New Radio Regulations

The Polish ministry of industry and commerce states that a new executive order pertaining to radio regulations in that country is being prepared and snould be signed in the near future, says J. L. Cochrane, clerk to trade commission of Warsaw, in a report to the department of commerce.

CHILDREN AID BLIND FUND

When Jule Ecker, 579 Hawthorne place, learned of the nation-wide campaign to supply radio sets to the needy blind she imparted to her mother the belief that she should do something for so worthy a cause. Her mother agreed, and Jule decided a good plan would be to raffle off a fancy handkerchief which she had brought from France two years before. Enlisting the aid of some school girl friends, including Irma Lyon, plans were set afoot. Virginia Beard added stationery to the donation, and $12 was added to The Chicago Tribune's radio fund for the blind, this to be duly acknowledged later.

MEMBERS VOTE B. L. A. SESSION MARKS RECORD

They took a vote after the session of the Broadcast Listeners association Dec. 3, after the close of the meeting on the question as to whether there had ever been a meeting of listeners approaching it in interest and enthusiasm, and the vote was unanimous that there never was anything like it.

Everything was on the program from learned technical lectures to the singing of "How Do You Do?" The technical program under the direction of Edward F. Duskis of New York was considered interesting and instructive. And then President Frank H. McDonald, who did nothing else at the radio show but plead in behalf of THE TRIBUNE radio fund for the blind kept up his pleading at the meeting, and probably will keep on pleading till the required fund is raised.

For Successful Amplification
AFTER all, to get good volume on the loud speaker requires audio frequency amplification. No matter how many tubes you use, their efficiency depends upon the transformers. A poorly made transformer does more to cause distortion, noisy reproduction and weak signals than anything else in the set. You may find a bigger transformer than the Premier "HEGEHOG" but you will not find a better one. For tone quality it is unsurpassed. Not only will it give great volume without distortion but it saves space and improves appearance. Try "HEGEHOGS" to improve your present set, or your next hook-up.

RANGER GAINING FRIENDS AMONG HOME BUILDERS

Letters Tell Pleasure Over Tone Qualities.

BY EXPERIMENTER.

Many letters have been received from home experimenters who have constructed THE TRIBUNE Ranger one tube set, and in only two cases has there been any note of complaint. These two complaints registered were rather remarkable in that the writers devoted the greater parts of the letters to commendation of the set, while the troubles were cited as afterthoughts.

One writer, at the end of an enthusiastic letter, stated that he could not hold distant stations if he took his hand from the condenser dial. This is evidence of unusual body capacity. In the early experiments with the set body capacity was experienced, but only on the variometer dial. This was almost entirely eliminated by substitution of the bakelite dial by one of the old fashioned metal dials, which used to be so popular in the days when nearly every amateur constructor was engaged in hooking up some form of Armstrong three circuit regenerative, ultra-audion or other single circuit contraption. With this, change body capacity was noticed only on weak stations.

Nearly All Wiped Out.

Later a vernier dial with metal scale was installed and body capacity became a thing of the past until the European tests. Then it was noticed on three occasions, these being when attempts were made to bring in and hold weak signals.

It is probable that the writer of the letter referred to failed to send his negative filament to ground. If not, then the coil must be near the condenser.

Still another possible fault may lie in too close inductive relationship between coil and variometer. In this it would be well for each builder of the circuit to test out just what setting is best for the coil. The proper procedure is to tune in the farthest station that can be registered clearly. When this station is brought up to best volume the coil should be moved slightly away from the variometer, followed by a retuning of the variometer circuit.

Stations to Work On.

Stations that are best to work on from the Chicago district are WFAA or WBAP, WOC or WHAA, or WCX or WWJ, for reasons that will become apparent later.

In the first place, to simplify tuning, it is well to have the variometer in step with the condenser on distant stations, or nearly so. And, coincidentally, when that has been accomplished the circuit is at its most efficient point. Hence, it is better to choose a station of more than 450 meters wave length. Naturally a nearby station will not do, as the variometer does not cut much figure on a strong signal, except for clarity.

Let us suppose we want to get the best adjustment for the coil. Say it is now one inch from the variometer, at the nearest point. We tune in WFAA, always strong in this part of the middle west. The condenser dial is at, say, 78, and at 60 on the variometer dial we find our signal inclining to distort or to disappear. We turn back the variometer dia' to 58, clearing our signal. Then we move the coil a half inch farther away from the variometer, or turn one side of it slightly away so that the field is moved farther off.

Finding Ideal Setting.

Retuning with the variometer, we will find that mushing does not occur until we have reached 65 or possibly more on the variometer dial. The operation is repeated, testing with each movement of the coil, until we bring in WFAA at 78 all around, with distortion or disappearance of the signal at about 80. That is the ideal setting. And it makes logging of outside stations a simple task.

Experiments are still going on with the two tube Ranger and it is hoped within two weeks to have an ideal arrangement in neutralization and in the radio frequency transformer. Tests on European stations, while surprisingly satisfactory, in that British stations were heard on three nights—5IT, Birmingham; 5NO, Newcastle, and 6BM, Bournemouth, all being registered in the loud speaker, using only two stages of amplification, on Saturday night, Nov. 29. Reception on previous nights of the tests were covered in this column last Sunday.

Sunday night, while fishing for Europe, CKY, Winnipeg, was registered with splendid volume, this station failing to get off the air until nearly 10:15. Next WOAI, San Antonio, Tex., was found cluttering up the ether. Shortly after 11 KHJ was brought in and the Los Angeles broadcaster developed a weakness in the radio frequency coil arrangement.

Loose Coupling Better.

KHJ was anything but satisfactory in volume, although quite clear. Hooking in the third stage brought noises with it, and so, returning to the second stage, the r. f. coil was manipulated. Finally the primary was slipped from its position and placed at various points within and without the grid coil. Here the surprising fact was encountered that loose coupling of a very extreme order in the r. f. coil, with the antenna circuit coupled tightly to the grid coil of the first tube, gave the best results, KHJ leaping in with a volume that made it clearly audible on the floor above.

Here, then, is the field to be gone over: Coupling and size and type of winding most efficient as the primary coil in the r. f. circuit. And this is being studied as rapidly as efficiency will permit. Sometimes two or three nights' trials are necessary before a method may be approved or condemned, and home experimenters who are experienced may find pleasure and instruction in taking a whirl themselves at the game. Moreover, some one may strike something quite worth while.

AMATEURS ADD DENMARK TO FOREIGN CALLS

East Hartford Operator Exchanges Greetings.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 6.—While broadcast listeners have been busily engaged in listening for European stations, the original DX men—amateur radio telegraph operators—have been just as intent in their efforts to communicate with foreign amateurs.

In Personal Touch.

Unlike the listening fans who turn their dials in the hope of getting a fragment now and then from a faraway musical program, the amateurs go out for what they think is bigger game — personal communication through the medium of the International Morse code. There is no test period for them as there are now so many foreign operators that they can be picked up every night. The American Radio Relay league is receiving reports of this nature constantly.

For example, the other night D. C. S Comstock, an amateur radio operator of East Hartford, was tuning in on his set and heard a strange call which he identified as a Danish station, the first to communicate with this country. Comstock received a message for the A. R. R. L. as follows: "Greetings from the first Danish amateur across." Hiram Percy Maxim, president of the A. R. R. L., replied through Mr. Comstock with this message: "Sincere congratulations. Hope that we communicate often."

Eleven Countries Answer.

With the addition of Denmark, there are eleven foreign countries whose amateurs have communicated with operators in North America. In many of these countries the development of amateur radio has been inspired by the work of U. S. and Canadian Hams. The list is as follows: England, France, Italy, Holland, Scotland, Denmark, Australia, New Zealand, Mexico, Argentina, and Chile.

OKLAHOMA SOON TO HAVE LARGE RADIO STATION

Bristow, Okla., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—KFRU, Oklahoma's new $30,000 broadcasting station, will be located here, according to R. O. Booth and E. H. Rollestone, officials of the Etherical Radio company who are putting up the station. Steel towers for the station have been shipped and are due to arrive here soon. Construction is to start immediately.

The government radio inspector of New Orleans has approved the location. The station has been set at 385 meters and will broadcast with 500 watts power.

Through the remote control system being established by the station, any city in Oklahoma can broadcast a program through the use of the long distance telephone. Over twenty-four cities have already made tentative arrangements to put a program on the air when the station is completed.

The station will be dedicated to Oklahoma and at its disposal, officials say. KFRU will probably be known as "The Voice of Oklahoma."

SIMPLIFIED WIRING.

To many who are just building their first set the most difficult problem encountered in the construction is the determination of just which wires are connected and which are still to be connected. To eliminate this uncertainty as each wire is laid in the set the corresponding line in the diagram should be crossed out with a colored pencil line.

SUMMARY OF OVERSEAS TEST ALSO PROVES FRAGMENTARY

New York, Dec. 6.—[Special.]—Radio waves, crisscrossed through space by European broadcasters during the international tests, created a situation in America that competes with the most difficult cross-word puzzle. Fragments of Hertzian waves picked up on the wave lengths of European stations inspired hundreds of American auditors to send telegrams, letters, and postal cards to radio editors.

The office of the Radio Broadcast at Garden City, Long Island, sponsor of the transoceanic test, is still receiving messages sent in by listeners from all sections of the United States. A large percentage of the mail reports reception of parts of piano solos, broken sentences, and strains of musical selections recognized by the familiar tunes. The usual questions of a technical nature gave way to "Whom did I hear?"

Many Are Wondering.

Most cross-word puzzles are easy, compared to finding the answer to this question. Here 'is a typical problem: "Last night, Nov. 26, about 11:11 o'clock, eastern standard time, I picked up a man talking, followed by a piano solo from 11:12 to 11:30. Then came a voice about 11:34, which was not clear, but it apparently was an announcement. Then the piano again until it was drowned out by WMAC. I am wondering if I heard 2BD."

Several conclusions can now be drawn, since many of the messages have been read and the reception checked with what the official listening posts detected on Long Island.

Summary of Reception.

The daily results have been tabulated.

Monday, Nov. 24—Opening test disappointing. Poor results attributed to weather.

Tuesday, Nov. 26 — Cooler. The waves from 5-NO, Newcastle, brought selections from "Rigoletto" and the sextet from "Lucia." Aberdeen, 2-BD, on 495 meters, was heard by many, as was CYL, Mexico City, a 510 meter station.

Wednesday, Nov. 26—Warmer than Tuesday with the air over the Atlantic evidently in the same unfavorable condition as on Monday. It was a poor night and litlte direct evidence was submitted that British or continental stations were intercepted here.

Thursday, Nov. 27. — Atmospheric conditions better. Many reported reception of "Roses of Picardy" from PTT, Madrid, at 11:35 p. m.

WJZ, New York, and 9CN, Moncton, New Brunswick, broadcasting "Linger Awhile," "Setting Pretty," and other dance selections until 11:20, caused interference.

Friday, Nov. 28.—Several American stations continued to broadcast until after 11 o'clock. WBZ, Springfield, signed off at 11:02; WNYC, 11:04, and WCAP, Washington, caused the most interference by broadcasting dance music until 11:12.

Saturday, Nov. 29.—Coldest air of week, but radio results disappointing. WIP, Philadelphia, 'on the air' broadcasting "Aida" until 11:19, while stations in Hollywood and Los Angeles interfered west of Chicago. Signor Marconi was scheduled to talk from London, but no American listener reported hearing his voice.

Sunday, Nov. 30.—Only two European stations scheduled to broadcast: PTT, Madrid, and ESP, Paris. Interference caused by several American stations. WQAM, Miami, Fla., signed off 11:14; WOAI, San Antonio, Tex., radiated a program of religious music by a soprano and baritone until 11:30. 6KW, Tuinicu, Cuba, on 340 meters, prevented ESP, Paris, also 340 meters from being heard in the United States.

Midnight came and the American broadcasters continued their programs. The international tests were over.

A wireless message from England reported that 2LO, London, and all other British stations did not send special concert programs to America, but adopted an easier arrangement.

Thursday evening 7SR, C. Elia, Cuba, was broadcasting about the merits of Cuba and invited Americans to come to Cuba for the winter. The wave length was 305 meters. Many of those who heard 7SP missed the call letters and believed that they were in tune with 6SL, Sheffield, Eng.

Plan Dealer License in New Zealand

A bill providing for the licensing of radio dealers and the application of a portion of the fees thus collected to the assistance of broadcasting agencies has been introduced in the New Zealand senate, Trade commissioner E. G. Pau y, Melbourne, advises the department of commerce.

JULIAN ELTINGE GIVES PROGRAM ON WEDNESDAY

Next Wednesday at 10:30 p. m. radio fans who tune in KYW will be in on a rare treat. Julian Eltinge, whom every one knows as the world's famous portrayer of feminine fads and fancies, will appear on the Hearst Square studio and will go on the ether with about a half hour's program of songs and witticisms, that he only can produce.

JULIAN ELTINGE.

Julian Eltinge appears on the McVicker's stage, starting Monday, Dec. 8, in his farewell American tour, and will come to the KYW studio on Wednesday, where he will reach the hearts of thousands over the radio who otherwise could not see him in person.

Remember the time, remember the station, and, most important of all, remember it's Julian Eltinge.

BIG RADIO SHOW SURPRISES EVEN ITS MANAGERS

Trophies Are Awarded for New Inventions.

The final report of the third annual Chicago Radio show auditors, which has just been made, proves conclusively that this season's local wireless exposition was successful beyond all expectation.

The total attendance here for six days almost equaled that of the New York show for seven days. The eastern show drew 175,000 people, while the Chicago attendance was 173,200.

The wholesale business transacted by the exhibitors here was more than double that of the Manhattan fair. The 239 Chicago exhibitors—there were 200 in New York—booked over $6,500,000 worth of orders, and, strange to say, most of the business was done by the younger and smaller concerns.

Trophies Awarded.

Three trophies and one "honorable mention" were awarded to new inventions. They were as follows:

Miss Gail Savage, Brooklyn, N. Y.—A silver cup, in recognition of the excellence of her combined amplifier and loud speaker.

The Celotex company, Chicago—A silver cup, in recognition of the superior qualities of Acousti-Celotex for acoustical control of sound.

Paul B. Armstrong, Chicago—A silver cup, in recognition of the excellence of his "Armstrong speaker."

E. T. Flewelling of Highland Park, Ill.; A. J. Haynes of New York City, and J. Elliott Jenkins of Chicago, were awarded silver cups as tokens of appreciation of their various ultravaluable contributions to radio. All are pioneers in the wireless field and all are rated among the leading radio authorities of the present day.

Oscar Ryan of Chicago was given an "honorable mention" on his "Rian Diaphragm," and several other minor honors were conferred by the exposition directors, which will be announced later.

One outstanding feature of the show was the appearance of Miss Edith Bennett, the young American concert star, who was acclaimed "the world's finest radio singer" by a special jury of radio-musical experts.

Edith Bennett as Guest.

Miss Bennett was one of the "guests of honor" at the exposition, which she officially opened and closed, assisted by George D. Hay, "the solemn old judge" of station WLS, who was recently nationally elected "America's most popular announcer." On the final night she was presented with a silver cup and a gold medal on behalf of the exhibitors and Messrs. Herrmann and Kerr.

"Because of the unlimited possibilities of the new science and the rapid advances which are being made almost daily in every branch of it I feel positive that interest in radio will increase rather than diminish during the next decade," said Mr. Kerr. "It will soon be on the same plane with the automobile industry, unless I am badly mistaken, and radio will play even a more important part in the lives of the people of all countries.

New Wonders Awaited.

"One of America's leading set manufacturers is now engaged in the development of a very feasible system from transmitting light, heat and power by radio, which he expects to have perfected in time to introduce at the second radio world's fair in New York next fall.

"Another noted wireless engineer is working out a system for transmitting refrigeration by radio, which I believe will be perfected during the coming summer. Several inventors are bringing out instruments for transmitting and receiving motion pictures."

The New CROSLEY 51

This new receiver is a two tube, long range regenerative set. It gives loud speaker volume at all times on nearby broadcasting stations, and operates a loud speaker on far away stations under fair atmospheric conditions. It is safe to say that every powerful station in the United States can be heard by owners of this receiver.

This set is unusually selective—it incorporates standard sockets so that all makes of tubes can be used, The various units are mounted on beautifully engraved grained panels inside of a hardwood mahogany finished cabinet, which completely encloses all parts and tubes.

THE ABOVE SET WITH THE FOLLOWING HIGH GRADE EQUIPMENT:

Complete with 2 Radiotron or Cunningham Tubes, 2 Burgess "A" Batteries, 45 V. Diamond "B" Battery, 1 pair Head Phones, 3,000 Ohms, and complete Aerial Equipment. Nothing else to buy; price $33.50

Price of Set without Accessories $18.50

TODAY'S RADIO PROGRAMS

(Sunday, Dec. 7.) (Standard time throughout.)

On its master artist concert this afternoon W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station, on the Drake hotel, will present two vocalists, two pianists, and two violinists, under the direction of Charles H. Gabriel Jr.

MARION O. HOLLAND.
Violin.

RUTH OLT WACK.

Miss Vera H. Colburn, operatic soprano, who has won distinction throughout the country by her performances with various opera companies, among them the Boston and Gallo organizations, will be heard in a group of classic numbers, including two arias.

Ruth Olt Wack, coloratura soprano, who appeared with the Chicago Little Symphony orchestra last spring, also will sing, accompanied by Charlotte Olt Crist, violinist, and Beula Blye Mowers, pianist. They are presented through the courtesy of Adolf Muhlman.

Marion O'Neal-Holland, violinist, also takes part in the program. Miss Holland holds high honors from the Royal College of Music of London, England, where she won a three year scholarship as the foremost applicant from Canada. She has given concerts in Europe, Canada, and the United States. She is accompanied by Eulalie Kober, pianist, who will also be heard in piano solos.

The program from the Chicago Musical college at the Central theater, beginning at 3:30 p. m. today, promises to be of unusual interest. Under the direction of Edoardo Sacerdote the entire opera, "The Tales of Hoffman," by Offenbach, will be sung by twelve of the college artists. Charlotte Boykin will appear as "Olympia," Agnes Lighthall as "Giulotta," and Ruth Racette as "Antonia."

Preceding the master artist concert the Lyon & Healy organ recital, given by E. Stanley Seder, will begin at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the studio of the company. Mr. Seder will present a series of classic numbers.

During tonight's program from W-G-N's studio Musical Director Gabriel will present an "Evening with the Spanish Composers." Granados, Albeniz, and others will be the subject of short explanatory talks, and Miss Ethel Wakefield, soprano, the Drake concert ensemble, under the direction of Henry Selinger, and other artists will assist.

This morning at 11 o'clock Quin A. Ryan will appear as Uncle Walt, interpreting the comics for the children.

At 11:45 a. m. the symphony orchestra program will be broadcast from the Balaban & Katz Chicago theater. The soloist will be Edward Vito, harpist, who will play a movement from the Zabel concerto.

The Radio with the Greater Radius

"From Greenland's Icy Mountains to India's Coral Strand"

That well known old verse symbolizes today the mighty reach of the Stromberg-Carlson 5-tube Neutrodyne Receiver. Distant stations are brought in with local station volume on this wonderful set.

One of our users, Mr. L. P. R. Bean, of Sydney, Australia, hears, under favorable conditions, Station K G O at Oakland, Cal., a distance of 7400 miles (actually farther than from Greenland to India) using his Stromberg-Carlson No. 1-A Receiver and No. 1-A Loud Speaker.

And this magnificent receiver has other vital features: It gets out from under the local stations to receive the far away programs. It "holds" distant or local stations indefinitely after the dials once have been set.

STATIC CENTER TRACED DOWN TO GULF OF MEXICO

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 6.—There are three common types of static. Grinder static, which causes a frying noise in the phones, is the most annoying to radio listeners. The second type is caused by lightning flashes. It produces a sharp click in the phones. The third type creates a hissing noise and is generally heard during heavy snowstorms. The latter two types do not cause much interference, as they are likely to be of a local nature and last only a limited time.

The grinding which causes so much interference, especially in the summer, comes from a "static center" in the western part of the Gulf of Mexico, according to C. W. Horn, superintendent of radio operation at KDKA.

This theory has been fairly well established by a series of experiments with radio direction finders carried out by Mr. Horn and has been strengthened by recent experience and observation. If static of this kind is bad at a given time in New York it will usually be found worse in Pittsburgh at the same time, worse still in St. Louis, and so on, until its maximum is located somewhere in the vicinity of the gulf.

It has been observed that conditions favorable to static in the gulf are at their worst during the rainy season, which lasts from May to October. During periods of high humidity sheet lightning—that is, lightning that flares rather than flashes, and is rarely followed by thunder—plays incessantly and at such times reception is a burden to radio operators in and near the gulf. Not only does the uproar in the receivers never stop, but the atmosphere is so highly charged that sparks an inch long can be drawn from antennæ, often burning out tubes.

NEWS OF THE STATIONS

Metropolitan Opera stars and the Cleveland Symphony orchestra will broadcast a special classical program Tuesday at 9 p. m., central standard time, through stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady; WRC, Washington, and KDKA, Pittsburgh. The soloists will be Mario Chamlee, tenor; Elly Ney, pianist, and Florence Easton, soprano.

* *

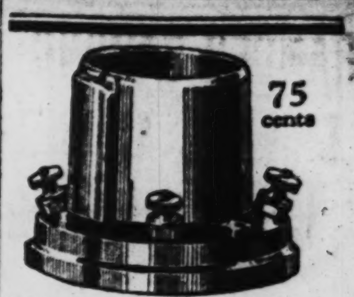
WBZ will broadcast all home games of the Boston Bruins in the professional hockey games of the National Hockey association from the Boston arena on Monday nights, beginning at 7 p. m., central standard time. The association is made up of six teams, five from Canada. Two teams make Montreal their headquarters, and the other three teams represent Hamilton, Ontario, and Toronto.

* *

WOR, Newark, will open a studio on Wednesday evening in Chickering hall, New York, to accommodate many artists who find it inconvenient to make the trip to Newark.

* *

Five stations are now broadcasting the Capitol theater program every Sunday evening at 6:20 o'clock. The stations are WEAF, New York; WCAP, Washington; WJAR, Providence; WEEI, Boston, and WDBH, Worcester.



Clearer reception

IT'S EASILY done. Get better contact between tube and socket and you'll have clearer radio. It's the contact that counts.

In Na Ald Sockets, corrosion, the arch-enemy of clean contact in all sets, is quickly scraped off without fuss or bother by simply twisting the tubes back and forth in the sockets two or three times.

Be sure you have Na-Ald Sockets in the set you already own, build or buy. De Luxe 75c., others, 35c, 50c, 75c.

What "complete self-contained" means as in De Forest

IT is the best of fun, we admit, to hook up a radio set, to string your antenna from tree to house, to connect your ground-wire—at least it is fun if you are mechanically minded.

If you're not, and want an instrument which is ready to operate when you buy it and which is based on the highest kind of engineering skill, what you want is a De Forest Radiophone. Even if you are mechanically minded—and want an instrument which your family can use and of which you will be proud—De Forest D-12—the leader in the field—is the thing to get. Its tone is clear and natural, almost beyond belief. It is remarkably selective.

And as for convenience, remember these important things: it is self-contained and complete in one unit—usable within five minutes after it enters your home—easily movable from room to room because it does not need to be attached to either antenna or ground.

When you find the De Forest agent in your vicinity you find a man who knows radio—a man who has given us his word that he will see that every instrument he sells is thoroughly inspected and properly serviced after the sale.

Avail yourself of his help. He desires, as we do, that you should get the fullest enjoyment and satisfaction from your instrument.

Mandel Brothers — The Christmas Store Beautiful

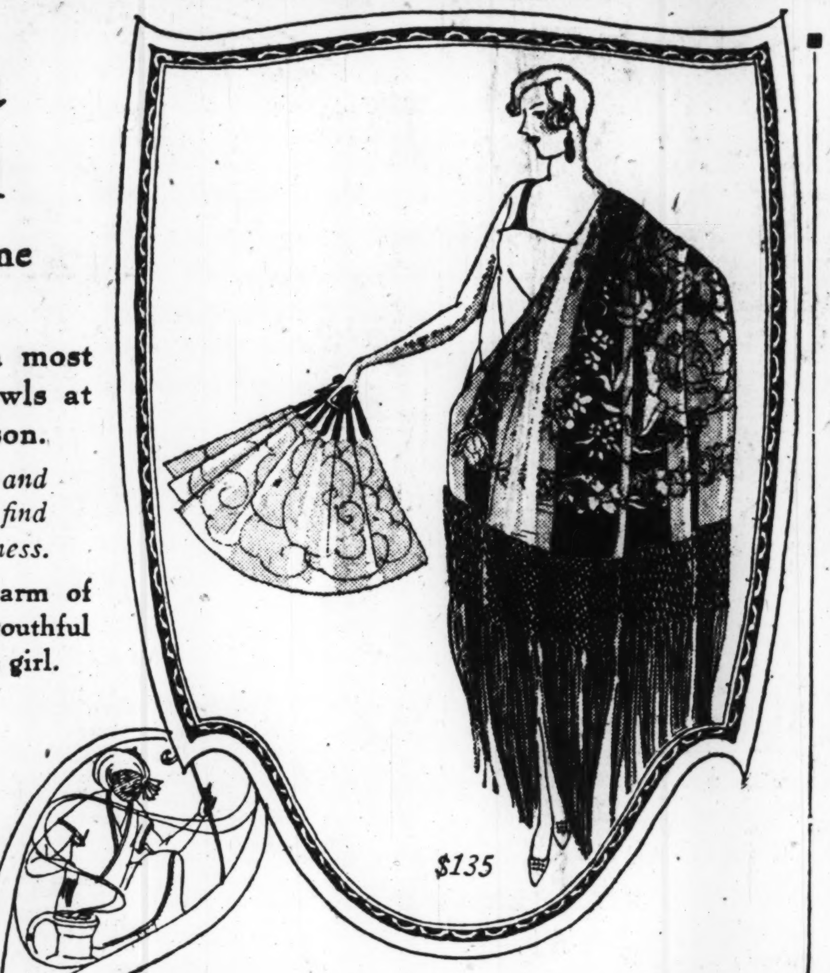
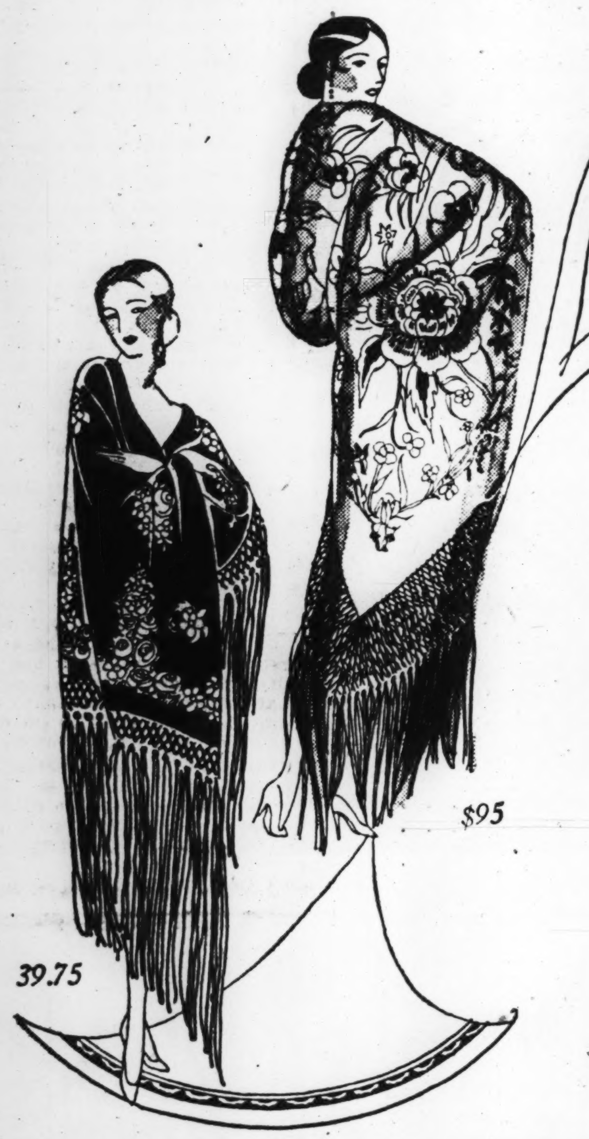
The magic in a Spanish shawl which swirls the simplest costume into a thing of rarest beauty

And here, in one vast assortment, is a most extraordinary collection of gorgeous shawls at prices so moderate as to defy comparison.

The unmatched skill of Chinese craftsmen and the whimsical mastery of Italian artisans find eloquent expression in these groups of loveliness.

There are shawls to enhance the gracious charm of dowagers and matrons, as well as others, more youthful in style and coloring, for debutante and college girl.





Our latest importations direct from China and Italy will lend gay festivity to holiday functions are hand-embroidered shawls of heaviest crepe de chine. 60 and 64-inch squares, with 26-knot hand-tied fringes. White, black and colored grounds, riotously embroidered.

At $135

At $95

54-inch Chinese shawls of exquisite silk, lavishly hand-embroidered in most effective patterns. 20-knot, hand-tied fringes swish luxuriously over gown for opera or dance.

At 39.75

The woolen triangular "nosegay" shawls come straight to us from Venice, flaunting long fringes and novel designs in rich-hued yarns on black, white or colored grounds.

At 34.75

Also from Italy are dainty shawls of lustrous crepe de chine in colors to match even the newest frock. They have thick hand-tied silk fringes, 27 inches in length.

Shawls of such ravishing beauty are seldom seen in this country, and the opportunity to purchase them at prices so much below usual is likely never to occur again.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

December Nights a Succession of Debutante Balls

By Mme. X.

WITH balls and smaller dances galore, with even more dinners, with brilliant opera, with the opening the engagement of B. C. Whitney's company in Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," with the visit of that charming personality, Countess Karolyi, and its ensuing complications, with the second performance of the Allied Arts Inc. conceived and initiated by John Carpenter, Adolph Bolm, and Eric DeLamarter, Chicago's beau monde has had a gay and complete week since last Sunday's chronicle was posted on this p. p. p.

The two biggest balls of last week were the one given by Some Bachelors on Friday evening at the Congress hotel in the gold ballroom, and the other given by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Shaw last night in the crystal ballroom of the Blackstone in honor of their daughter, Miss Louise Tyler. Both were gay and thronged affairs. The debutantes of 1924 are having such a whirl as has seldom been seen here. Their number is a formidable one, and means a great many social functions in their honor. On the list of thirty debutantes which has arrived at my desk and which is not at all inclusive, there are fourteen balls, ten dinner dances, and any number of teas and tea dances to celebrate the arrival of these young things into the big arena.

One After Another.

Among the balls still ahead of the dancing set are the musical and ball at the Blackstone which Mrs John Jay Borland and Mr. and Mrs Chauncey Blair Borland are giving next Thursday evening for Miss Harriet Borland; the ball to be given on Dec. 12 by Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Morse for their daughter, Miss Martha Morse, at the Blackstone; the one Mr. and Mrs. Childs are giving for their daughter, Miss Claire Childs, on Dec. 19; the ball being given on Dec. 24 at the Blackstone by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kirk for their daughter, Miss Barbara Kirk (which will be a costume ball); the one which Mr. and Mrs. Warren Charles Fairbanks are giving for their daughter, Miss Edith Fairbanks, at the Blackstone on Dec. 20; the ball which is being given in honor of Miss Emilie Hoyt by her mother, Mrs. Phelps Hoyt, on Dec. 27 at the Blackstone; the one to be given by Mr and Mrs. Ralph C. Otis for their daughter, Miss Sarane Otis, on Dec. 26; the ball which the Curtises are giving for Miss Dorothy Curtis on Dec. 23; the one being given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Richardson, for Miss Bluford Richardson, and farthest off, as far as my incomplete calendar runs, is the one Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dunham are giving for Miss Josephine Dunham on Jan. 3.

This is by no means a complete list; it gives only an idea of the thick crop of buds and balls which is making this season one to be long remembered by every one, including caterers, et al.

Dancers in Bondage.

Apropos of balls and dancing generally, there is a custom in this country which is found nowhere else, and that is the business of cutting in. This has crept into use all over these fleet footed United States of ours. It means that a youth has to dance with a partner until some other fellow cuts in and takes her off his hands. This is fast degenerating into a bondage for the youthful dancers, both the girls and boys. The latter hesitate to ask a girl whom they may otherwise like very much for fear of "getting stuck," as they phrase it; while for the girls the situation is even more painful, as they have not the courage or savoir faire to say at the end of as long a time as they may enjoy the turn, "Please leave me with So-and-So."

It is not only a nervous and mental strain on the girls, it is also a physical strain. To be considered popular a girl must dance the whole evening through, with never a moment's pause. The young men may stop when they feel tired or don't want to go on stepping swiftly or slowly around a room piloting a partner through the crowds; but a girl feels that if she stops she will never be taken out again in the dance, and so keeps whirling on and on until the world becomes to her merely a confused whirl of rotating humanity.

What should be a gay and joyful affair is often for the young and sensitive turned into a nightmare by this foolish custom of cutting in. There should be some way of arranging it so neither a man nor a girl gets "stuck." To this end the old fashioned dance cards are the most efficient means. They secure to both partners a sense of freedom and safety.

Difficult to Excuse.

There is another thing that, while I am on the subject of the youth of the day and the way it takes its pleasures, is worth touching on, and that is the attire in which many members of the younger set of dance partners go to a ball.

As some one expressed it to me in speaking of a recent ball, "It was pretty and smart looking until near midnight, when the younger set came in, and after that it looked like nothing at all."

Further inquiry revealed the fact that this dimming of the luster and elegance of the affair was due to the wearing of dinner coats and black ties by the men of this late and young element. Of course, if a man cannot afford regulation evening dress, that is another question. But if he have such attire and yet goes to a ball in the useful, homely, informal dinner coat and gloomy black tie, then he should be called to account by his elders and asked why he commits such a gauche, boorish, provincial act. And if he have not the customary garments for a modern, expensive, chic ball, how much more dignified and self-respecting it were of him to stay away until such time as he had acquired by good hard work the wherewithal to purchase such attire.

It is because it reflects on Chicago society that I make this comment. A ballroom full of informally dressed men makes us look like nothing more or less than "a hick town"—and that is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth! Put that in your pipe, O youth of the beau monde, and smoke it. If I thought the majority of men who sport dinner coats could not possibly afford anything more suitable I would not talk so loud or so harshly, but I don't think so.

The girls all take so much pains with their appearance and attire that they merit more consideration than is accorded them by their contemporaries of the other sex. And what a pretty, fetching lot the young person of the feminine persuasion is today with her neatly shingled, well shaped little head, her graceful young form, and her lovely desire to believe that the world is a place made especially for her, but with the underlying feeling that perhaps it is not!

Each year they march from their homes, an army with banners, these maidens in their teens, with their heads a whirl of ologies and beaux. And from each home they are watched with mingled pride and alarm, and welcomed back at the end of the day's program with sympathetic interest in their experiences. And each crop is like its predecessors, and each season's gayeties like the froth on the top of the

MISS SARANE OTIS.
[Drake Studio Photo.]

MISS LOUISE MITCHELL.

Their youthful charm and attractiveness are only two of the reasons why this trio of society maids, Miss Janet Fairbank, Miss Sarane Otis, and Miss Louise Mitchell, are prominent in the social activities of their respective spheres.

Miss Janet Fairbank, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank of 1244 North State street, is to play the leading part in "The Golden Goose," the second of the children's plays being produced this winter by the Junior league on Saturday mornings at the Playhouse, which will have its première this week. Miss Fairbank is cast in the rôle of the village simpleton who is assigned impossible feats to perform in order to win the princess.

Miss Sarane Otis, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph C. Otis of 1352 Astor street, received the highest number of votes in a ballot cast by the legion of this year's debs to represent them as the fairest in their number at the recent Billboard ball. This bud had her coming out party on Nov. 14, and her parents and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph R. Richardson are to give a large ball at the Blackstone the night after Christmas for her and Miss Bluford Richardson.

Miss Mitchell is also to have one of the chief cast parts in "The Golden Goose." She will display her talents as the tyrannical King Gustav, who guards his daughter so zealously. Miss Mitchell is the daughter of the John J. Mitchells of 1550 State parkway.

sea's unceasing waves, and no more permanent.

Before leaving the subject of the winter's festivities, the ball which the Sunbeam league is giving next Friday evening at the Hotel La Salle must be included. This association is one that should appeal to all lovers of children. Its object is to provide and maintain kindergartens in the institutions run for sick, crippled, and dependent children. It has now equipped and founded these in the Cook county hospital, the Home for Destitute Crippled Children, Emerson house, and the Home for Convalescent Women and Children. Miss Cecile Murphy is president, Mrs. O. B. Johnson is chairman of the ball committee, and Mrs. Edward F. Bessey is chairman of arrangements.

In Pursuit of Celebrities.

The event of the week to a numerous contingent of Chicago women was the entertainment of the wife of the President of the United States. A big luncheon was the principal feature in a short and full program. It was given by the Women's Roosevelt Republican club last Thursday at the Congress hotel.

From now on for a few lines this column becomes the narrative of how this column turned into a flying buttress in a hunt for the Coolidges. Armed with an invitation from Mrs. Walter Brewster to be one of her regiment of ushers, the writer sped in a taxi to the Congress hotel. On reaching the field of battle, she found the passage from the imposing front entrance of this famous hostelry to the still more celebrated Peacock alley clogged with masses of large, voluminous females of every age and sex. In vain did she push and shove and worm her way through.

She got as far as the foot of the steps up to the gold ballroom when from above came down a voice saying, "We can let no more come up. It is already too full here."

Many a card of admittance was waved wildly in the air, but out the would-be usher slipped. On Michigan avenue, a friend on his way to the luncheon being given for the President at the Drake offered her a lift to that equally popular inn. "Aha!" she thought, "I can at least see the President." So in she hopped and up she sped. A comfortable seat in the main hall was quickly appropriated and she waited, watching the while every man she knew in Chicago arrive, welcomed by Alfred Hamill, Edward L. Ryerson Jr., Bruce Borland, Gen. Abel Davis, and the rest of the reception committee who pointed the way up the steps and to the main dining room.

The hands of all the Drake clocks, busy time pieces, went slowly round to the appointed time. Her eye was on the front entrance. The moment was already past when the news was flashed around the assemblage that the President had come in by another, more obscure way.

Once more the Coolidges had eluded this p. p. p. It was an overwhelming blow. It is just as well that the national election did not take place on Friday. How could you trust a man as head of the nation who could so successfully avoid so persistent a chronicler as the author of this weekly col.? So I cannot describe to you the personal appearance and characteristics of this distinguished, but evanescent couple. I have seen lions in Africa, kings and queens in England, even visited a murderer in his cell, but I have not, nor shall I ever, I fear, lay eyes on either President or Mrs. Coolidge.

Shaw's Saint Joan.

Last Monday evening saw the world and his wife turn out in goodly numbers to see the opening night of Bernard Shaw's latest satire, "Saint Joan," for in spite of its historical foundation this, like his other dramas, is merely the vehicle for his sardonic humor; and the various characters, the peasant maid of Domremy, the dauphin, the archbishop, the constable, soldiers and priests, are merely mouthpieces for the author's fierce contempt of his kind.

It was dramatic, interesting, even, at times, moving, but it was not Joan of Arc; it was not Baudricourt, Warwick, Poulanger; it was George Bernard Shaw who spoke through their personalities. If long winded, he is nevertheless always entertaining and stimulating. He pricks our vanities, follies and illusions, and we enjoy the pricking as we do a not too heavily wielded flesh brush.

Julia Arthur's interpretation of the Maid of Orleans is not just after the long accepted ideal of that victim of voices and visions. She made her more of a girl of the golden west than the impassioned mystic tradition has handed down to us. Perhaps it was truer to probabilities, but it jarred a deeply rooted ideal. The last act (not the epilogue) was done with extraordinary power and dramatic emotion.

One of the events of last week which I omitted to mention in my first paragraph résumé of striking events was the reception at the Arts club on Tuesday afternoon, which opened the annual exhibition of works by professional members. Thirty-eight artists, by which I mean painters, and four sculptors, all members of the club, were represented there, and the show was extremely interesting and well worth a visit.

A Club That's Different.

The women who are creating the Illinois Women's Athletic club, who are making it rise from the ground at the corner of Pearson and Rush streets and Tower court, are hard at work at this moment on a membership drive of intensive quality and extensive proportions. They have their headquarters in the America Fore building in Rush and Chestnut streets, just a few steps north of the site of the club that is to be, if all plans are carried out, the most remarkable one in the country. It is to be seventeen stories in height. The ground floor is to house some smart shops, intervening floors are to be offices; the topmost stories to be given over to the club.

The equipment for its many activities is to be the most complete imaginable. When it is finished it will make all men's athletic clubs sit up and take notice. It is to have, just for one feature, a running track. No other athletic club in this part of the land has a running track. It proposes to build a swimming pool up on the roof which shall be large enough for an Olympian contest with four swimmers at a time sweeping side by side from one end of the tank to the other. At present, according to Mrs. E. R. Fifield, there is no indoor swimming pool that is large enough to provide a battleground for Olympian contestants. Our champion swimmers have to go abroad to show their prowess.

There are to be indoor tennis, golf, and racket courts; also billiard rooms and a bowling alley. Perfectly equipped Turkish baths and beauty parlors will add the feminine touch to this muscle developing enterprise. I can see the ancient Greeks, who did so much to create and develop a beautiful race, put quite in the shade if the members of this enterprising club use all its possible advantages in the years to come. It ought to raise the average of health and looks of the members so they will be living examples of the advantages of such a club.

There will also be attractively furnished bedrooms and living quarters both for members and for out of town guests. The ballroom will be one of the most spacious and charming in Chicago. There is to be a first class restaurant, as well as a library, writing room, lounge, and card rooms. A sun parlor under the glassed-in roof will be a delightful place for afternoon tea. In short, it promises to be, when completed, a truly remarkable institution.

Higher and Higher.

The promoters of it are planning it on businesslike lines. Members may come in now for much less than they will be able to do a year from now. Each added floor of the club as it goes up will raise the initiation fees. The annual dues will never go above $50, but the entrance charge will soar as the structure soars. It is expected that the returns from renting the first seven stories of offices will help to run the club as well as pay off the initial indebtedness. It is expected that the total cost will be about $3,500,000.

What would our immediate forbears think of a band of women undertaking to put through such a mighty project as this? But they are going to do it and do it successfully, too. They already have 1,700 members, 750 of whom they got in during a membership drive last June. They want 3,000 members.

Mrs. Fifield, who is chairman of the drive committee, is giving a tea tomorrow afternoon at the Ambassador hotel from 2 to 5 o'clock, when Mrs. Medill McCormick will speak and Mrs. Charles Borsch will sing. The president of the club is Mrs. M. J. Seifert. Mrs. Fifield is vice president. Among other well known women who have already joined are Mrs. Frederic Upham, Mrs. Robert R. McCormick, Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. Orville Babcock, Mrs. Medill McCormick, Mrs. J. M. Patterson, and Mrs. Weymouth Kirkland.

One feature I had almost forgotten amused me a great deal; and that is that a waiting room for husbands is to be included in the layout of the club.

Said one of the women: "When I think of the hours I have waited for my husband at his club, that waiting room for husbands seems to me rather sweet."

Schmidt, Garden & Martin are the architects of the building, which will be of a Venetian cast of countenance as far as that type of architecture can be said to give its name to a seventeen story structure. It is an effective style, and the designs of the building are most attractive both inside and out. It will be a great addition to that part of the city, a venerable section of the town which is changing its character so much that none of its original inhabitants would recognize it were they to return nowadays. The water works tower, that ancient relic of a simple hearted era when Tudor was considered the most picturesque form of building, is one of the quaintest, most interesting features of North Michigan avenue. It will look quite dwarfed when the Women's Athletic club is finished.

Represents Russian Refugees.

Mesdames Linn and Clow, who are running "Au Paradis," the smart little shop on Rush street, with whose profits they hope to endow some charity, is opening its doors tomorrow and Tuesday to help along a quite famous Russo-American woman, a descendant on one side from a former American ambassador and on the other of an ancient Russian strain, a family who were leaders when those hordes of obscure origin streamed out of central Asia and settled on the wild wastes of central Russia.

She calls herself for this enterprise Mme. Yteb, though she is the daughter of Baron Heyningen Huene, an equerry to Emperor Nicholas II. of Russia and colonel in the Russian horse guards at the time he met charming Miss Anne Lothrop of Detroit when her father was our ambassador at what was then the most brilliant and gay court in Europe, that of the czars at St. Petersburg, Russia. This Mme. Yteb, Baroness Betty, was made by the late czarina one of her maids of honor, which gave her the privilege of wearing the czarina's initials in a diamond monogram. At the beginning of the war she became, like so many of the court ladies of Russia, a trained nurse. She was the wife of Baron Wrangel, who was so prominent during and after the revolution as the head of an expedition against the bolsheviki. She was, of course, obliged to flee from Russia to save her life, and although she wanted to join the French Red Cross she had instead to sew for her living.

In this way—and here is where her inheritance of American business ability and initiative helped her—she got in contact with many Russian women situated as she was, and was able to organize them into a body of workers to support themselves and their families. She is coming here in the interests of this band of refugees with the products of their handiwork to show us Americans what they are doing in their struggle for the bare means of existence. Mrs. Linn and Mrs. Clow are giving her their enchanting little shop for this purpose.

Mme. Yteb has had a wide experience of life, having spent some of her childhood in Detroit with her American cousins at Detroit's fashionable summer place, Grosse Point, and the rest of it in Russia's semi-barbaric and quite feudal life in town and country. She is accompanied on this trip by her cousin, the Princess Xana Shallkoff Kalkoff. Both are attractive women, blonde in type and a mixture of Russian and American in appearance and spirit.

As some of the prettiest, most chic women in Chicago are to serve her as mannequins tomorrow, it ought to be an interesting spectacle to those who are interested in Russians, smart frocks, and good looking society women. Among them will be Mrs. William Mitchell Blair, Mrs. Leander McCormick, Mrs. David Forgan Jr., Mrs. Russell Forgan, Mrs. Lucius P. Ordway, Mrs. Charles Cushing, Mrs. John R. Winterbotham Jr., Mrs. Lester Armour, Miss Lois Kellogg, Miss Louise Mitchell, Miss Helen Hoyne, and Miss Frances Heyworth. Mrs. Lowell Chapin has been interesting herself in promoting Mme. Yteb here. She met her in Biarritz, and crossed the ocean on the same steamer with her.

Here from England.

Among the interesting visitors here at the moment who is being much fêted in Chicago is Mrs. Alister McCormick's mother, Mrs. Melton Ashley, who is staying at the Pearson hotel. She has come for a comparatively short stay, as she spends the cold months on the Riviera, making Paris and London her headquarters during the less inclement part of the year. Mrs. Alister McCormick entertained her at luncheon last Thursday at the Casino, and Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick is giving a luncheon for her also at the Casino tomorrow.

Tonight Miss Mary Sandall is the guest of the Casino at supper, after which she will give a talk on "The Trail of Charm." Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, who has been housed for ten days with a severe cold, is making her first appearance tonight at the club to preside over the meeting which is calling out a representative assemblage of the members of the Casino.

The first of the two assembly balls, which are as stately and important as any of the winter's social functions, takes place next Friday evening at the Congress hotel in the gold ball room. The night before that, as already stated, is the date for the musical and ball which Mrs. John Jay Borland and her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Blair Borland, are giving in the Blackstone's crystal ballroom in honor of Miss Harriet Borland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Borland. Besides these two important events there are a number of others. So wags the world away, to what end who shall say?

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Arche Club Aids Fund for World's Fair Building

By Kate Webber.

SEVERAL achievements adorn the record of the Arché club, which, with a membership of 600 women, is one of the largest, most active, and most public spirited organizations in the second district of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs:

The outstanding act of the club, and one which it feels pardonable pride, is the establishment of a fund for the first panel in the reconstruction of the Fine Arts building in Jackson park. The Arché is the first club to start such a fund, and also was among the first in the movement to urge preservation of the art palace of the Columbian exposition. In the work of enlisting public interest the club has had the coöperation of clubs in the second district.

Mrs. Harry Mathew Boon has entered upon her second term as president of the club, which is having one of its most interesting years as to programs. Through the work of the various departments, the members have the cultural advantages of classes in art, music, and literature, in addition to the presentation of matters of civic interest by informed speakers.

Substantial appropriations have been and are made to several affiliated organizations, and philanthropic work has an important place in the work of the members. The young woman's auxiliary also contributes toward the success of the club's activities both within the organization and in the community.

The club was founded in 1888 with eighteen women as charter members The present membership is 600, and there is a waiting list.

The other officers are Mrs. Benjamin J. Buckingham and Mrs. Albion L. Headburg, vice presidents; Mrs. Edith C. Ross, recording secretary; Mrs. Walter S. MacArthur, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William A. Thirlwall, treasurer.

MISS ALICE GREENACRE.
[Chambers Photo.]

MRS. EDWARD F. BESSEY.

MRS. HARRY M. BOON.

Miss Alice Greenacre, president of the Chicago Alumnæ Club of the University of Chicago, will preside at the first meeting of the season, to be held on Tuesday evening at the Art institute. Miss Gertrude Emerson, a graduate of the university, who has twice encircled the world, will speak on "The Buried City of Angkor." Miss Emerson's father was formerly archæologist at the Art institute.

Mrs. Edward F. Bessey, a member of the board of directors of the Sunbeam league, will assist in making a success of the annual charity ball of that popular organization, to be held on Friday evening at the Hotel La Salle. The proceeds will be used in furthering the work among children in several of the city's hospitals which the Sunbeam league has carried on for many years.

Mrs. Harry Mathew Boon is serving her second term as president of the Arché club, an account of its history being given in today's columns. The club has the distinction of being the first woman's organization to take active steps toward the restoration of the Columbian Fine Arts building.

MISS BERTHA A. KOMISS.

Miss Bertha Amy Komiss is in charge of arrangements for the fourth annual dance of the B. M. Z. juniors, to be held next Sunday evening at the Hotel Sherman. Miss Rose Harris is chairman of the ticket sales.

Club Ethics

By Maude Swalm Evans.

THERE was a pause in the conversation at the lunch table. The ex-president adjusted her eyeglasses and extracted a paper from her hand bag.

"I was looking over the year books of various women's clubs the other day," she began, "and I was greatly interested in the pledges and mottoes and sentiments I found printed on the first pages. I copied some of them for your edification. This first pledge is a favorite. It was repeated in half a dozen books:

"'Holding sacred and worthy of unfailing loyalty my membership in the Blank Woman's club, I will sustain its good works and guard its reputation.'

"Here's one that's encouraging to some of our weak sisters: 'There is a beauty in willingness, even when we can't meet expectations.'

"And this is especially appropriate: 'There are two things that are incumbent upon every woman who joins a club—recognition of duty and a right spirit in the treatment of club details.'

"I guess that I like this one best of all: 'It takes more refinement of soul to discover beauty than to detect flaws.'

"What do you think of this: 'If you can't push, pull; if you can't pull, please get out of the way.'"

"Lovely!" chuckled the secretary. 'I'm strong for that club."

"Here's another snappy one: 'The elevator to success is not running—take the stairs.'"

"I belonged to a down-state civic club once that had just 'Toot' for its motto," reminisced the member of long standing. "The members tooted so loud that they had the public officials lying awake nights trying to think of some new way to be honest."

"All these sentiments show the effort that the club women are making to find the ideal in club conduct," mused the philosophical member.

"What's bothering me," complained the unmarried member, "is why we never hear of club men making any effort to capture that ideal."

"They don't need to, darling," vouchsafed her next door neighbor.

· ART AND ARTISTS ·

Annual Exhibit by Professionals on View at Arts Club

By Inez Cunningham.

IF you have in your mind, conscious or subconscious, the word "amateur" in connection with the annual exhibition of members of the Arts club, go and be pleasantly disappointed, because the exhibition is by professional members only and the word that seems to connect itself with it more fittingly in my mind is "progress."

In its way, it is as much a page in one's art experience as was the recent exhibition of American paintings and the lecture by Forbes Watson that supplemented it. It is like going into the studios of forty-one Chicago artists and being allowed to see what they have done, wherein they have improved, and what they have been thinking for the last year—a small window looking into the great arena of art in America.

There are a number of the pictures which are skilfully painted, notably the portrait of Miss Elizabeth Cudahy by Cecil Clark Davis, whose work is always delightful. There are several pictures with soul, if that word may be permitted, and imagination, notably the panel by Agnes Squire Potter. Easily the most interesting picture in the exhibition, it is decorative without being dulcet. The green hills, for all their velvet finish, the little distant city at the end of the climbing road, the Christmas sheep, and the flowers that never bloomed on land or sea, all make one feel the pastoral poem one is meant to feel and it touches one with magic of remembered beauty.

Pauline Palmer's "The Musician" is her best work. I remember once deploring that a clever artisan like Mrs. Palmer should be occupied with sentiment rather than with life, but when I looked at her picture yesterday I thought of the vast hordes of persons who went to see Valentino in "Monsieur Beaucaire" and how few of them had ever read the book. I thought of how I loathed the movie because the delicious flavor that Tarkington gave Beaucaire was entirely lost in the picture—couldn't be anything but lost in the maze of movie ways—and I wondered what my quarrel was about. After all, what right have I to say that the flavor of Tarkington is better than the flavor of Valentino? Certainly it doesn't nourish as many people.

The pretty-pretties have their place in life, I have found, and a not inconspicuous one, especially at Christmas time. A man I know once said affectionately that his wife was made up of saint and child and Indian. Mrs. Palmer paints for wives and for the men who know what wives are made of.

Two bits of sculpture scheduled for the exhibition, one by Nancy Cox McCormick and the other by Alfeo Faggi, have not arrived, but will be visible early next week.

The following are exhibitors in the show: Jean C. Adams, Edith J. Bacon, Marie Blanke, Mary Lock Brewer, Elizabeth Browning, Anita Burnham, Nell Coover, Cecil Clark Davis, Hekga Dean, Wallace De Wolf, Katherine Dudley, Dulah Evans, Jessie Evans, Mrs. Heman Field, Gerald Frank, Lucie Hartrath, Magda Heuermann Conde Wilson Hikok, Bertha Jaques, Blanche Kerr, Mable Kay, Irwin Myers, Pauline Palmer, Fanny Pope, Agnes Squire Potter, Grace Redfield, Josephine Reichmann, Esther Roth, Anna Stacey, Elizabeth Telling, Carolyn Tyler, Mabel Wakem, Margarita Weaver, Carl Werntz, Tennessee Anderson, and Sylvia Judson.

Yesterday the office of Thomas Wood Stevens, the director of the new school of the theater, to be opened at the Art institute on Jan. 5, had much the appearance of a booking office, so many and so varied were the aspirants already come to be enrolled.

To each and every one Mr. Stevens assumes the appearance of a kindly sphinx, and then, unlike that image, he makes answer, "Come on the morning of Jan. 5, put in your probationary week of work, and we shall see."

For the working company that will go into action and history as the first of the Kenneth Sawyer Goodman Memorial theater will be the survival of the fit. Any one eligible for college entrance examinations is eligible to the probation, which will be a week of strenuous work, beginning at 9 in the morning and ending at 5 in the afternoon.

Mr. Stevens is receiving the applicants for probation in his office in the Art institute every afternoon from 3 until 5.

Yesterday, in a lull, he took me down through the dust and wind of Monroe street to where the theater is building. For a moment it was like projecting oneself ten centuries ahead and being shown the ruins of a little building in Chicago probably pronounced in 2924 "Khicako" where the great American art of the drama had its birth. Here were steel girders red with what might have been rust, window spaces filled with wooden supports, and men wheeling barrows full of what might well have been rubble.

A sad thought, will you say? No! A glorious one and a prophetic. For surely the drama in America is no more than in a period of gestation, and where could be a better mother for any art than this young strong city born of pioneer on a prairie?

As Mr. Stevens talked about the theater it was like having Pygmalion construct Galatea on a skeleton, for here where the girder formed an ell would be the lights and here a property room; here the wardrobe, there the carpenter shop. And now we are looking into the proscenium arch, and between those pillars will be the little balcony, and right here is the only bad seat in the house, and even from here one can see all the stage. The walls are paneled oak, much like the Booth theater.

There it stands, habilitated, amber lighted, and one is sitting in the fourth row center waiting for the curtain to go up—on the drop perhaps that one has designed oneself—then December blows a cinder in one's eye the girders are all about, the workmen bawl a ribaldry in Italian and it is hard to believe in April the dream will come true. But one knows it will, for this is the age of miracles.

Hesketh Hubbard, a British artist well known in this country for his valuable work as collector of prints for various museums in the east, has suggested that once a year an international art exhibition be held one year in London—one in Paris—one in New York—and so on. As a beginning he has interested a number of the best known artists in London, and in the near future he will be in New York, where he will try to further the plan.

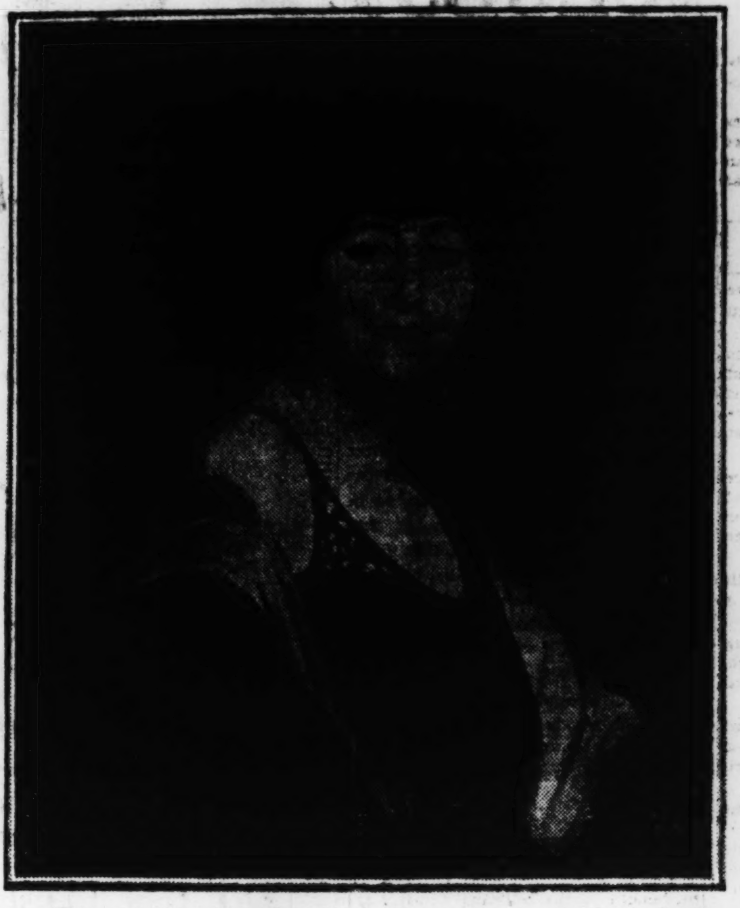
At community house, Winnetka, Hugo Van Hofsten is now exhibiting a number of his paintings, among which are those which gained for him official recognition from the Swedish government.



This portrait of Miss Elizabeth Cudahy by Cecil Clark Davis is in the exhibition by professional members of the Arts club.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS · WORLD

Pastors to Speak Today for Near East Relief Fund

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

TODAY is Golden Rule Sunday, by proclamation of the President of the United States, in coöperation with twenty-four nations which have officially indorsed the object of the day. This object is the raising of at least $5,000,000 for the relief of the children and dependents in Bible land countries known as the near east.

The near east relief organization is now caring for 50,000 orphan children and the money solicited will continue this work until the children are able to care for themselves. It is estimated there are 305,000 children in refugee camps who need assistance in providing for simple necessities which the near east relief cannot help with its present income.

All of the various church denominations have indorsed the work of the near east relief organization. In many pulpits today pastors will present the cause. The chairman of the Illinois committee is former Gov. Frank O. Lowden, and the chairman of the Chicago committee is Wyllys W. Baird. George M. Reynolds is treasurer; F. J. Michel, executive secretary.

The national Presbyterian conference will begin on Tuesday evening at the Fourth Presbyterian church, 126 East Chestnut street, and will close on Friday evening. The four boards of the church, which supervise the work formerly done by sixteen boards, will be represented. The entire work of the Presbyterian church at home and abroad will be considered. The general council of the church, on which are the present moderator and two previous moderators and representatives of all the boards and of the general church, will be in session in connection with the conference, and its members will take part in the discussions. The national conference will have, it is expected, 500 delegates and many visitors and will compare in leadership with the Presbyterian general assembly.

The Irving Park Disciples church, Collins and Kildare avenues, the Rev. R. C. Lemon, pastor, has voted to erect a new church building at a cost of $75,000.

THE REV. JOHN TIMOTHY STONE, D. D., LL. D.
[Koehne Photo.]

After more than fifteen years' service as pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, Chestnut street and North Michigan boulevard, in which the church membership has grown to 2,600 and the church plant to $1,000,000, with an endowment of more than $500,000, an annual budget of over $200,000, nearly equally divided between running expenses and benevolences, with twenty-six paid workers, Dr. John Timothy Stone has been granted a leave of nine months. He will start next Thursday on a tour of the world, accompanied by Mrs. Stone and their daughter, Katharine.

Dr. Stone is in perfect health and in the full strength of powers as pastor and preacher and hopes to return to his pastorate for years more of active leadership. He has received repeated invitations to leave Chicago, notably the offer to go to First church, New York, and lead in the consolidation of three church in 1918, but he has declined in the belief that Chicago presents the supreme opportunity for his ministry.

Dr. Stone has received almost every honor the church could bestow. He was moderator of the Presbyterian general assembly in 1913-'14, the highest elective office in his church, and for three years was chairman of the committee on reorganization and consolidation of the benevolent boards, and carried through the general assembly the acceptance of the committee's report. He is a graduate of Amherst college and Auburn Theological seminary. He was granted the degree of D. D. from two colleges, S. T. D. from one (Columbia university), and LL. D. from three colleges. He is the author of six books and a constant writer for the current religious press.

Dr. Stone and his family will sail from Vancouver, B. C., Dec. 19 and will visit Japan, China, India, Siam, returning by Europe on the Empress of Russia, Dr. Stone being a delegate to the universal conference on life and work in Stockholm, Sweden, in August. He is due in New York on Sept. 15.

Today has been named by the American Bible society as Bible day, and the cause will be presented in many pulpits. L. T. M. Slocum is president of the Chicago Bible society and chairman of the executive committee of the Northwestern agency of the American Bible society. He was recently elected to this position as successor to the late G. S. Mackenzie.

Mr. Slocum has lived in Chicago forty-five years. He is first vice president of the C. F. Adams company and actively identified with several societies and institutions of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The Bible has been translated into 770 languages and dialects. A portion without comment is broadcast every day except Sunday at 1:30, eastern time, from radio station WGBS, New York.

The Rev. Harry More Babin, rector of St. Martin's Episcopal church, Austin, has accepted a call to become rector of Trinity church, 26th street and Michigan avenue, and will begin his new duties on Dec. 31. He will succeed the Rev. Frederick C. Grant, D. D., who resigned to become dean of Bexley Hall Divinity school, Gambier, O. The Rev. Mr. Babin is a graduate of Bexley Hall (B. D.) and of Kenyon college (B. A.) He served for four years as rector of St. Luke's church, Dixon, Ill., and for four years at St. Martin's.

The Presbyterian union will hold a banquet tomorrow evening at the Hotel La Salle. Dr. Samuel Angus of Australia will speak on "Christianity for the New Age," and Dr. John Timothy Stone, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, will speak on "Chicago's Chance." This will be the farewell message of Dr. Stone before starting for a tour of the world.

THE REV. ALBERT W. PALMER.

The Rev. Albert W. Palmer begins his pastorate today of the First Congregational church, Oak Park, as the successor of Dr William E. Barton, who resigned on Aug. 31 last after completing twenty-five years of service. Next Thursday evening First church will give the new pastor a welcome in which the entire community will participate.

Dr. Palmer is known in Chicago as a speaker at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall and to the Congregationalists of the nation because of previous pastorates and his work as pastor of Central church, Honolulu, Hawaii, from which he comes to Oak Park after a pastorate there of seven years. Dr. Palmer is a graduate of Yale university class of '04. He had a conspicuous pastorate at Plymouth church, Oakland, Cal., where he served ten years and increased the church membership from 116 to 800 and erected a new church building. During the war he was secretary of Y. M. C. A. work on the Pacific coast and visited Siberia in the interests of cantonment work.

Central church, Honolulu, has 1,400 members and is the strongest church in the Sandwich islands. In addition to the main church building there are five separate bungalows in which the separate sections of the church school meet. There is a parish house, outdoor auditorium, and a swimming pool. The plant cost more than $500,000. Dr. Palmer is the author of "The Mountain Trail and Its Message," "The Drift Towards Religion," and "The Human Side of Hawaii."

First church, Oak Park, has 1,700 members and an equipment spacious and complete.

The Episcopal Church club will have a dinner on Thursday evening at the Allerton club, North Michigan avenue and Huron street. There will be several speakers, who will discuss the subject of church publicity and plans for the coming year. Thomas K. Carpenter is president.

The Rev. Paul Bull, priest of the Community of the Resurrection, Mirfield, Yorkshire, England, will preach today at the Episcopal Church of the Atonement, Kenmore and Ardmore avenues. Father Bull came to America as lecturer in the General Theological seminary, New York. His appearance at Atonement will be his only one in Chicago. He is recognized as one of the outstanding preachers of today.

Chief of Police Morgan Collins will speak to the Congregational ministers at their regular union meeting tomorrow at 11 o'clock in Association building, 19 South La Salle street.

Dr. O. W. Buschgen of Philadelphia, director of promotion for the board of Christian education for the Presbyterian church, will open a ten days' campaign in the city of Lake Forest for endowment funds for Lake Forest college and will preach on "Christian Education" at the First Presbyterian church on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The movement will be a part of the Illinois synod's $3,000,000 campaign for six Presbyterian educational institutions, of which Lake Forest is one. Louis F. Swift is chairman of the executive committee for the campaign.

A special Bach organ concert will be given by Edward Rechlin of New York in St. John's Lutheran church, Hoyne avenue and Walton place, tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. Mr. Rechlin is well known as the best interpreter of Bach.

The Most Rev. Archbishop Lloyd will advance to the priesthood in St. Cecilia's chapel of the Garrick Theater building the Rev. Linton Wilson next Sunday morning at 10:30. The Rev. Mr. Wilson has been working under his grace's commission in Akron, O., where, as priest and rector, he will return after his ordination. The ordination sermon will be preached by the Rev. D. C. Hinton, D. D., chancellor of the archdiocese.

Ouch! Lumbago!
Rub Backache Away

Kidneys cause backache! No! Your backache is caused by lumbago, rheumatism or a strain, and the quickest relief is soothing, penetrating St. Jacobs Oil. Rub it right on your painful back, and instantly the soreness, stiffness and lameness disappears. Don't stay crippled! Get a 35-cent bottle of St. Jacobs Oil from your druggist. A moment after it is applied you'll wonder what became of the backache or lumbago pain.

In use for 65 years for lumbago, backache, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism or sprains. Absolutely harmless. Doesn't burn the skin.

If your favorite sport is not listed—come anyway, you'll surely find it here. This, the World's Greatest Winter Resort, is built along the shore of beautiful Biscayne Bay and the Atlantic Ocean, with a background of Palms—both coconut and royal—and tropical fruit-groves of orange, grapefruit, avocado and many others. Much tropical foliage and gorgeous flowers which radiate their mysterious beautiful color combinations in this land of mild climate.

Everything is different here. Miami is 500 miles south of Los Angeles with a milder climate and a greater variety and profusion of palms and tropical foliage.

Play, frolic and fun they're in the air here throughout the winter. Our 250,000 annual visitors come for health, pleasure and recreation. Here you meet the Governor of Missouri or Massachusetts, the Banker from Chicago or New York, the elite society of Newport, New York or Chicago, or the President of the United States. They all ENJOY MIAMI—the World's Greatest Winter Resort.

This sunshine pays dividends

Thousands of residents of Tucson are investors in Sunshine.

They have made sacrifices, have left old friends and business behind so that they might come to Tucson and invest in the greatest thing in the world—Health!

And their investment is paying them dividends—big dividends. They are making new friends, they are seeing new and interesting sights, but most important of all they are finding HEALTH.

Come to Tucson

Tucson's is emphatically a restorative climate. Here, throughout the glorious winter, there is warm sunshine, pure dry air, and no snow or heavy rains. Ample opportunity for outdoor life—golf, tennis, horseback riding, motoring—all paying dividends in health.

If you are "worn out," suffering from "nerves," "overwork," asthma, bronchial or pulmonary trouble, etc., a small investment in Tucson's Sunshine-Climate will pay you dividends for years to come.

Miami Beach Is Calling You

from frost and snow and biting blasts to five miles of beautiful beach, balmy Gulf Stream breezes and the blue Atlantic in which you can wade knee-deep in June in January, February and March.

Miami Beach Is Calling You to share its wealth of happiness and health in homes, apartments and hotels, unsurpassed in any other resort in the world.

Miami Beach Is Calling You

to dance out of doors in midwinter under swaying palms in tropical tea gardens and under starlit Southern skies on its rose-bowered roofs, as down the moon-glide on the bay moves Love in a gondola, a bit of old Venice, gondolier and all.

Miami Beach Is Calling You

to recreation—Golf, Polo, Tennis, Motor Boating, Yachting, Fishing and all sorts of fun in the playground of society.

But most important of all,

Miami Beach Is Calling You

not only to play but to stay down by the sea, where the cocoanuts grow and where all the year through it's always joyous June.

Miami Is Located

more than five hundred miles nearer the equator than Los Angeles. This, the farthest south on the mainland of the United States, is the nation's most tropical community, known as "the land of palms and sunshine," and heralded as "the world's greatest winter resort."

Favored by nature with a marine climate, Miami has the distinction of having the lowest maximum and the highest minimum temperature of any city on the mainland of the United States. Weather bureau records show an average of more than three hundred and sixty days every year in which the sun shines. The foliage is evergreen, flowers always blooming, and throughout the year every summertime sport is enjoyed. In the community of which Miami is the center there are eight sporty golf courses, a million dollar horse racing plant, dog races, Jai Alai (fast Spanish ball game), fifty tennis courts, polo fields, horseback riding, trap shooting, and a host of other games and pastimes. In the waters nearby one catches the sportiest of the game fish. On beautiful Biscayne Bay there is ample opportunity for motor boating and sailing, one of the favorite pastimes. Sixty per cent of the finest yachts in America are anchored each winter in these protected waters.

There are one hundred and fourteen modern hotels, medium priced ones and also exclusive hostelries with extensive tropical gardens. There are more than three hundred and fifty fine apartment houses, built for comfort and convenience. More than five thousand furnished cottages are available for lease by the season or the year.

For evening entertainment there are casinos and gay oriental pavilions with wonderful orchestras, where dancing is enjoyed. There are theaters and musical entertainments. One can dance also in the magnificent ballrooms of hotels, on spacious verandas, or in tropical bowers out of doors beneath the palms.

The season is now on, and the invitation to come for rest, recreation or relaxation is extended to all. Miami is a modern city with well equipped stores, with hospitable people, who have prepared an elaborate entertainment program to please every taste and satisfy every desire.

CRUISES

Round South America

A brand-new voyage, sailing on the 20,000-ton "Resolute", Jan. 24, 1925, and making the entire round of the romantic Southern Continent. A golden opportunity. ($925 & up).

The Mediterranean

A truly unusual Mediterranean Cruise, visiting ports included in no other cruise-route, and consequently offering a number of new and remarkable shore excursions. Sails Feb. 5, on the "Samaria" ($875 & up).

West Indies

Our West Indies Cruises are pre-eminent. The list of ports is very comprehensive. The cruise-ship—S.S. "Reliance"—is the largest ever to cruise the Caribbean. Every single shore excursion is included in the cruise-price—an unprecedented feature. A fortnight's cruise—Jan 13. ($175 & up). Two four-weeks' cruises—Jan. 31 and Feb. 28. ($375 & up). Send for booklet.

Summer in the MEDITERRANEAN

Our Summer Mediterranean Cruise follows a route unequaled for variety. S.S. "Oronsay," June 27. ($675 & up)

Midnight Sun Cruise, S.S. "Franconia," June 30 ($725 & up)

1925 Round the World Cruise (including Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania). S.S. "Carinthia", Oct. 10. ($2000 & up).

California
AND HAWAII

Nineteen comprehensive tours leaving the East frequently from December to May. The sightseeing, most of which is done by automobile, is significantly complete. The routes include New Orleans, Apache Trail, Grand Canyon, Yosemite, Honolulu, Kilauea, the great California resorts, etc. Send for booklet.

Service for Every Traveler

If you do not wish to travel "with escort" let us arrange your trip for you—all manner of accommodations procured in advance in America or Europe. Send for our "Guides to Travel" or, Mich. We treat successfully in all its forms. Booklet free. A. N. MICHELSON, RYNO, HOUSE PHYSICIAN.

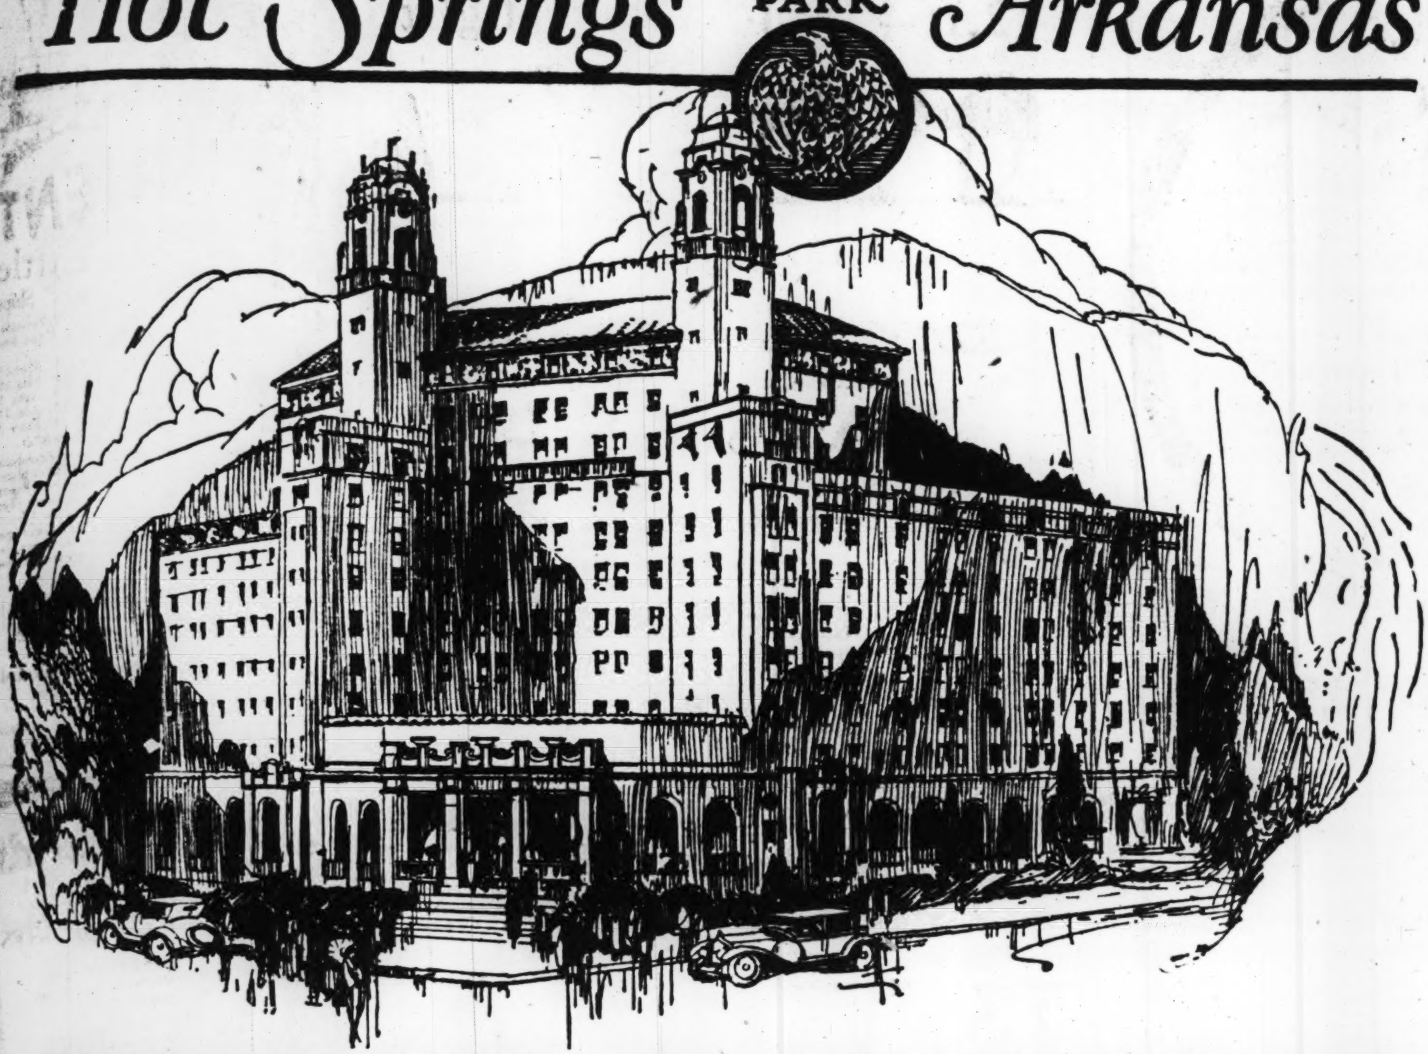
Hot Springs NATIONAL PARK Arkansas



The New ARLINGTON Hotel

Dispensing hospitality according to Southern tradition at its best, Hot Springs' magnificent addition to the world's famous resort hostelries will be open to guests December twentieth, anticipating the formal opening, Wednesday, December thirty-first. Radiating a full measure of the same genial atmosphere responsible for the old Arlington's popularity, the new extends to the traveling public a hearty invitation to visit The Nation's Health Resort.

The Hotel

The keynote among a galaxy of attractive features of the New Arlington is that of luxurious comfort. Indeed, every detail essential to mental relaxation and physical well-being has been minutely anticipated. Guest rooms are sumptuous in decorations and furnishings. Library and lounges afford the pleasurable seclusion of a private home in which to enjoy the morning paper, a quiet smoke or a chat with friends. Roof gardens on either wing give easy access to the open air, where a promenade and commanding view of the picturesque Ozarks may be enjoyed without effort. Social activities center around the large ballroom, main dining salon and bizarre palm garden with its splashing cascade fountain—all enhanced by the strains of a metropolitan orchestra of national repute.

—and Baths

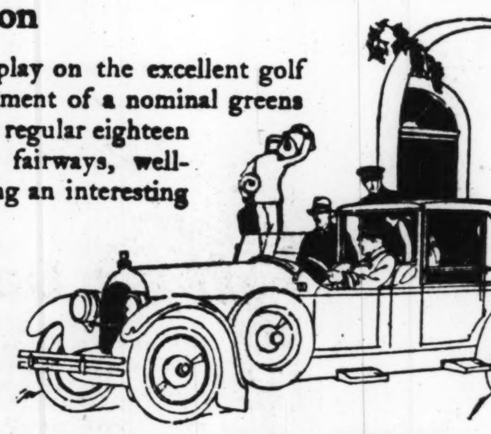
To those who visit the Valley of Vapors in search of health, the New Arlington bath house will especially appeal. Occupying space, the equivalent of two floors in the central wing of the hotel, it is conveniently reached by a private elevator, opening off each floor. This arrangement brings the benefits of Hot Springs' famous healing waters within a step of each guest room and affords direct access without the necessity of dressing for the street. In equipment, the bath house includes many recent developments for the application of scientific bath treatment. Water is supplied from the original Arlington spring in Hot Springs mountain, enthusiastically favored by former patrons. As in the instance of all bath houses, this department is under the control of the United States Government.

Broadcasting Station

Recognizing the importance of Hot Springs as Uncle Sam's first National Park, the New Arlington has installed a powerful broadcasting station which will occupy a prominent place on the daily radio programs of the nation. Included in its schedule will be three concerts each week during the winter season, by the hotel's splendid orchestra, as well as many entertainment features of popular interest.

Sports and Recreation

Guests at the New Arlington are privileged to play on the excellent golf course of the Hot Springs Country Club on payment of a nominal greens fee. A supplementary nine holes in addition to the regular eighteen provide ample accommodations. Bermuda grass fairways, well-trapped greens and sporty natural hazards, including an interesting water hole, make this one of the best courses in the Southwest. Here, too, under Southern sunny skies and a springtime atmosphere, are numerous tennis courts, good roads for motoring and horseback, while the pine-clad hills beckon the cross country hiker. Bird and duck shooting in season are easily accessible.



Said a famous author: "I go to Hot Springs, not because I am an invalid, but because I do not want to be one." Indeed, a stay at Hot Springs and the New Arlington will be a delightful adventure in contentment. Through sleeper connections at all gateway points and reduced round trip fares throughout the year.

Rates and attractively illustrated de luxe booklet describing the New Arlington, the baths and the Hot Springs region will be sent promptly, on request.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Executives and Managers.

WANTED— EXECUTIVE SALESMEN FOR BRANCH MANAGERS.

One of the oldest and most reputable manufacturers of warm air furnaces desires high grade executives and salesmen to manage its branch offices in and around Chicago. This is a good opportunity for honest and conservative men of ability to make a connection that will prove prosperous and permanent. The men we want must have had four or five years' sales experience with one concern, preferably selling pianos, sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, separators, or oil burners.

When we find such a man we will virtually set him up in business.

We will pay all expenses, give him a drawing account, and at the end of the year give him a share of the retail profits. We will carry his accounts, assist in installations, and help him in every way possible.

This is an opportunity for a man who now is in an unprofitable job, who is not properly situated, and not the commercial drifter type. The men we want are now probably employed and between 30 and 40 years of age.

In your reply outline your sales experience, your education, and any other qualifications. Correspondence will be held in strict confidence.

ADDRESS D O 392, TRIBUNE.

READY-TO-WEAR MAIL ORDER MAN.

We have an opening for a man who understands the men's ready to wear mail order clothing business; some one who has had plenty of experience in a mail order house and understands the filling of orders and can organize and run a department, giving close supervision to all details of it. The opening we have is one of big possibilities and will require much more than average ability and initative. This position is one that should attract the attention of a first class man with real executive ability—none other need apply. Call if convenient or write, giving full details. No inquiries will be made without your permission. Phone Monroe 7120 for appointment or address President, MEYER & CO., 831 W. Adams-st.

BUYER.

Cotton goods, domestics, flannelettes, and ginghams. Thoroughly experienced man wanted for large Chicago store. Give following information in first letter; name of present and all former employers; length of time with each, and in what capacity. State age, married or single, and salary required. Position open January or Feb. 1st; confidential. Address D O 409, Tribune.

BUYERS AND MANAGERS WANTED.

We have several openings for men who are qualified by past experience to take charge of specialty women's stores and departments.

We are considered to be a most worth while organization to be connected with and these opportunities are unusual ones.

If you know the retail business, know how to make attractive displays, train sales force, are clean cut, honest, and ambitious, write us in detail.

Your letter will be read by the head of the firm and treated in the strictest of confidence. To receive consideration you must give full details as to past experience, mentioning connections for the past six or more years. Address D A 286, Tribune.

DEPARTMENT MANAGER.

A well known electrical appliance manufacturer requires an executive to manage an established dept., doing an annual business of $150,000, in large Chicago Department Store; organization consists of 18 salesmen; applicants must have had long and successful experience in training and directing an organization of salesmen; to have your reply given consideration you must give your age, height, weight, if married or single, earnings for last 3 years, former employers, and nature of past experiences; references given will be held in strict confidence until after interview. This is an exceptional opportunity for a high grade man to associate himself in an important position with a highly rated concern of national prominence. Address Y J 371, Tribune.

MAN—YOUNG, WITH KNOWLEDGE OF wall paper or paint business, preferably one who has been connected with sample book concern, for general work in executive offices of nationally known company. Man selected must be conscientious, serious minded, ambitious, accurate, a competent correspondent. The amount of practical knowledge and experience he can bring to the work, in addition, will determine his value to us. Will work as assistant to managers of the business—very exceptional opportunity. Salary $150-$175 month to start. State fully age, education, experience and references. Tell us all about yourself and why you consider yourself the man for the place. Address D A 273, Tribune.

SALES MANAGER'S OPPORTUNITY.

We want a man who can select and maintain a sales force. Must be over 30, financially responsible, and able to furnish bond. The Chicago office is now open; ground floor location. The product is a necessity in the automotive industry and enjoys a freedom from competition. A daily report to the factory is required. We have nothing to sell you. SALESMEN.

A CHANCE FOR A BIG CLEAN-UP BEFORE XMAS.
We All Like to Have Plenty Money During the Holidays.

HERE IS YOUR CHANCE.

We have just opened up 52 acres within six blocks of the $75,000,000 Jones-Laughlin Steel company's site.

This property is located on an 80 ft. paved thoroughfare, with double track street car line, cars running every nine minutes into Chicago; bus line downtown every seven minutes; across the street a beautiful 24 acre city park; within eight blocks is the center of the fastest growing and most prosperous suburb of Chicago, where property is worth $2,000 per front foot today.

Our property is priced for a fast turnover. Lots as low as $500.

IT IS ONLY ONCE IN A GREAT WHILE THAT AN OPPORTUNITY OF THIS KIND PRESENTS ITSELF. SUBDIVISIONS OF THIS QUALITY ARE NOT OPENED UP EVERY DAY.

IF YOU WANT TWO OR THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS BY XMAS, COME IN AND GO TO WORK.

ONE OF OUR MEN MADE $1,600 LAST SATURDAY; ANOTHER MADE $480 SUNDAY, ETC. I WILL BE GLAD TO VERIFY THIS.

THERE NEVER WAS A SWEETER PIECE OF PROPERTY.

YOU WILL AGREE WITH ME THAT IT WILL EASILY BE SOLD AFTER LOOKING OVER THE LOCATION.

ASK FOR MR. BILLINGS.
10 N. Clark-st.,
Room 803.

SALESMEN—BUILDING MATERIAL.

A well known manufacturer requires the services of three first class salesmen, preferably men having experience in plastic products. The open territories have a fair volume of established trade which can be materially increased by such salesmen as are required.

If you are a real producer, can prove a successful selling record—if you are high powered but conservative, and want to get into business for yourself—here's a real opportunity.

If you have had successful experience selling plasters to building material executives you are sure to be successful with us if you can otherwise meet our requirements. If you are the type of man we want, you can earn $6,000 and upward each year.

Our proposition is strictly commission, without advances. The commissions are liberal and are paid twice each month.

If you have a proven record and have sufficient confidence in yourself to take on a real selling proposition that will pay you well over a long period in a business that is permanent, write us for an interview.

We will want to investigate your record and invite you to seek information on our company and proposition. Address A C 50, Tribune.

SALESMEN.

An established, fast growing concern needs at once a man of ability and real energy who appreciates an opening where he may actually earn $100 to $500 a week in cash, not futures, and quick promotion as sales manager if he qualifies. Two Salesmen Wanted—One for Chicago, One for the South,

To complete national sales force we want two A-1 Salesmen.

We are all salesmen over here. We have only the salesmen's viewpoint. As individuals we've been over every jump you've ever been over. We know your heart and your mind, and we're with you all the way for a square deal. We've never had one minute's trouble with any salesman who ever worked for us. We pay what's due promptly.

We never cut commissions when the men prosper, and we never will.

We belong to the most responsible National and Local Business Organizations. We have as our clients 22,000 of the most conspicuous and best rated concerns in America.

We are an old established, large, highly rated INDUSTRIAL SERVICE CONCERN, the acknowledged leader in our line. You have seen our full page national advertising in Forbes', Nation's Business, Management, etc.

We have a Permanent National Sales Organization that covers this country. We have increased our Sales Volume over 900% since 1920 and over 100% again this year. We have no dull years; no dull months.

Why, then, waste your time with a dead job? Come over with us, where salesmen are optimistic and prosperous.

You can get away quick in this business and earn a Substantial Sum your very first week. What's more, if you're a real, genuine, honest-to-goodness Salesman there is no doubt you can SUCCEED with us and make Big Money month after month. Promotions on the merit basis are prompt when deserved. All of our Executive Positions have been filled from the Sales Organization.

We have in our force a dozen of the Classiest Stock Salesmen in America. We have the three best Book Salesmen in America. We have several "stars" from the Advertising and Specialty fields. These men came to us voluntarily and they are making more with us than they ever made elsewhere.

Under no circumstances do we want to hire into this business a man who will fail.

Yet never in our best year have we sold 5% of the existing prospects—and the market renews itself each year.

This is an individual proposition that is in a field by itself without real competition.

We will prove to your satisfaction that salesman after salesman made from $10,000 to $22,000 last year, and the year before, and the year before that. The PROOF of every statement we make here is worked out to the Nth degree and ready for your consideration in very understandable form.

So write us in detail and tell us all about yourself; who you are, and what you've sold, and all necessary details, including phone number. Everything that will help you to land this job should be told. Don't write us six words and ask: "What-da-ya-got?" That's not the kind of salesman or salesmanship that interests us.

W'ell answer you promptly.

AN EXCELLENT POSITION FOR YOUNG WOMEN OF CHARACTER.

This organization, now in the 77th year of its life and expanding more rapidly than ever before, is desirous of securing the services of several intelligent, ambitious young women of pleasing personality.

The work is of a dignified, pleasing nature, in our advertising department. In addition to good earnings and interesting work we can promise you the association of other high grade young women and an environment that is far superior to the usual commercial atmosphere.

The earnings of the young women in this department average about $25 a week at the start. This amount increases to $35 a week after a reasonable facility in the work is acquired, and when one has become expert it is possible to earn $40 and more.

We prefer young college women, 23 to 25 years of age. We require that you possess a pleasing personality and talk well and convincingly. No other experience is necessary.

Write your qualifications, giving your age, address, telephone number, and whether or not you live at home, and any other information about yourself that you feel would influence our decision. Address A X 504, Tribune.

A CHICAGO CORPORATION IN STRENGTHening its Pacific Coast sales organization will have open Dec. 15 a number of resident representative positions in California, Oregon, Washington, and British Columbia. Refined ladies who are free to travel are invited to talk with our Director of Employment. Experience unimportant, but preference will be given to Normal or College graduates or women with personality who have suffered reverses and desire to become self-supporting; start $50 weekly salary; five openings for Florida, also five for Chicago. Apply 104 S. Michigan-av., Suite 521. ASK FOR MRS. ANDERSON.

Wanted—Educated Women, Capable of Earning $2,500 Per Year.

A new field of work made possible by the Compton Service. Only women of personality and education, in good health, who can begin at once and devote entire time, need apply. Applicant must be between 25 and 45 with high school education or better. Out of town applicants give all information in first letter. Apply Suite 1516 Garland Bldg., 58 E. Washington-st. Ask for MRS. DEXTER.

WOMEN—XMAS MONEY.

WE ARE ALWAYS LOOKING AHEAD.

LARGE LOOP REAL ESTATE FIRM,

On account of closing books for the year, has contracts where purchasers have paid from 30 to 50% on their lots, and were unable to continue same. The company will accept a few responsible people, who can furnish references, to assume the balance of the contracts and get credit for the total purchase price; that means buying a lot at one-half the actual value. Address A S 210, Tribune.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

California.

FOR SALE — MAKE MORE MONEY ON A small farm in San Joaquin Valley, California, where you can work outdoors all the year. Splendid opportunities here for the man of moderate means. Twenty and forty acre farms produce alfalfa abundantly. Dairying, hogs, and poultry make good returns, and staple varieties of fruits yield dependable profits; a combination of these means a well balanced farm with good income throughout the year. Winterless California offers much to the man looking for a country where he can get the most out of life. Climate is delightful, with long growing seasons; wonderful roads; excellent schools. Nearby markets and co-operative marketing associations afford profitable outlets for all produce. A small one family farm, cutting out high labor costs, insures success. There are no winter handicaps. San Joaquin Valley illustrated folder mailed free on request. C. L. Seagraves, General Colonization Agent, Santa Fe Ry., 901 Ry. Exch., Chicago, Ill.

AMERICAN METHODS
In the Small Loan Business.
$10 TO $300
ON HOUSEHOLD GOODS,
PIANOS, ETC., WITHOUT REMOVAL.

Ten years of intensive investigation have proven that this business meets a real economic need. Illinois passed a law setting a fair rate of interest and licensing the lender. Loans are made for thousands of different purposes. If you need money in emergency do not hesitate to call, phone or write either of our offices. Repayment arranged in easy monthly installments of principal and interest. Loans can be reduced or paid in full any time. Interest ceases immediately on every dollar repaid.

Loans $10 to $300

You can get a loan of us on your furniture at small cost and repay it in easy monthly payments. It is not necessary to have a finely furnished home nor do we subject you to any red tape or delay, as loans can usually be arranged in a few hours. Strictly confidential. No inquiries of friends, relatives, or employer. The fact that we are licensed and supervised by the state and have been in business for 41 years should convince you of our reliability. Applications may be made by phone if not convenient to call at our office.

CADILLAC

Protecting the used Cadillac owner.

Once the sale is made, the buyer of a used Cadillac from the Cadillac Motor Car Co. is not left to get what satisfaction he can from the automobile. As long as he owns it he is kept informed regularly of the adjustments that should be made and the precautions he should take to keep his car running most efficiently.

To make this service to owners really valuable we have established a maintenance department second to none in the country. In the four maintenance stations a force of 500 trained mechanics, working with specially designed tools and machines, do the necessary work promptly and thoroughly.

This service is maintained for the buyer of used Cadillacs just as much as for the V-63 owner.

Because of this complete service the used Cadillac buyer is assured of maximum satisfaction from his car as long as he owns it. What safer security can any motor car owner ask?

Ford Motor of Canada " American Units."

There is a firm in New York which has been sending out letters offering what they call "American Units" of Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., stock. Evidently, a great many of these letters are being sent out, as this department is receiving six or eight inquiries daily from readers asking if this is a good investment. Practically all these inquiries come from small towns in Illinois, Wisconsing, and Iowa, indicating that the firm is operating outside of the large financial centers.

These "American Units" are described in the literature as representing one one-hundredth of a share of the capital stock of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd. It is represented that by buying these units the small investor, who possibly could not afford to purchase whole shares of the stock, may share in the company's profits to the extent of his means.

On its face, this proposition looks attractive. The Ford Motor Company of Canada is a prosperous company. In 1923 it earned 72.95 per cent on its capital stock and paid 10 per cent in dividends. It has paid a 10 per cent dividend also this year. In 1921 and 1922 it paid 30 per cent each year. It is a high grade stock.

If the so-called "American Units" were being sold at anything like their fractional value of the market price and were bona fide certificates representing fractional parts of shares of the stock held in escrow, there would be no reason to suppose that they were not as good an investment as the stock itself. They may be all that they are represented to be—we do not know, but do not intend to cast any doubt on their authenticity, even though they are not sanctioned by the Ford Motor Company of Canada, whose vice president and general manager, Wallace R. Campbell, in a formal statement on Sept. 27, 1924, said that "the company had not sanctioned the plan of a New York brokerage concern which was offering 'American Units' or bankers' shares of the company."

What we principally object to and wish to point out to our readers is the fact that these units are being offered at about 140 per cent of their proportionate value. At the present writing, the market price of Ford Motor of Canada stock on the New York curb market is $459 a share. These "American Units," representing one one-hundredth of a share, are offered at $6.50 per unit, which is equivalent to $650 a share for the stock. Those who purchase these units are paying about 40 per cent above the market price and getting an interest in a stock which at present dividend rates yields them about 1½ per cent on the purchase price.

AGRICULTURAL BILL 3 MILLION UNDER ESTIMATE

$124,637,000 Is Sum Reported to House.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—[Special.]—In reporting the annual agricultural appropriation bill to the house today the committee on appropriations kept the total below budget estimates by cutting the fund for highway construction in coöperation with the states.

The committee included an appropriation of $80,000,000 for highway construction under the federal aid system as against a budget estimate of $81,750,000.

Approves Increases.

In the case of funds for a number of activities for the department the committee approved increases above the budget estimates. For the work of the department proper the bill carries a total of $44,637,715 as against budget estimates of $44,002,000.

The total in the bill, including departmental activities, and the highway construction fund, amounts to $124,637,715, which is a decrease of $3,114,285 from the budget estimate of $127,752,000.

The amount appropriated for road construction is greatly in excess of that for the current year, but the amount for departmental activities shows a decrease.

Other items in the bill included: Agricultural experiment stations, $1,440,000; upper Mississippi river refuge, $400,000; coöperative forest fire protection, $660,000; acquisition of additional forest lands, $1,000,000; eradication of the foot and mouth disease and other contagious diseases in anmals, $10,[illegible].

Fight T. B. in Cattle.

The committee reported that the eradication of tuberculosis in cattle by the department in coöperation with various states was "progressing rapidly," and increased appropriations made by states for this work "made it necessary" for the federal government to keep pace with coöperative funds.

An appropriation of $2,977,[illegible], or $84,050 more than the 1925 figure, was recommended for the forest service. The committee explained that it is proposed to increase the employment of additional forest guards to relieve the burden now imposed on the staff of guardsmen who are called upon to cover an "immense territory."

For the investigation of insects affecting southern field crops, the committee recommended an appropriation of $255,440, an increase of $15,000.

Provide for Insect Battle.

Appropriations recommended for eradication and investigation of other destructive insects include $73,590 for control of the western bark beetle, $171,250 for investigation of truck crop insects, $740,000 for prevention of spread of moths, $383,630 to check the spread of the European corn borer, $280,000 for the control and prevention of the spread of the Japanese beetle.

The appropriation of $[illegible] for the acquisition of additional lands will permit the department to establish fish and game refuges along the upper Mississippi river.

Total appropriations for the fiscal year 1925 amounted to $65,714,436, which includes $46,714,436 for the department of agriculture and $19,000,000 for road construction. The bill reported today is for the fiscal year 1926.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The local unlisted securities market last week was quite active, with advances predominating, with the exception of the public utility group, which showed some slight reaction after a considerable advance.

American Seating common changed hands at 48 in the late trading, an advance of about 11 points for the week. The preferred was in demand at 105, up about 10 points. Bucyrus common improved to 107 and closed strong at 105 bid, 110 asked. The preferred was in demand at 105@107. Elgin National Watch rose some 11 points to 65, ex-dividend $2.50. Federal Electric common and preferred improved substantially to sales between 5 and 6 and 29 to 30, respectively. Dolese and Shepard, which has been dormant for some time, was traded in between 38@40.

McCord Manufacturing was strong during the late trading, improving to sales at [illegible]. The preferred was also higher, with sales around 33. Kellogg common continued in demand around 35, with limited offerings at 36½. While Butler Brothers sold up a point to 36¾, the close was slightly easier at 35@36. Interstate Iron and Steel scored a 2 point advance, 80 being freely bid, with limited offerings at 82. St. Louis National Stock Yards on few transactions sold up about 7 points to 90, reacting to 88 at the close.

Ford of Canada reversed its previous trend, reflecting a 12 point advance in closing at 467. Paige-Detroit continued steady between 16@16½. Timken Axle was quiet and unchanged at 4 bid, 4¼ asked.

In the public utility list American Gas and Electric sold up 2 points to 117½, but later reacted to 106 and closed with a net loss of about 4 points to 111½. American Light and Traction closed a point lower at 135¾. While Electric Railway Securities sold at 17¼, the close reflected a point loss at 16 bid, 16½ asked. High sales at 45½ were noted in Tennessee Electric common, but it closed slightly lower at [illegible]. The [preferred] continued steady around 71½. Little interest was shown in [illegible]. In closing at 36 the common relinquished a full point, while the preferred sold up to 85, but closed unchanged at 83½. Commonwealth Power Corporation common was in good demand, with high sales at the close at 113½.

In anticipation of the usual Jan. 1 extra and increased dividend disbursements, the bank stock market developed considerable activity, many issues showing substantial gains. Illinois Merchants was a feature, the bid price advancing some 8 points to 415. Central Trust recorded a gain of 2 points to 234 bid, 238 asked. Sales of Continental and Commercial National ranged between 307@309, up a point. Union Trust Company was wanted at 390, with little interest on the selling side. Some few transactions in First National were made at 459@461.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS

Chicago bank clearings last week totaled $683,000,000, an increase of $110,000,000 over the preceding week, which contained the Thanksgiving holiday, and also a gain of $85,300,000 over the corresponding week of 1923. Balances last week totaled $42,[illegible],000, an increase of $3,100,000 over the preceding week, but a decline of $4,[illegible] from the corresponding week last year. The figures for the week, day by day, follow:

	Clearings.	Balances.
Monday	$125,100,000	$5,300,[illegible]

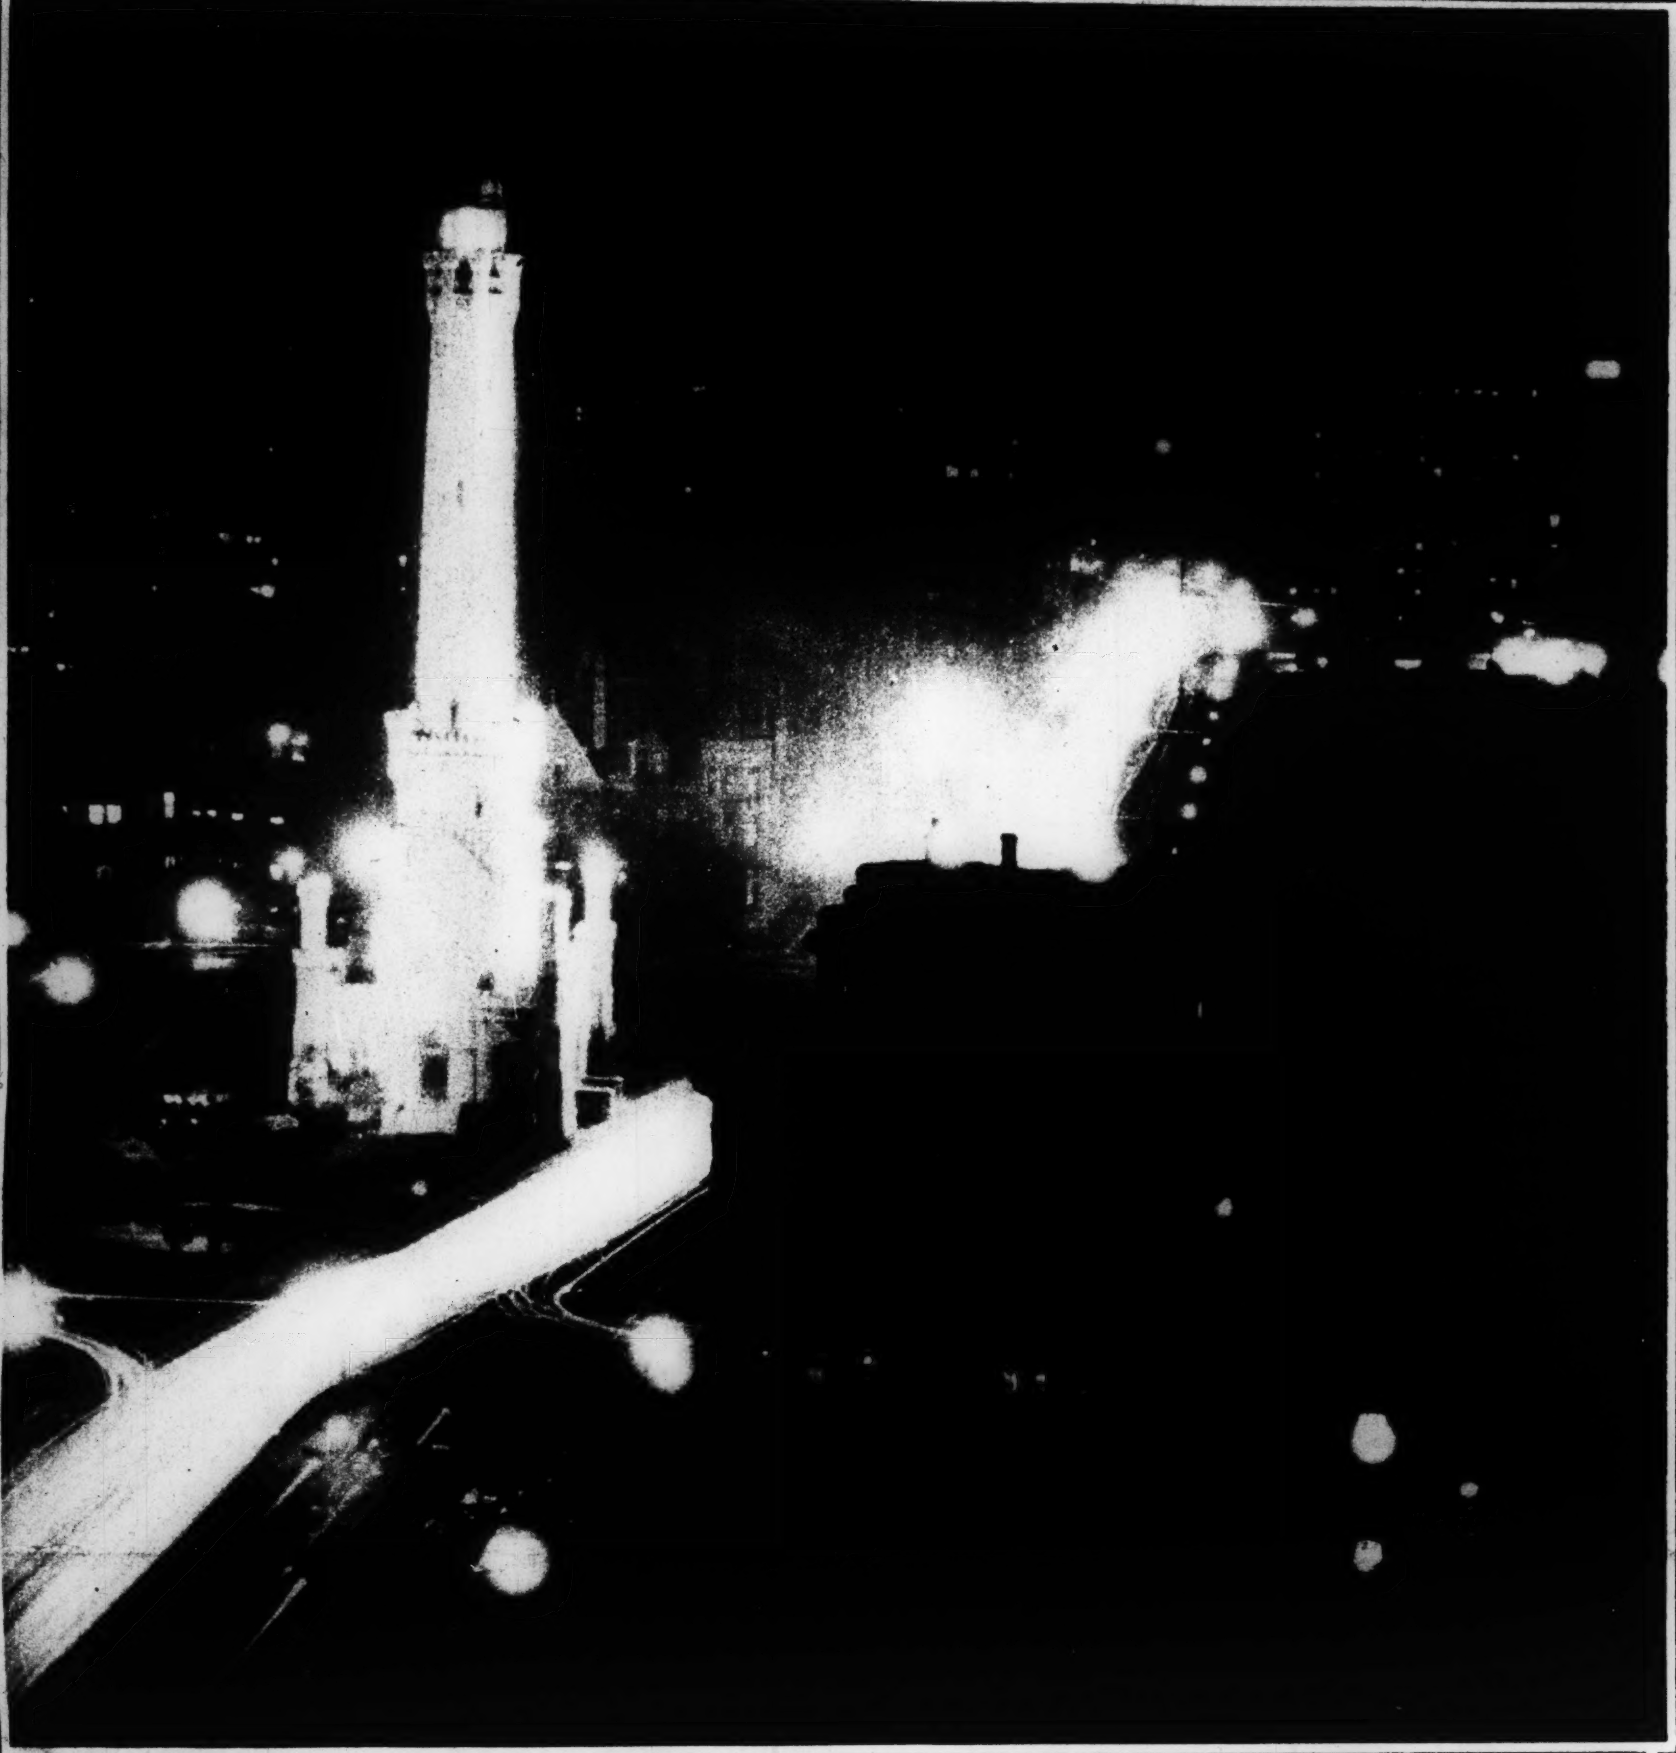
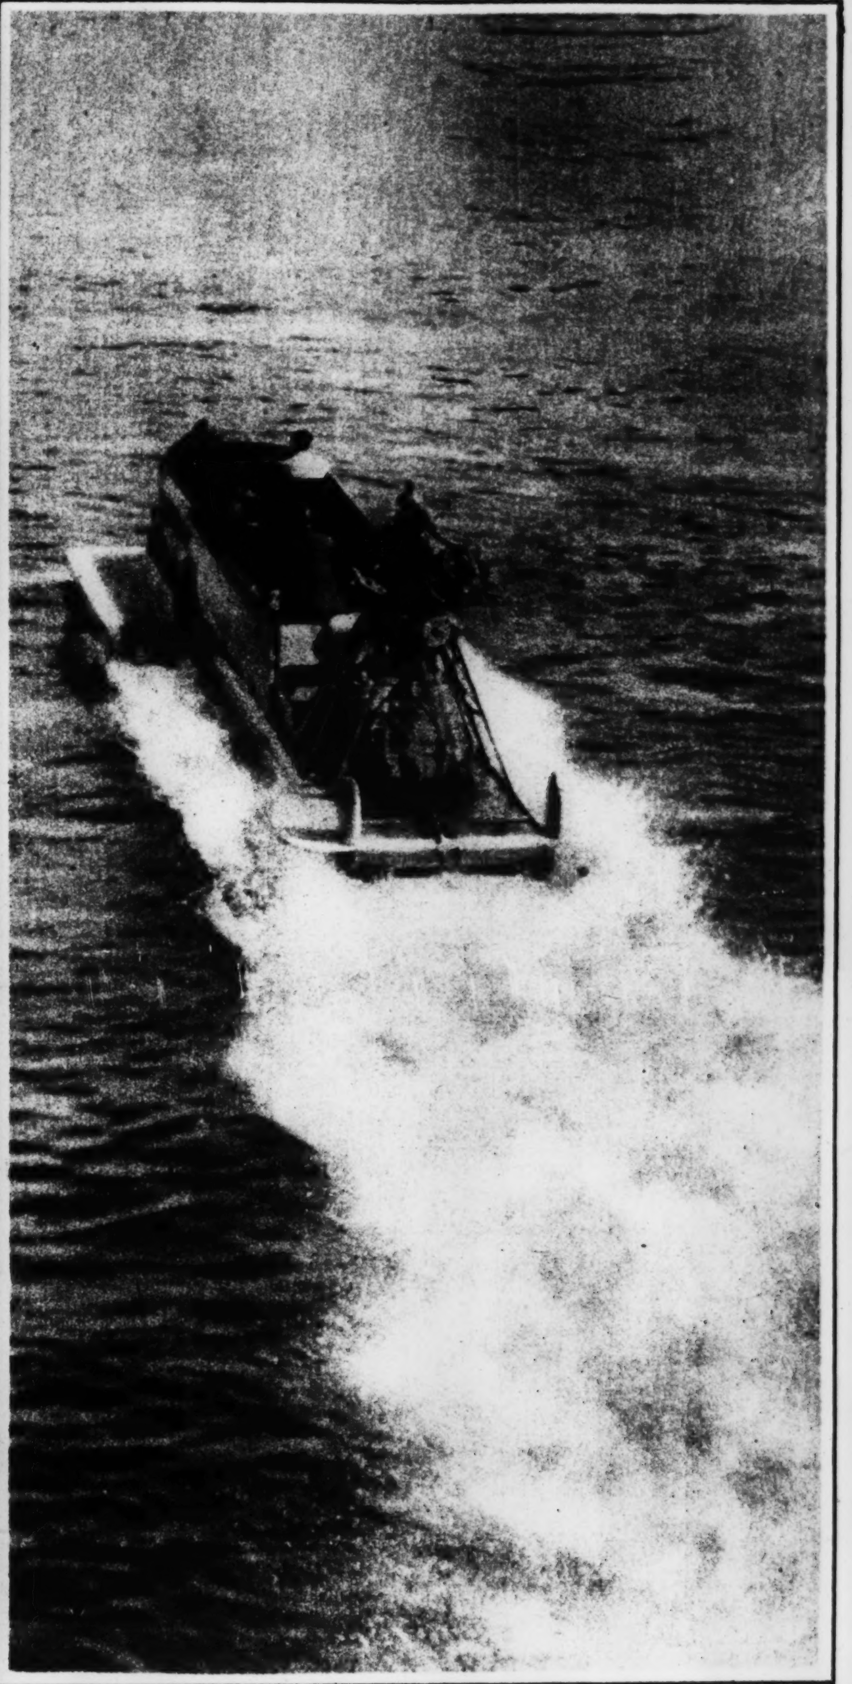
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

December 7, 1924



A RIVER OF LIGHT ON THE BOUL MICH—An unusual spectacle on Chicago's show avenue, taken by time exposure with a camera pointed north from the fourteenth floor of the Allerton club about 8 o'clock at night. The old water tower, outlined by powerful flood lights, rears its venerable self at the left. The most unusual detail of the picture, however, is the darkness of half of the avenue. There were as many cars going north as coming south, but only the lights of the former registered. Tail lights, it will be noted, made no impression on the plate.

(Photograph from Marshall L. Brown.)



SPLASHING TO A NEW RECORD—Whirling over the water to a speed of 90 miles an hour, M. Fisher shattered the old mark of 73.89 miles per hour with his Farman hydroplane in the official French test recorded here. Aboard is an accredited representative of the French navy. If you want to see how fast that really is, get on an aquaplane behind a plane going ninety miles an hour—and try to stay aboard.

(Wide World photo.)

A MUSIC MASTER PASSES—Opera lovers the world over are mourning the death of Giacomo Puccini, who died suddenly on Nov. 29 at Brussels, Belgium. A heart attack following a throat operation was fatal to the great composer. His best known operas are "La Boheme," "Madame Butterfly," and "Tosca." He was finishing a new work, "Turnadot," when he died. He was born Dec. 23, 1858, at Lucca, in Italy.

MRS. HARDING GOES TO FINAL REST—Pallbearers carrying the flower-covered casket from the home at Marion, Ohio, to the hearse which bore the body to the cemetery to rest beside that of the late President. Poignant sentiment is lent to the scene by the remembrance that only a few months earlier Mrs. Harding had followed the remains of her husband over the same way of sadness.

LIKE BARKIS, DEMPSEY IS WILLIN'—in fact, Jack admits it's high time he found himself a bride. Here the smiling tiger of the ring is telling some girl reporters of Boston that he'd like to share his world's championship laurels with the right girl. Jack says age doesn't count, but he thinks a wife should be about ten years younger than her husband. And he's 29, historians of pugilism say. (Photograph from Wide World.)

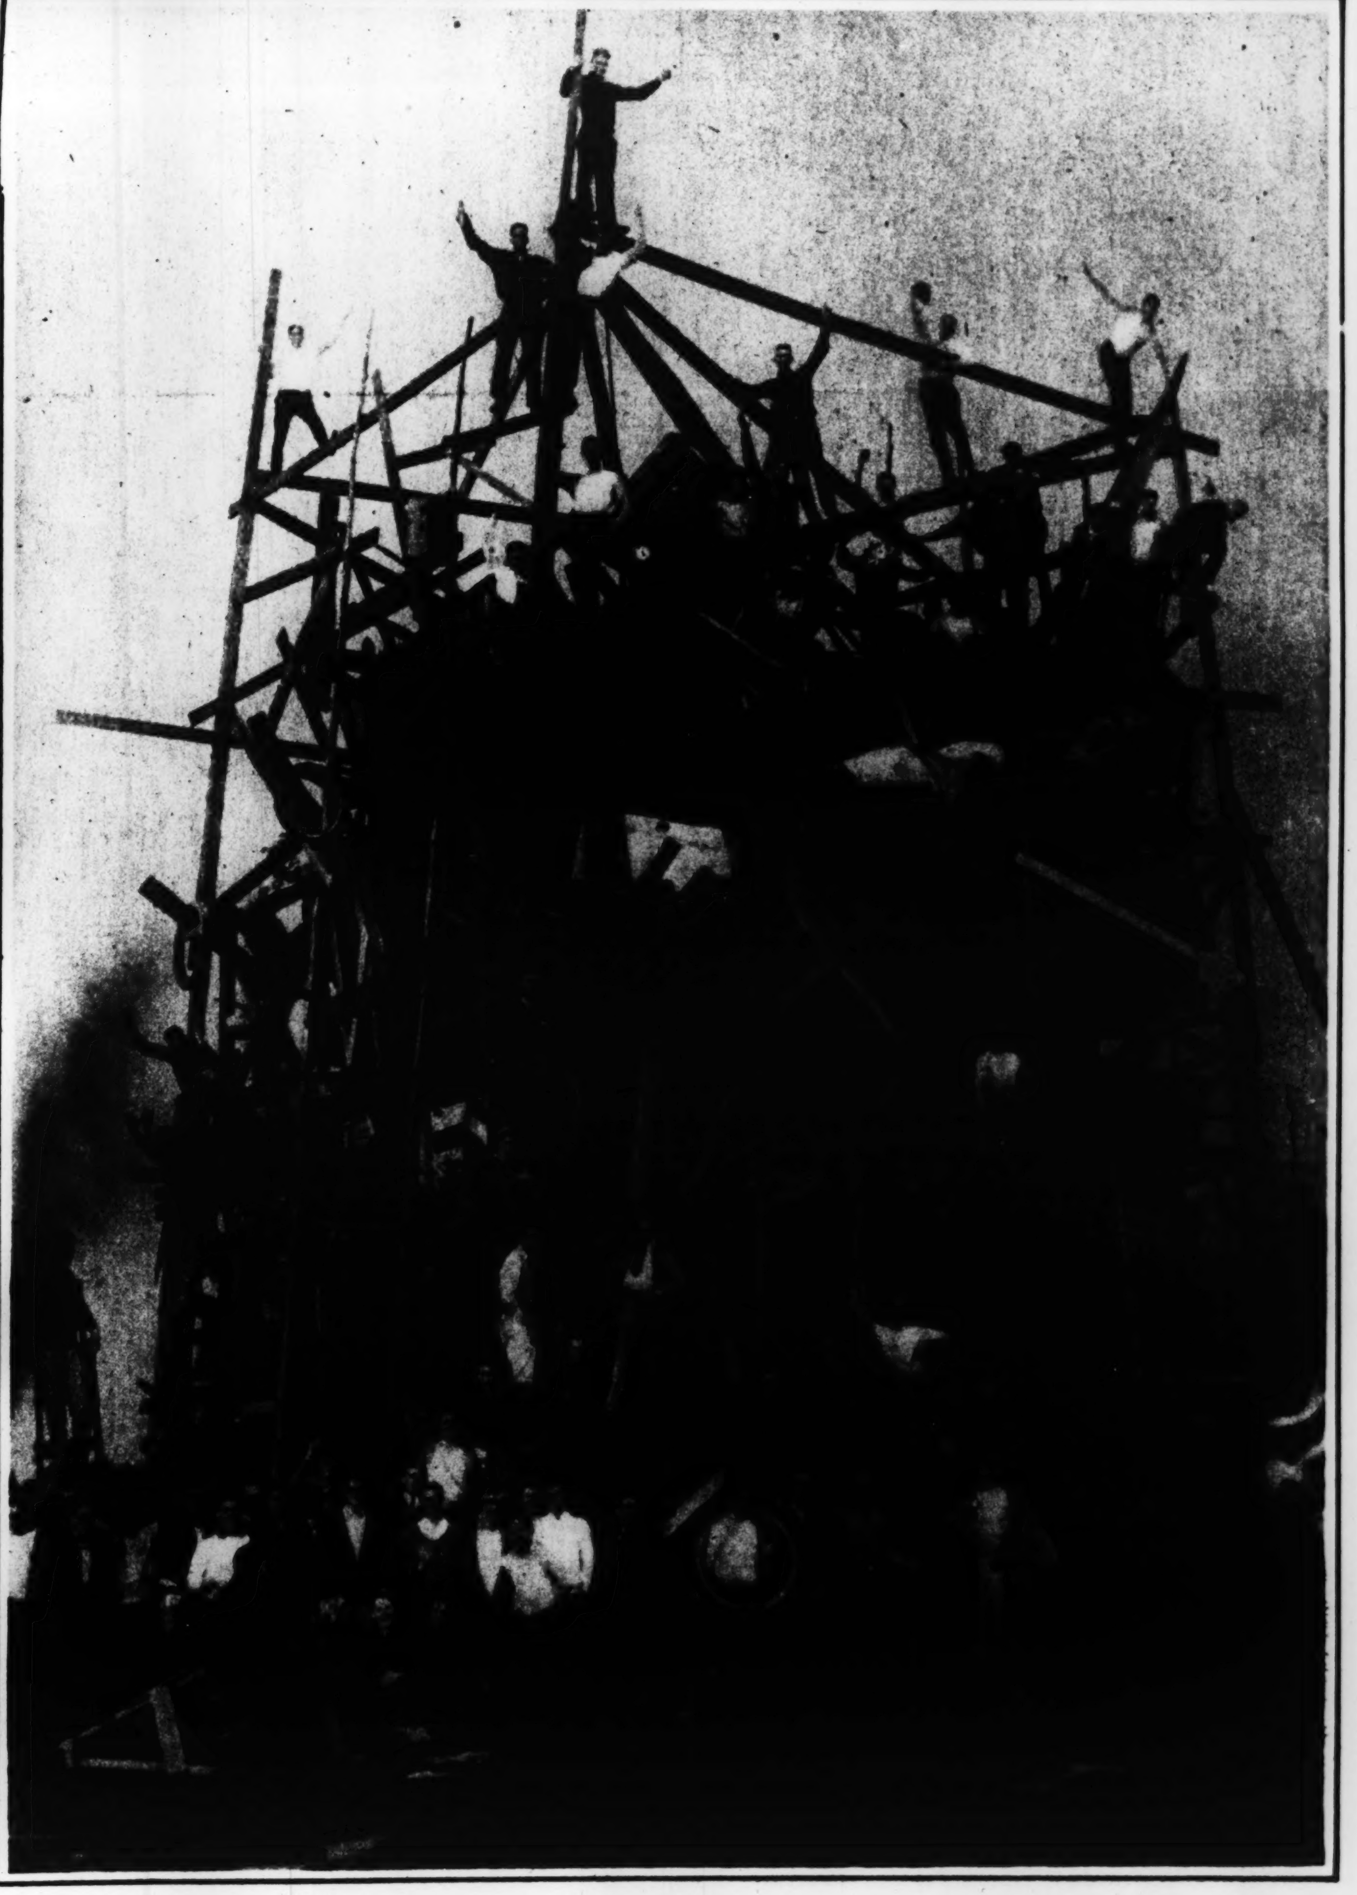
WHERE SANTA GETS THOSE BRIGHT GLASS TOYS which he hangs on the Christmas trees of good little boys and girls. Here's one of the three glass-blowing plants at Lauschau, in the Thuringer forest of Germany, that work for Santa all the year round. The first of these establishments was started away back in 1537. The women are putting the final touches of color to the pretty globes. (Photograph from Wide World.)

A THOUSAND DOLLARS EACH, these little fellows are worth. They're the first sables ever raised in captivity, only six months old now. It's their fur that makes them all but priceless. They are being bred on an Alaska silver fox farm at Lake Placid, in New York. They make gentle, affectionate little pets, their keepers at the farm have found. (Photograph from Wide World.)



THE DADDY OF ALL BONFIRES is what these freshmen at Leland Stanford university in California set out to build during their annual fall ruction. They just about succeeded, this giant pyre would indicate. It was 30 feet by 30 feet at the base, and towered 70 feet above the campus. It must have made a corking blaze. PREVENTION

PREVENTION of disease is the imperative demand of the world today.

Without health we lose the power to work and to enjoy. —we lose, perhaps, even life itself. But what are we doing to prevent disease, to keep our health, to improve it?

We take reasonable care of our automobile, or any other machine we may possess, but how often do we neglect our body—the most precious machine of all!

Few of us realize, for example, the amazingly large proportion of all diseases that enter the body through the mouth. This has been estimated as high as eighty per cent.

Therefore, it is absolutely essential to our safety that we keep the teeth clean and sound, and the gums firm and healthy.

Every time we eat, tiny particles of food lodge in almost inaccessible places in the mouth. Brushing alone cannot dislodge them; they remain, ferment and form acids which attack the teeth and gums, causing conditions which may lead to Pyorrhea, lowered vitality, rheumatism, heart and kidney disease.

What a penalty for neglect! What a penalty for failure to recognize the harm done by those acids! Therefore, we must practice prevention. We dare not wait until the damage is done—we must prevent it!

for Christmas

WHEN you give the New Eversharp or Wahl Pen you have the comfortable feeling that your gifts are the very newest and best of their kind.

Made by the foremost manufacturer of fine writing equipment, cased in the beauty and dignity of precious metals, boxed like an article from a Fifth Avenue jeweler's—Eversharp or Wahl Pen, or a combination set, are gifts which will bring you a real glow of pleasure in the giving. And they will win the appreciation of the hardest-to-please persons on your Christmas list.

Remember, too, that this beautiful pen and pencil are gifts of thoughtfulness. They are personal articles, like the watch and other constantly worn personal jewelry. They enter into the intimate daily life of the recipient.

They are luxury itself—as a gift should be. Yet they are useful and used—as you like a gift to be.

You will find Eversharp or Wahl Pen or combination sets at prices to suit every situation. If he has an Eversharp, match it with a Wahl Pen. Eversharps as low as $1. Sets from $6.50 to $100.

Be sure to see them. There's a store near you displaying Eversharp and Wahl Pen.

THAT SAILLESS SAILING SHIP, as it looked in the harbor at Hamburg. Wind-driven turbines in the two huge stacks are supposed to propel the ship, at a great saving of coal or other fuel. The inventor, Flettner, calls it a rotor ship. He plans to sail the Buckau to America.

THE NEW SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE, Howard M. Gore, is sworn in by R. M. Reese, secretary of the department. Mr. Gore succeeds Henry C. Wallace, who died recently. He was elected governor of West Virginia in November, and he will quit the cabinet when he is called to take the governor's chair. The others in the picture are the directors of the department, C. F. Marvin, W. G. Campbell, C. F. Warburton, and Ed Ball. (Photograph copyright by Harris & Ewing)

THE SEVEN LUCKY McCULLY WAIFS watch a football game at Washington with their foster father. These seven Russian children were adopted by Rear Admiral Newton A. Cold Weather Animals in Lincoln Park

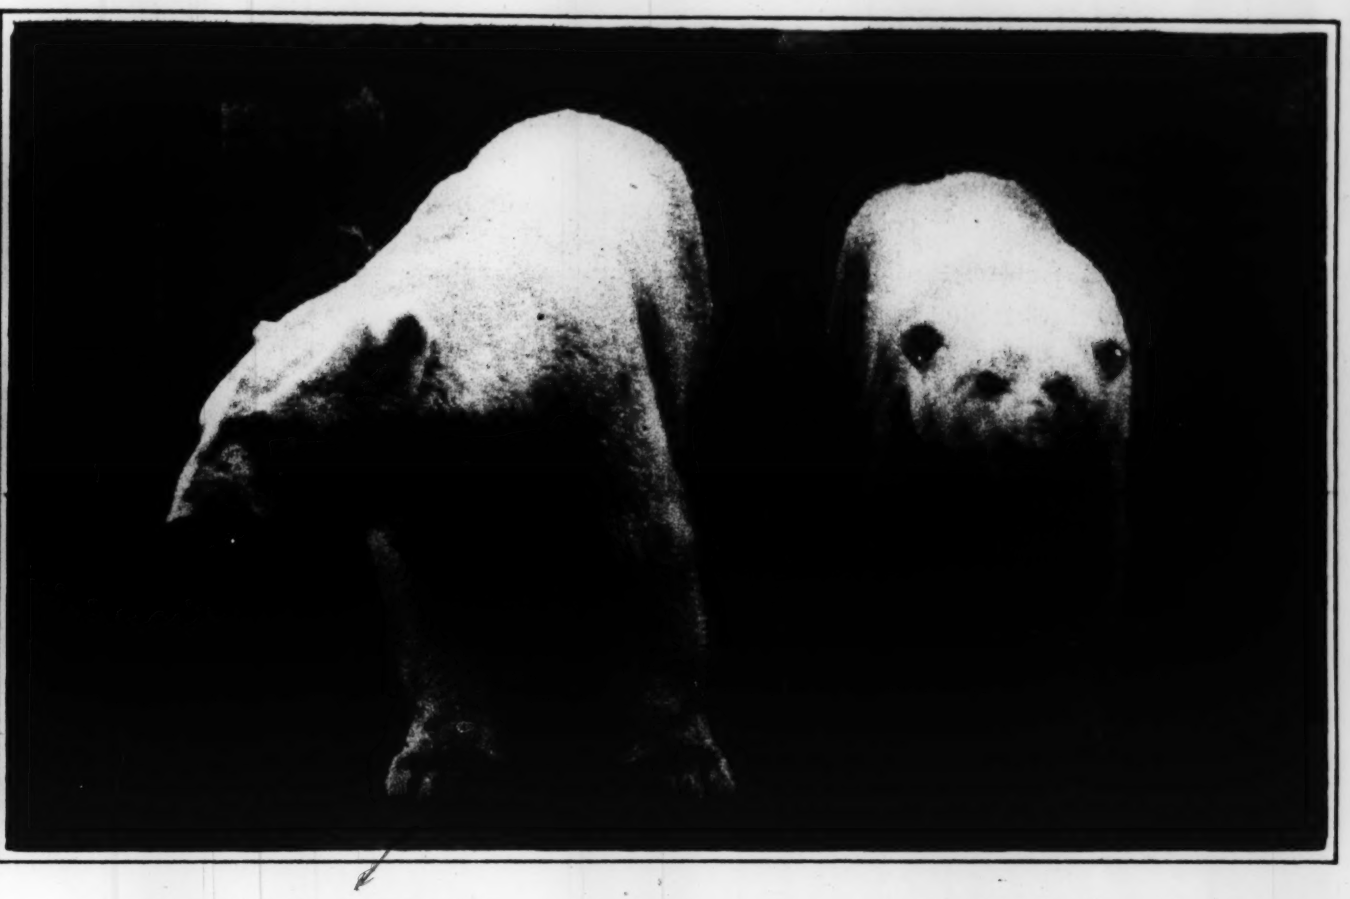
WINTER HOLDS NO TERRORS for the buffalo. Lincoln park has a fine little herd of these fellows. Years back it seemed the buffalo was doomed to extinction, and Uncle Sam protected them from hunters. Now they have multiplied so fast the government doesn't know what to do with its herds. (TRIBUNE Photo)



COLD WEATHER? AH-H-H! That's just what these polar bears want nothing else but. Nature built 'em for arctic climes, providing them with great heavy furs which are all too uncomfortable in our mild zone. You can almost see this lumbering pair sniffing expectantly, hoping for all sorts of snow and nice (for them) sub-zero blasts.

(TRIBUNE Photo)

SNOW SUITS THE ELK, TOO. He's the giant of the deer family, and deer must like snow, 'cause doesn't Santa Claus use deer to haul his big sled at Christmas time? The elk is a majestic animal, and this one seemed to pose right proudly for our camera man.

(TRIBUNE Photo)

ELMER LAYDEN JIM CROWLEY DON MILLER HARRY STUHLDREHER

THE FOUR HORSEMEN OF NOTRE DAME—the lunging, plunging, galloping backfield that flashed like a comet through the recent football season. These demons of the gridiron form perhaps the greatest backfield combination that ever played the great American college game. Elmer Layden, full back, is honor student in Notre Dame's law school; Jim Crowley is left half, Don Miller is right half, and Harry Stuhldreher is quarter back and the general of the Horsemen.

UNCLE SAM'S NEW SUPER-BLIMP SALUTES THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT as it noses its way to Bolling field at Washington, D. C., to be rechristened. The giant Zeppelin was the ZR3 when it sailed here from Germany. Mrs. Calvin Coolidge renamed it the Los Angeles. The ceremony was delayed nearly two hours while its American crew battled to bring the great airship to earth.

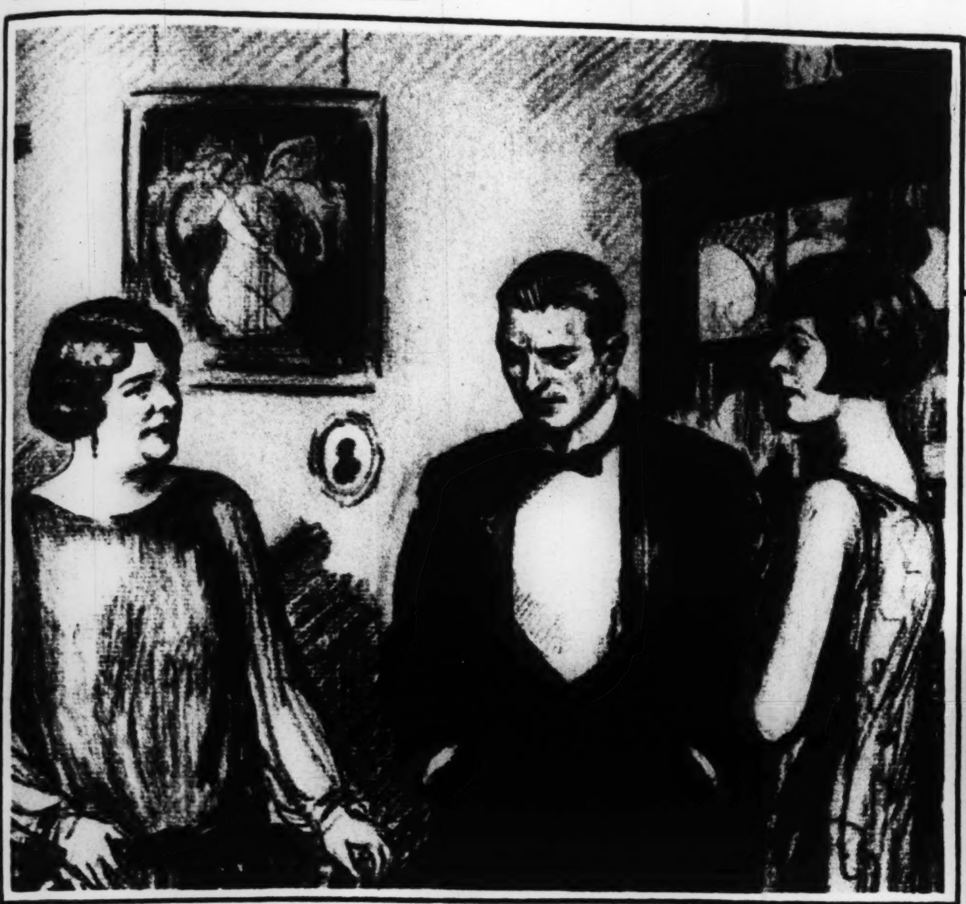
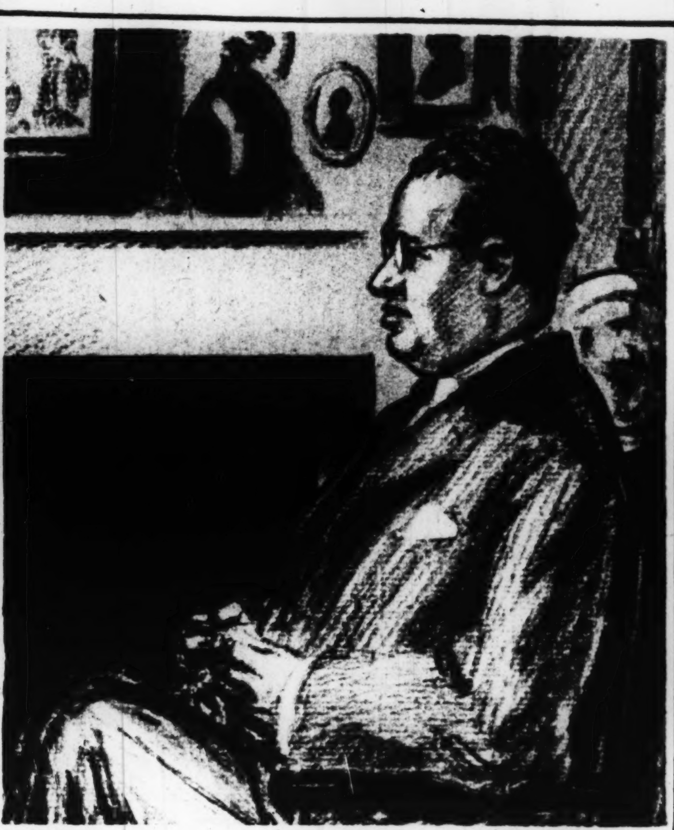
ANTIQUES

By W. E. HILL

Copyright, 1924, by The Chicago Tribune

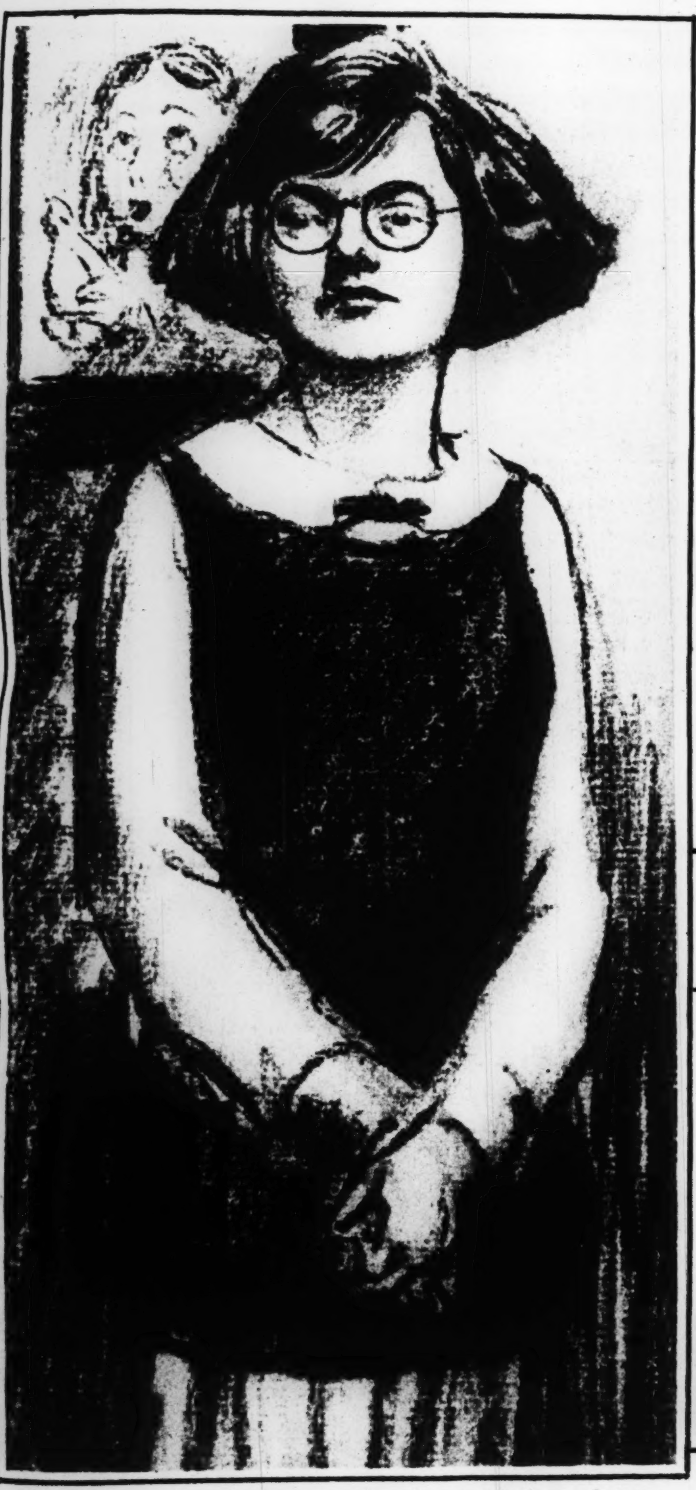


When the hostess who has but recently become early American conscious says, "Wouldn't you like to see the house?" be warned in time and say "No," politely but firmly. Otherwise the unwary guest will be led from room to room to admire the antiques in accents loud and long. There will be a decided coolness toward the person whose adjectives of approbation give out after the first roomful of early bottles, early hook rugs, early prints and early bedspreads.

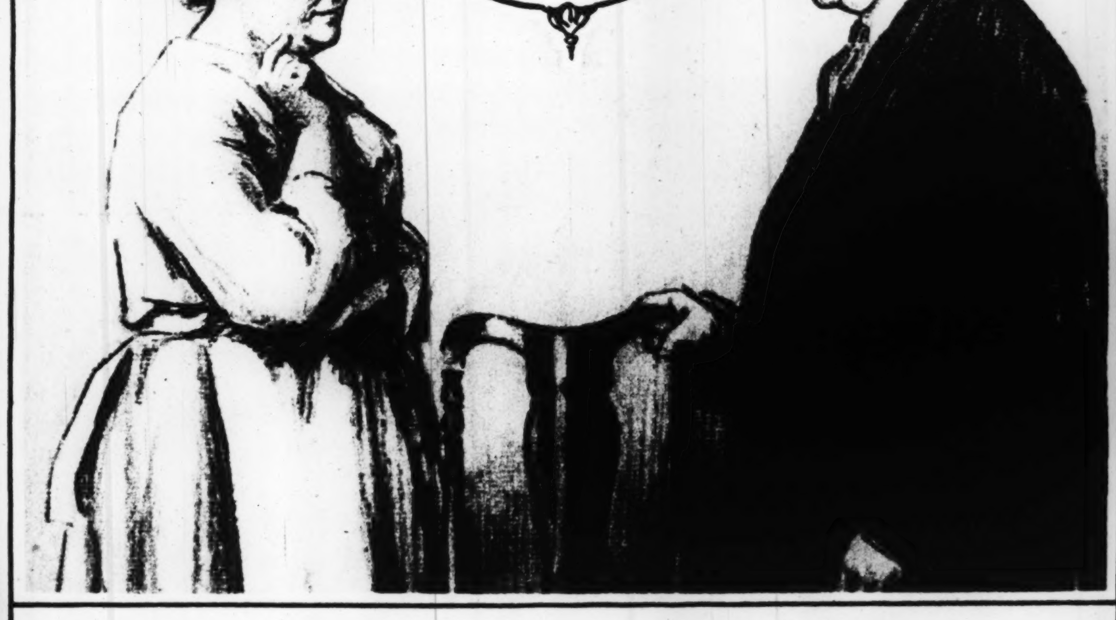


A 1924 collector of early American antiques, surrounded by his possessions. Antiques do give such an atmosphere!

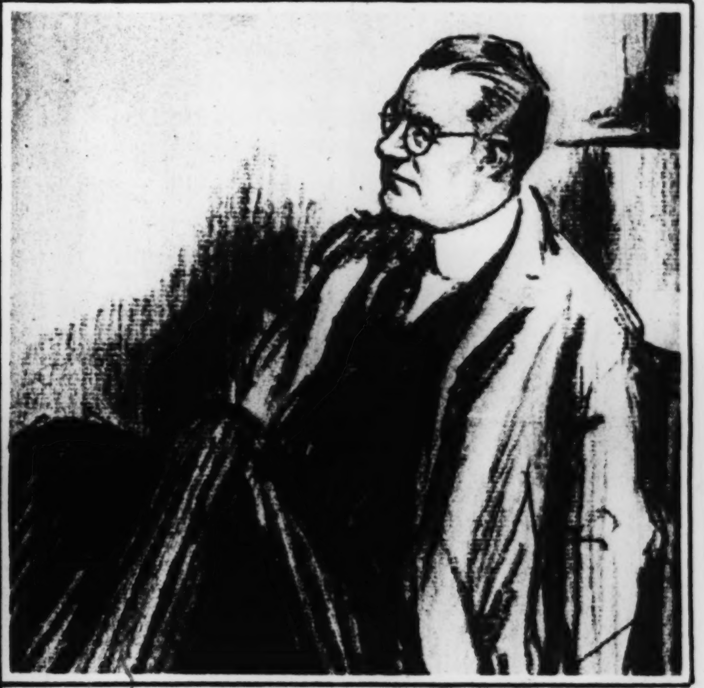
Elderly lover of antiques registering horror. Some unfeeling brute placed a hot tea cup on her little maple stand.



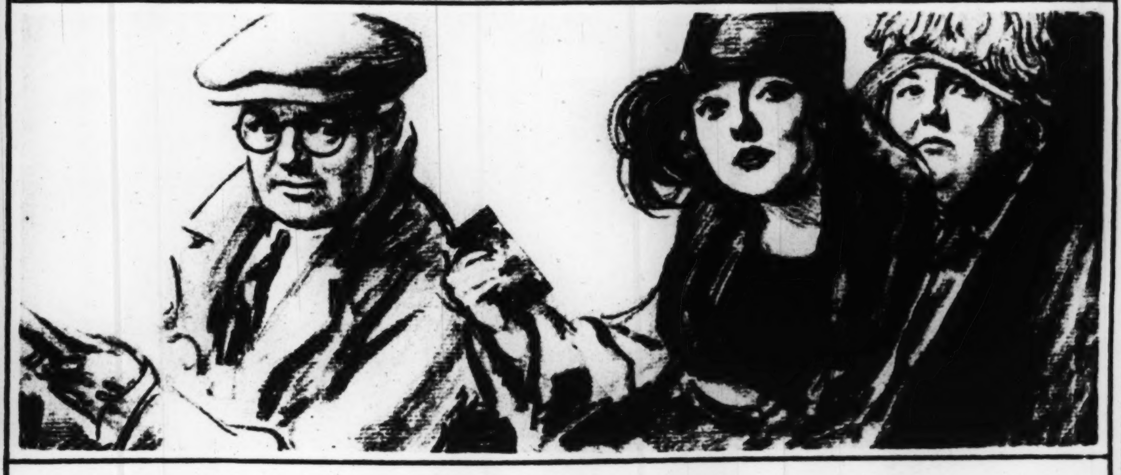
The assistant in the antique shop is wondering what on earth the people do with the truck they buy.



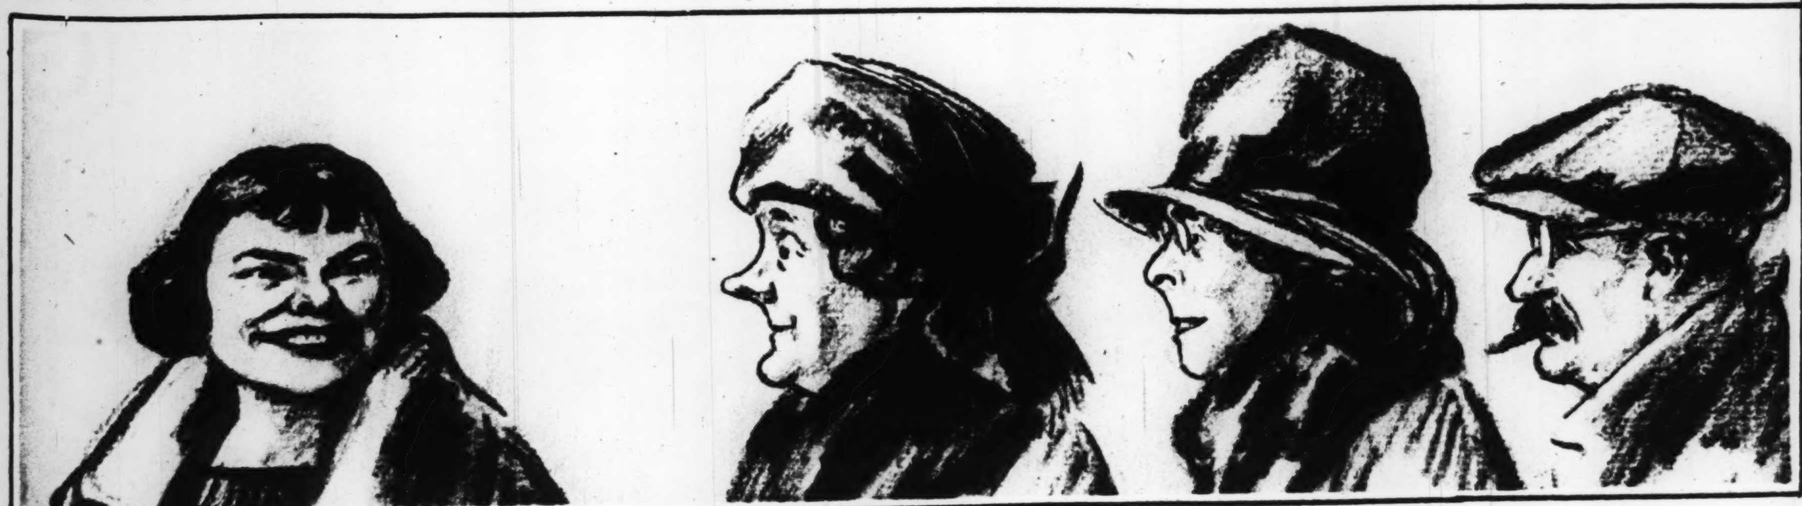
The farmer's wife and the dealer are having a little argument over the worth of an old chair. The farmer's wife has suddenly become attached to the chair; it was her great-great-grandmother's, etc., etc.



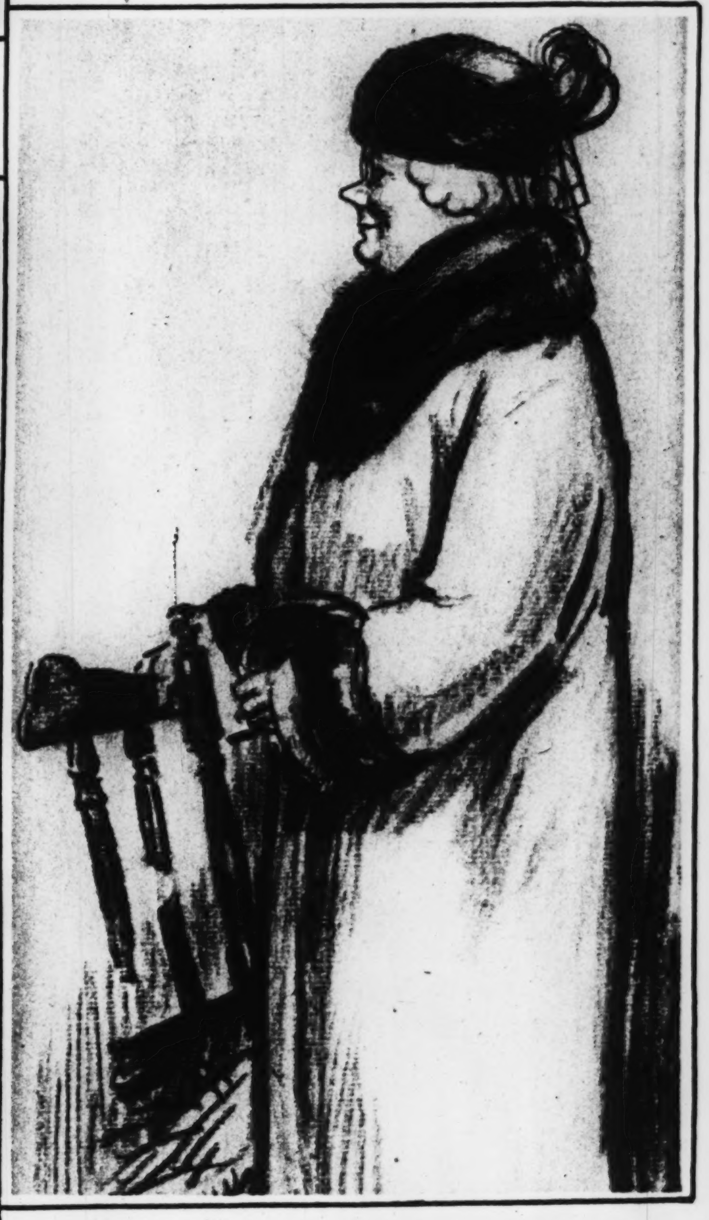
Somewhat late American husband who has slipped on an early American hook rug.



"O, Harvey, do stop! I see a perfectly wonderful Boston rocker!" The wife with the Boston rocker complex simply can't be got past a farmhouse with chairs on the front porch.



Lady antique dealer taking three favored customers out to the barn to see the things that aren't "done over" as yet. "Would you," says she, "be interested in highboys? I have a lovely highboy with one leg and two drawers gone, I'd like to show you. Only I hate to sell it. I was going to keep it for myself."



"Wait till I have it done over! Then you'll see!" Mrs. Miggs is the proud possessor of a genuine early American find, in the shape of at least one-third of an old armchair, salvaged from a farmer's rubbish heap.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bahlman, 3429 Herschel Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio. It has a Richardson Multicrome Roof in opal

The OPAL roof

—another Richardson contribution toward more beautiful homes

You will find in this newest Richardson roof an exclusive new coloring—opal—to add still greater beauty to your home.

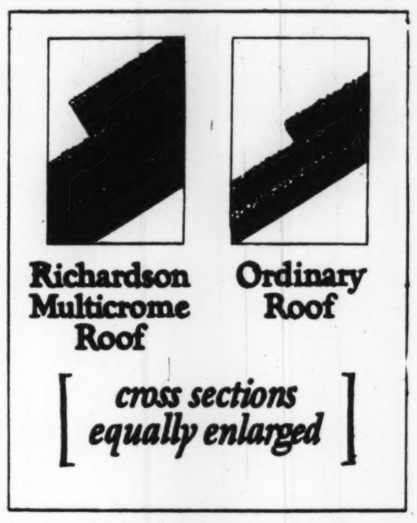
The opal roof is formed by a skillful blending on each shingle of the two most bautiful Richardson colors in slate, weathered brown and jade green.

Applied just as they come from the bundle, these new opal shingles give to your roof a coloring like that of sunlight filtered through dancing leaves on a fresh spring lawn.

Architects, home owners and builders who have seen this roof are enthusiastic over its coloring of distinctive beauty. And they agree that the opal color combination in Richardson Multicrome Roofs is a real contribution toward more beautiful homes.

The Richardson Multicrome Roof

This, however, is but one examples of the rare beauty secured in the Richardson Multicrome Roof. Equally distinctive is the bronze mosaic coloring, formed in the same manner with weathered brown and tile red slate flakes. Many color effects are possible—one to please every taste. The rare weathered brown, for instance, is attractive when applied with other Richardson Shingles in solid colors of jade green, tile red or black pearl.



Richardson Multicrome Roof
Ordinary Roof
[cross sections equally enlarged]

The 50% greater thickness of this roof adds beauty of texture and years of endurance. Closely overlapping slate flakes further protect the sturdy Viskalt-saturated base against weather and fire hazards

The Multicrome Roof is built of Richardson Super-Giant Shingles, extra large, extra heavy—to give greater beauty, longer endurance. The high quality of its inner materials, too, assures lasting beauty for this roof. Its base is sturdy Richardson felt, for fifty years recognized as the best. And the waterproofing is Viskalt—unusually durable because 99.8% pure bitumen, especially vacuum-processed.

The Richardson Multicrome Roof represents the maximum roof value at a moderate price. It is economical to lay and equally good for new or over-the-old-roof jobs.

Prove the tacts yourself

Go to your nearest dealer in lumber, hardware or building material and ask to see the color combinations in Richardson Multicrome Roofs. Also ask him to show you the reasons for their unusual endurance.

Meanwhile send for our beautiful new booklet, Roofs of Distinction, showing the exclusive color combinations of Richardson slate surfacing. Or ask for our booklet, Roofing on the Farm. Mail the coupon now.

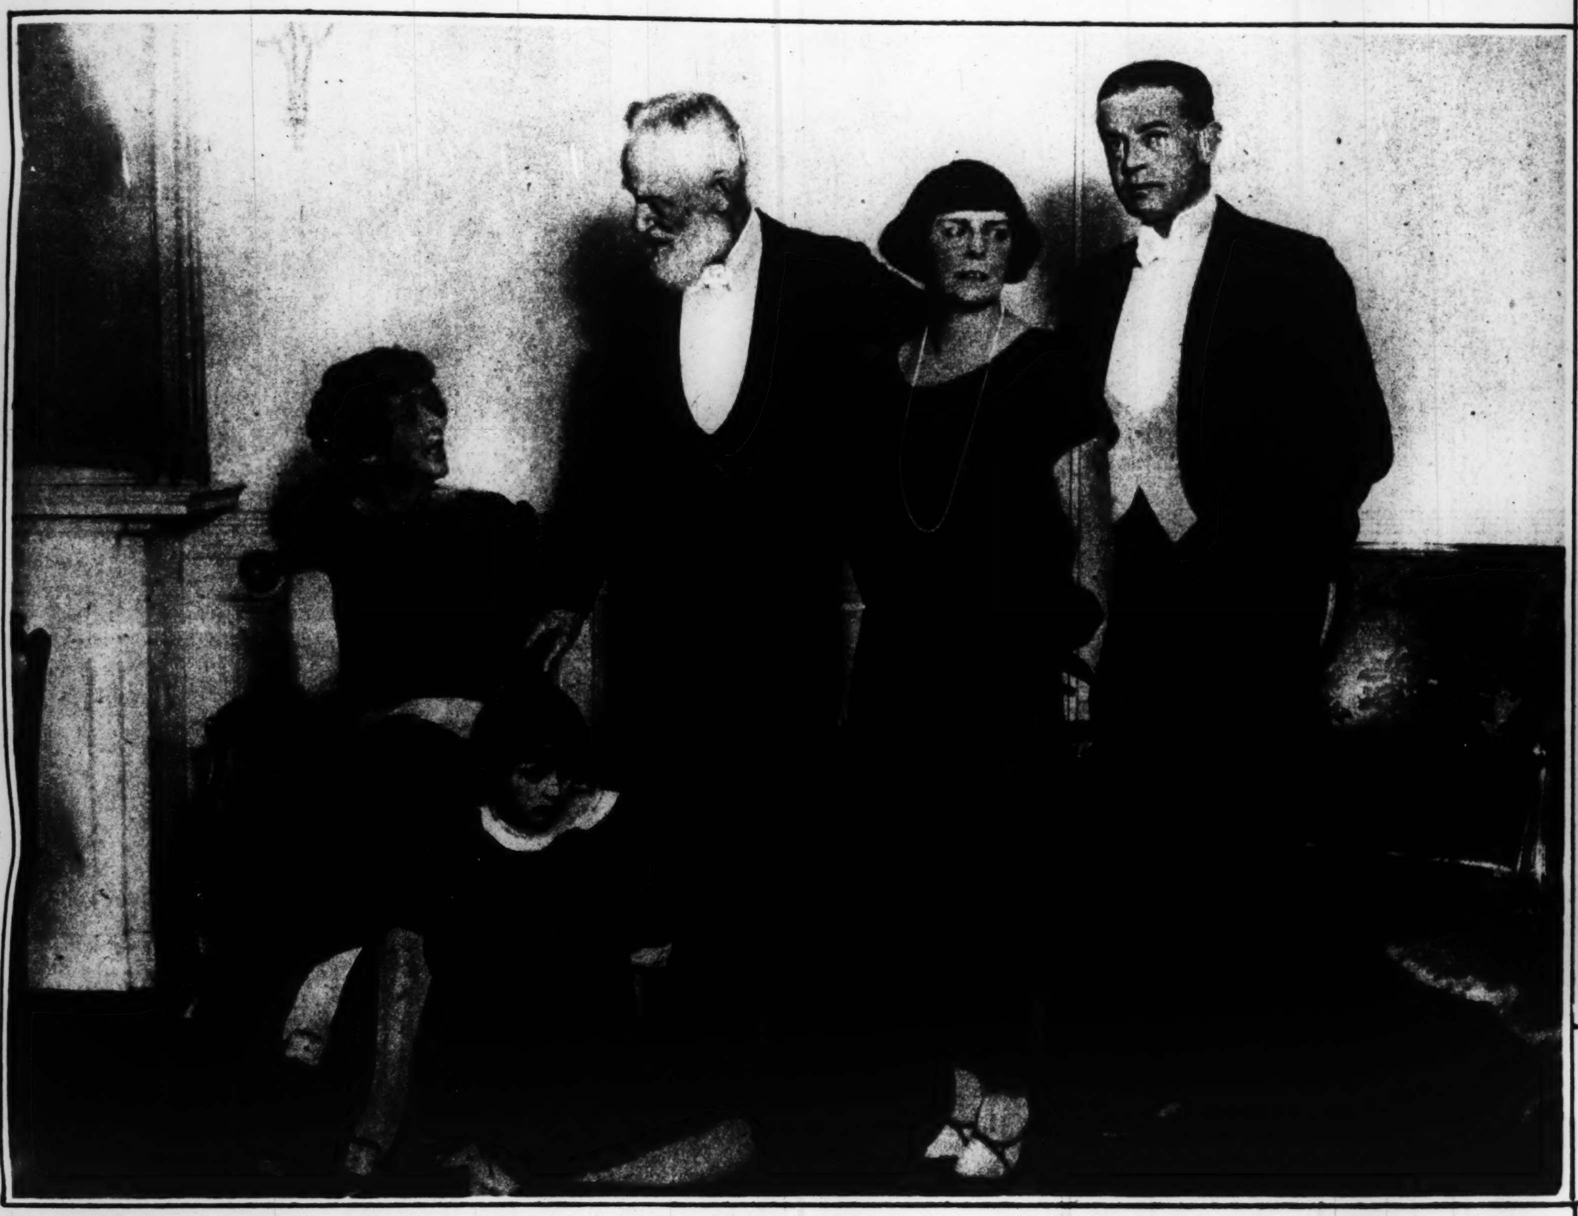
FLASHING GUNS END ARMISTICE DAY PARADE in Rome. A camera picturing the parade of Gen. Peppino Garibaldi's red-shirts caught this remarkable photo of gun play and rioting. Without warning a group of Fascisti, not Romans, it is claimed, descended on the marchers, and a free-for-all fight ensued. Challenges for duels between Gen. Garibaldi and officers of the Roman Fascisti are attributed to this outbreak.

(Photograph from International.)

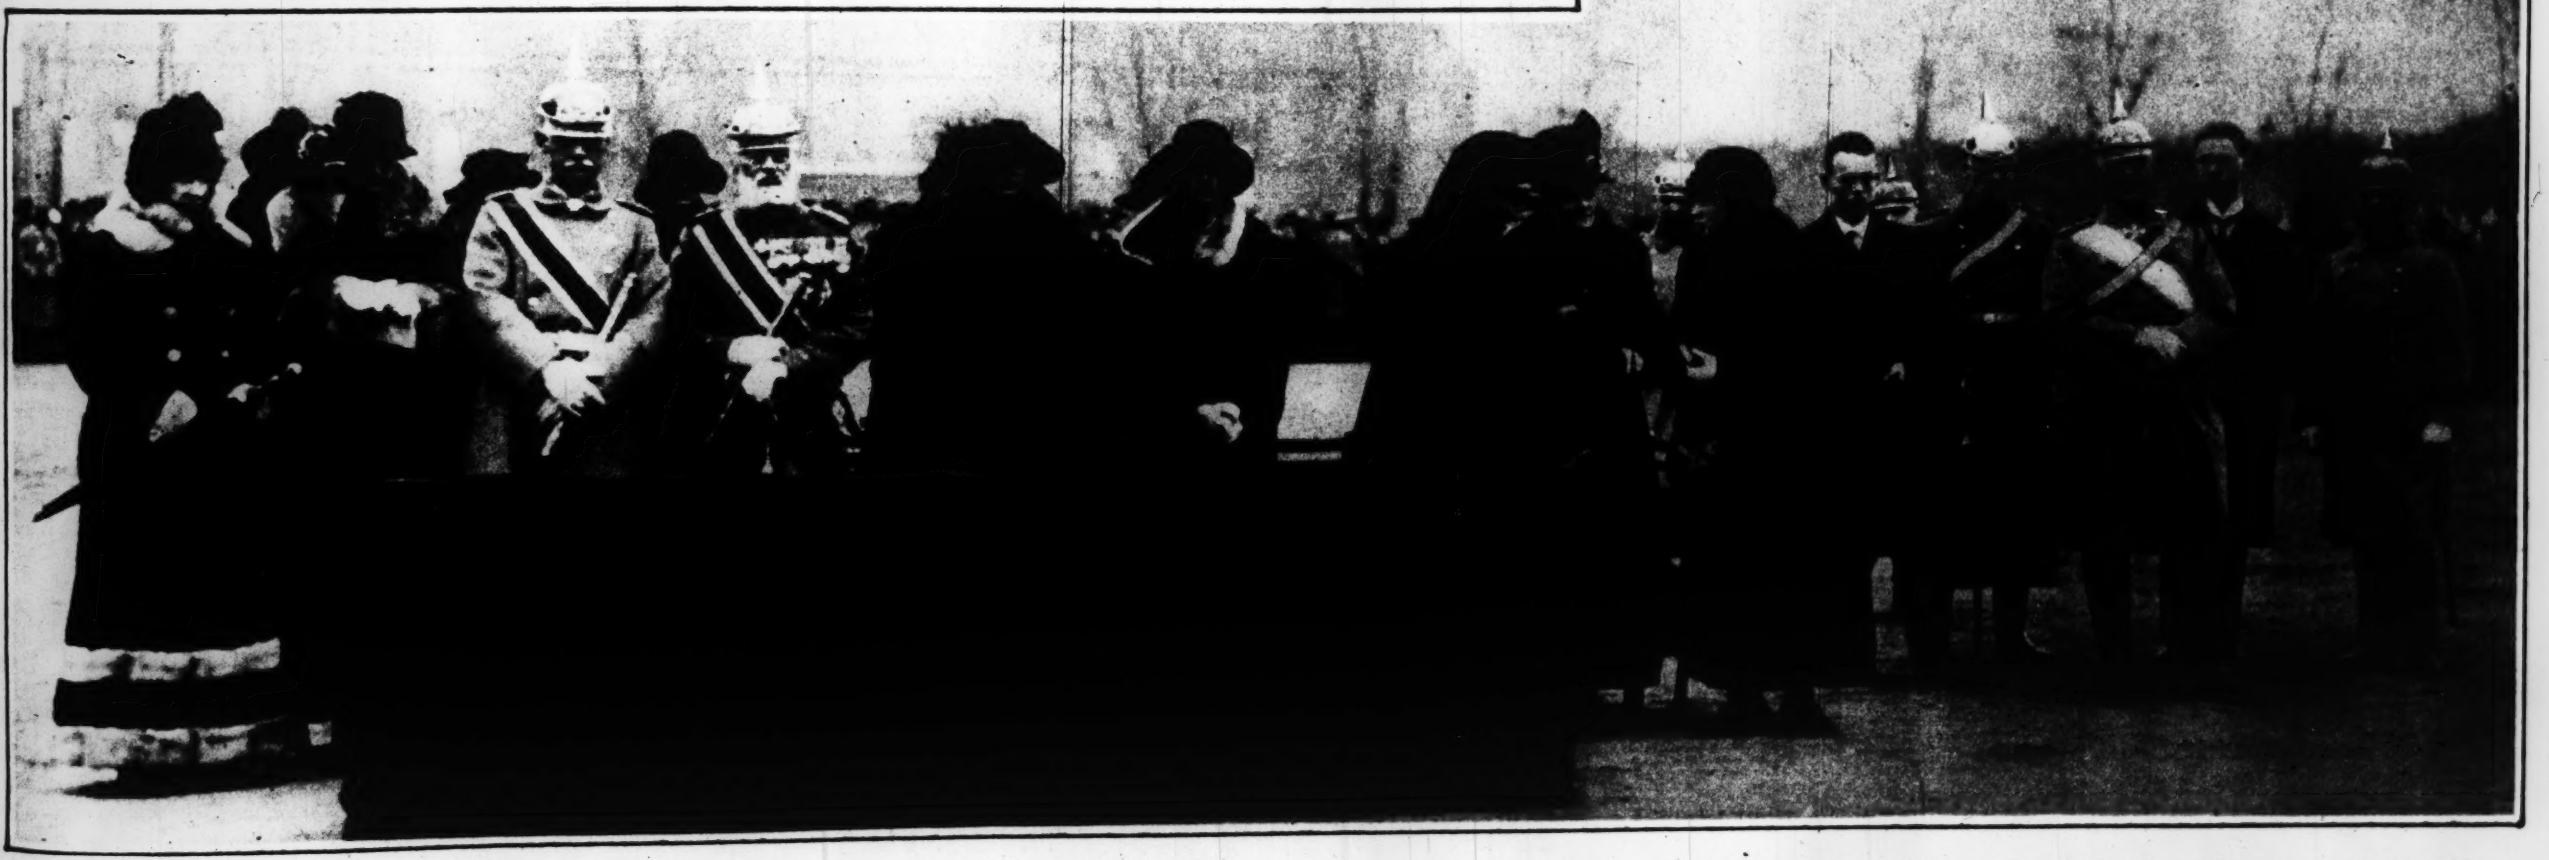


INTERESTING PEOPLE gathered at the former Russian imperial embassy in London recently on the seventh anniversary of the Russian revolution. The elderly gentleman with the bushy beaver is George Bernard Shaw of literary fame, talking to Mrs. Clare Sheridan, sculptress and author, who found out many secrets of the Soviet while making busts of Lenin and Trotzky, and later wrote of her discoveries.

(Photograph from Wide World.)

A NOTABLE SOCIETY AFFAIR was the wedding of Miss Laura Biddle and William Rhinelander Stewart at Bryn Mawr, Pa. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Craig Biddle of the noted Biddle family of Philadelphia. The groom, as the Rhinelander part of his name indicates, is a member of one of New York's oldest families.

(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



BAVARIA'S OLD ROYAL FAMILY gathered in force at the unveiling of a memorial tablet to honor fallen heroes of the famous old Munich cavalry regiment. The dedication took place in the barracks of the regiment. Left to right, the group is identified as follows: The Princesses Leopold and Franz; Crown Prince Rupprecht; Prince Leopold; the Duchess of Braunschweig, daughter of the former kaiser; Crown Princess Rupprecht, and the Princesses Arnolf, Alfons, and Clara. At the right, in civilian dress, is Prince Albrecht, son of the crown prince; in spiked helmet and double sash is Prince Alfons, and behind him is his son, Prince Clemens.

SMART, LIGHT AND AMAZINGLY WARM

Especially made not to cramp your fingers or shut off circulation as you grip the wheel

$5.50
The Aristocrat
(Other styles from $4.50 to $7.50)

How often have your fingers ached with the cold? In spite of heaviest gloves.

This is not due to faulty blood circulation. It's due to the gloves. Driving gloves do not have to be bulky to be warm. If they are made right.

The Aristocrat shown above is made from genuine imported cape, as smart as any street glove. And warm in any weather. Hansen solved this years ago.

First, the finger seams are sewed a special way. (As you can see in the illustration.) This prevents cramping as you grip the wheel.

And the fingers and the spaces between the fingers are made a fraction larger to give you easy circulation.

The Aristocrat shown above is completely lined with pure imported lambs wool. The warmest and lightest lining. (Warmer than any fur.)

You'll like this glove yourself. And for Christmas, here's a practical gift that will win warm gratitude during all the coming days of cold weather.

Doris Blake presents

(Copyright: 1924: by The Chicago Tribune.)

the twelfth series of photographs with character and handwriting analyses, for which $100.00 each is being paid in our $15,000.00 offer.

MRS. FREDERIC C. WILLIAMS, Racine College, Racine, Wis. Housewife and Nurse. [Stevens Photo.]

Janet Smith Williams

She is steady, faithful, conscientious, with hign ideals. She sees how things should be, in her fancies, and then she works hard to make them so in fact. She has keen intuitions, sensing the right thing to do, and sensing what is right for other people to do. She is determined and sure of herself, when once she makes up her mind. She knows how to drive herself. Because she understands this, she is well able to manage others. She thinks rapidly, but she acts deliberately and after much planning. Her emotions are strong, but she consciously keeps them in control.

WILLIAM G. MERCIER, 1142 Westover Road, Ft. Wayne, Ind. Department Manager.

William G Mercier

Here is a man who understands other people well. He is inclined to be humanitarian and too unselfish to press his own advantage at the cost of pain to those who would lose by it. He likes adventure and novelty, but is capable of holding steady under a grind. He looks as though he might be a fluent and ready talker, but governed by an accurate sense of values. His build is vital, which shows that he enjoys comforts for himself. His mouth reveals that he will see to it that others share in his good things.

KATHRINE SMITH, 10 E. 12th St., Atlantic, Iowa. School Girl.

Kathrine Smith

This girl handles unusual situations better than she does routine. The dull run of every day palls on her rapidly. She does not like monotony. But let some strange situation arise, preferably with a psychic angle added, and she fairly leaps to the occasion, and instinctively senses the right thing to do at the right time. She discerns well and remembers well. Together, these traits give her much sober good sense and reflective ability. Her mental energy is much greater than her physical strength. Her writing shows that she is a good mixer.

LAWRENCE W. HART, R. F. D. No. 3, Rock Falls, Ill. School Boy. [Industrial Photo.]

Lawrence W Hart

He has a handwriting that shows that he is of a practic l mind. His freckles show that he is of Nordic blood. He has a vivid imagination along naturalistic lines, construction, mechanical plans and the like. He can be convinced only by facts that are obvious in themselves. His energy is more mental than physical. His cheeks and nose reveal that he has self-control, tenacity, and determination to do what he sets out to do. He will probably always keep his emotions subservient to his common sense, and will never allow schemes not well founded on fact to carry him off.

TERESA KAUNALLY, 836 Oakdale Ave., Chicago, Ill. Office Worker.

Teresa Kaunally.

A face that shows an introspective mind. She is highly emotional, and has an affectionate nature. Her power of imagination is good, so that she dreams daydreams that look almost as real as actual memories to her. She likes social affairs, people, and friendly situations. It is not hard for her to give up and make sacrifices, because she is basicly of a most unselfish nature. Her generosity is apt to be impulsive instead of thought out. Routine she hates, because it irks her. She likes approbation, when it comes easily, but seldom enough to go out seeking it.

WM. K. McGINTY, 110 Barnum St., Ishpeming, Mich. Manual Arts Instructor.

Wm K McGinty

This man derives most of his driving power from his ego. His writing shows that he has a great belief in himself. He has ambitions to make something out of himself, and to be somebody. He is fond of people and of physical activity. His temper is even and he handles routine work well. Stubbornness appears when his desires are crossed. He is of a fine nature. Therefore he is not the ruthless self driver that he might be if he were coarser. He likes to gain his way by tact.

GUNHILD JOHNSON, 231 W. Williams St., Decatur, Ill. Graduate Nurse.

Gunhild Johnson

She is good natured, cheerful, generous and sympathetic. Her interests are centered in other people and not in herself. She is emotional. Her affections are instinctive, and are so accurate that she seldom needs to back them up with deliberate reasons. Because of this, her acts of unselfishness, and she has many, are usually done on the spur of the moment and without any previous planning. She looks as though she were of Celtic blood. She likes good quality of all sorts, and has sufficient push to get good quality for those she likes.

L. S. McLEOD, University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill. Student.

scientific result

A face that is all conservative appears here. He takes to new ideas slowly, and prefers the old, tried schemes to the new. His energy is somewhat limited, but he expends it evenly, so that he always can keep at his tasks. He thinks faster than he acts, but, because of his conservatism, his reasoned out ideas sometimes do not convince him. He is introspective and understands people only moderately well. This makes him a shy person in company and a poor mixer. He is inclined to be independent and to keep at what he is doing until he gains success.

CLARA FRIEND, 4529 N. Sawyer Ave., Chicago, Ill. Student. [Root Photo.]

Clara Friend

This girl loves attention. She enjoys the spotlight, and acts well under it. But she is sensitive and sometimes moody, and can be easily hurt and offended. If things do not turn out as she planned, she does not reason deeply into the why, but simply is disappointed. Her nature demands freedom. She likes details, and is capable of taking great pains with them to make everything right.

MRS. OVILLA TEN BROECK, 425 Alabama St., Lawrence, Kas. Teacher and Housewife. [Squires Photo.]

Dear Mary

It is not well to try to deceive her with shams and false pretenses, because she can see straight through them Her practical mind correctly discounts the false and sets the true into its proper relief. She is firm in her affections. Her nature is optimistic. She sees plenty of good all about her, and is tolerant of weaknesses. Her mind shows much adaptability and good nature, and there are plenty of laughing lines in her face. Her life has been happy, the marks show. She believes that her opinions are correct, because she believes in her own judgment.

THE CONDITIONS:

1. The public is invited to submit photographs to Doris Blake of The Chicago Tribune for Character Analysis. The Chicago Tribune will pay $15,000.00 in cash for photographs and handwriting specimens which, in the opinion of Doris Blake, reveal the most interesting characters. $1,000.00 will be paid each week in ten cash prizes of $100.00 for each photograph published.
2. The Character Analysis privilege is open to everybody except employes of The Tribune and their families. It does not matter where you live.
3. Any kind of photograph will do—a cabinet photo, a snapshot, a post card, any kind! Quality of the photograph will not be considered. Photographs will be returned after all subjects have been selected if proper postage is enclosed with the photograph.
4. The name, address and occupation of the person must accompany the photograph. When possible, this information should be written in the person's own handwriting. When photo is sent in as a surprise send along any sample of the person's handwriting.

   A coupon will be published in The Chicago Tribune every Sunday. You may use this or write on a separate sheet of paper of the same form.
5. Photographs should be sent by first class mail to Doris Blake, Post Office Box 1539, Chicago, Illinois.
6. No photographs will be received after December 17, 1924.

BULOVA WATCHES

Is Your Watch a Timepiece or Only an Ornament?

AN accurate timepiece was not always possible in a wrist watch. Even today some of the most beautiful watches are not trustworthy.

DESMEYER

Have you used the smart perfumes of BABANI?

They are the perfumes imported from Paris by Elizabeth Arden for the fashionable women who use her exquisite Venetian Toilet Preparations.

THE smartest women of Europe are using Babani Perfumes, blending two or more of these expressive fragrances to make new perfumes quite individual and chic. Babani's Ligeia and Ambre de Delhi are each memorably lovely; together, they breathe a different and even more subtle charm about your frocks and intimate belongings. Elizabeth Arden has introduced to America this continental method of owning and blending several perfumes in keeping with your costumes. She has chosen Babani Perfumes—the favorite perfumes of smart women of European society—to supplement her group of exclusive Venetian Toilet Preparations. The many fastidious women of America who know and use these famous accessories of the toilette will regard Elizabeth Arden's stamp of approval as complete evidence of the exquisite perfection of Babani Perfumes.

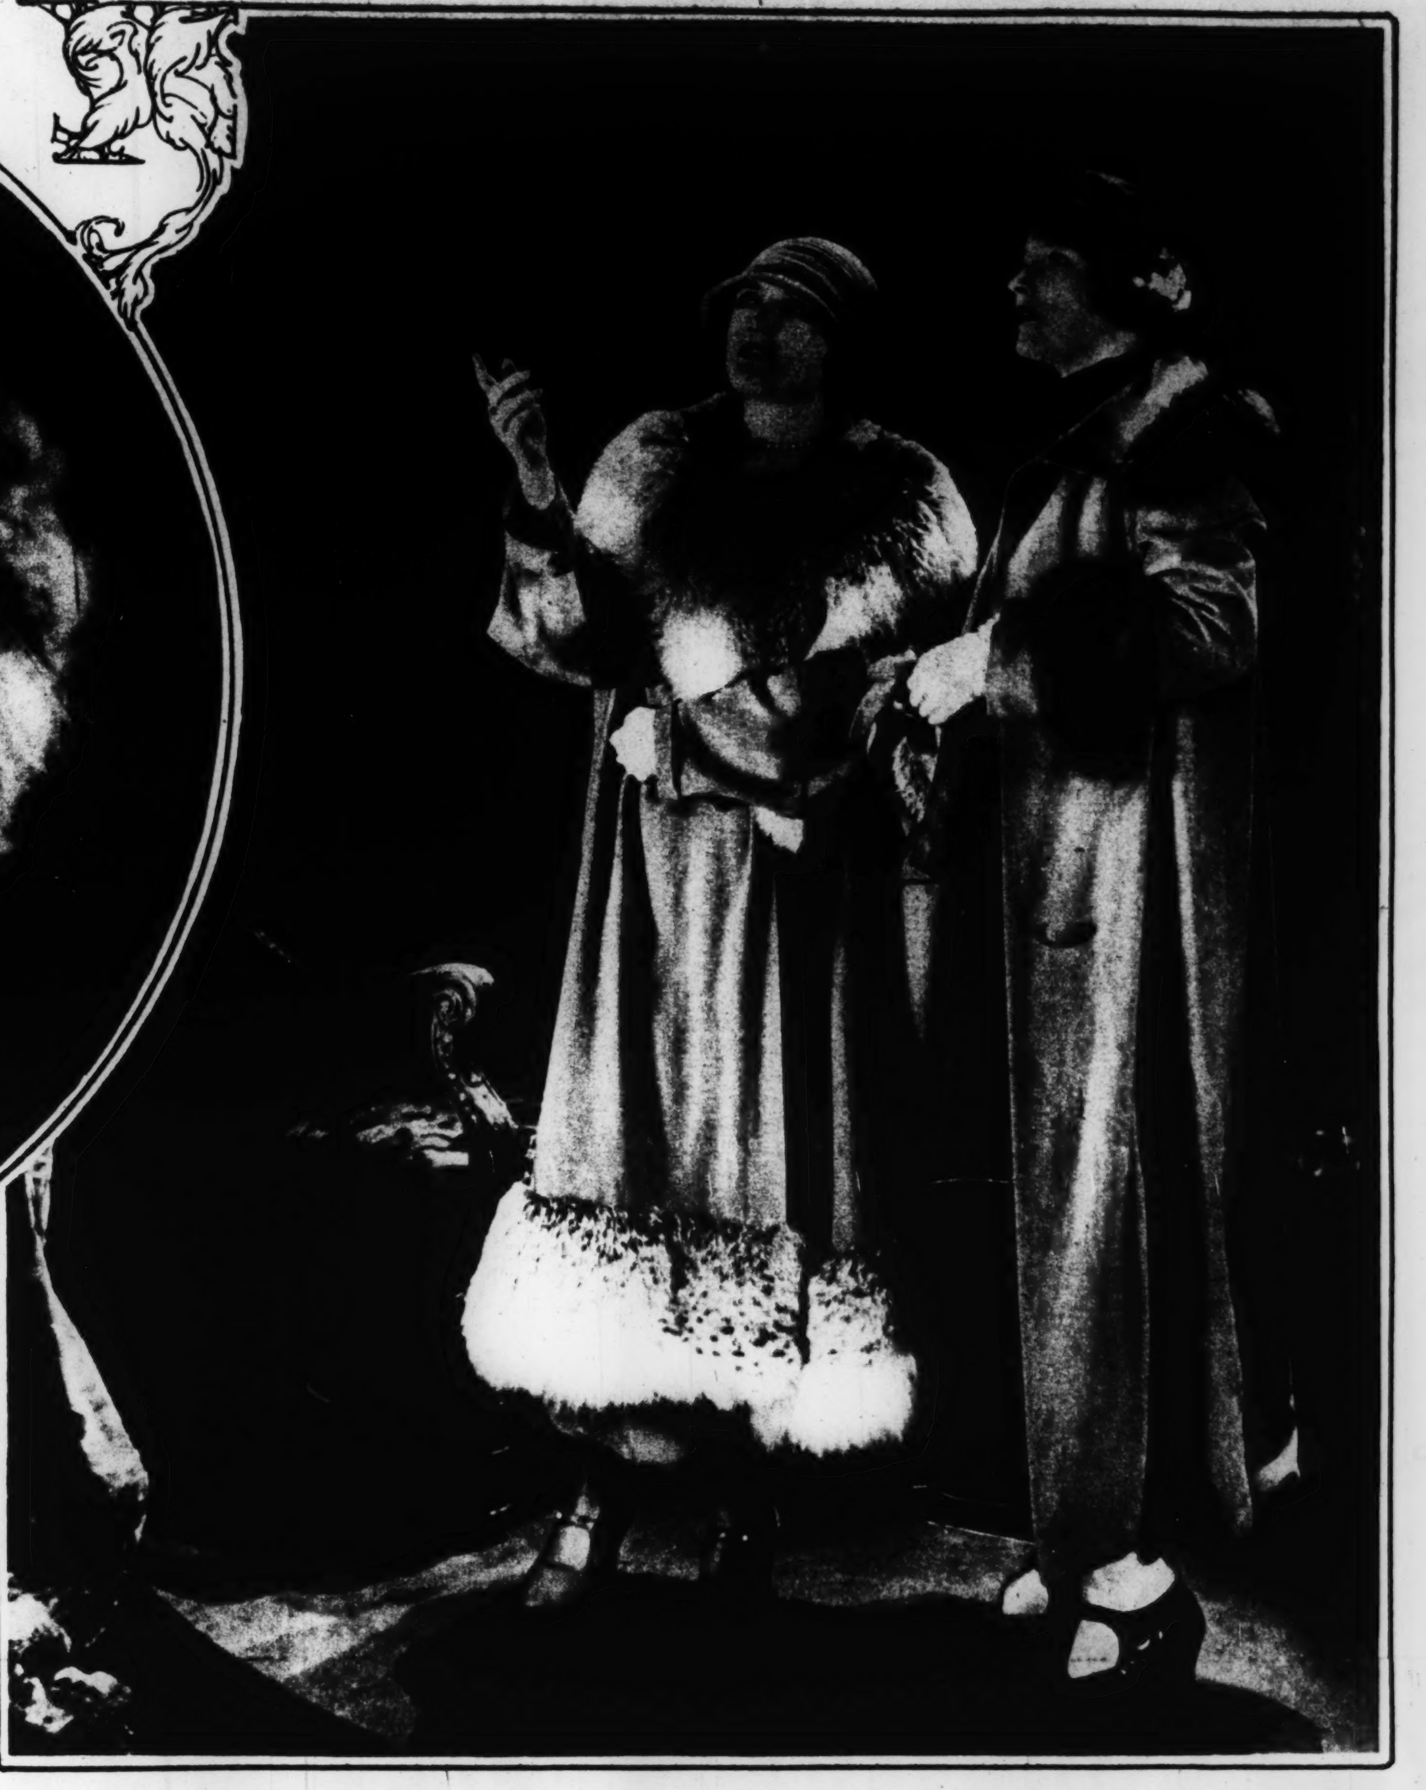
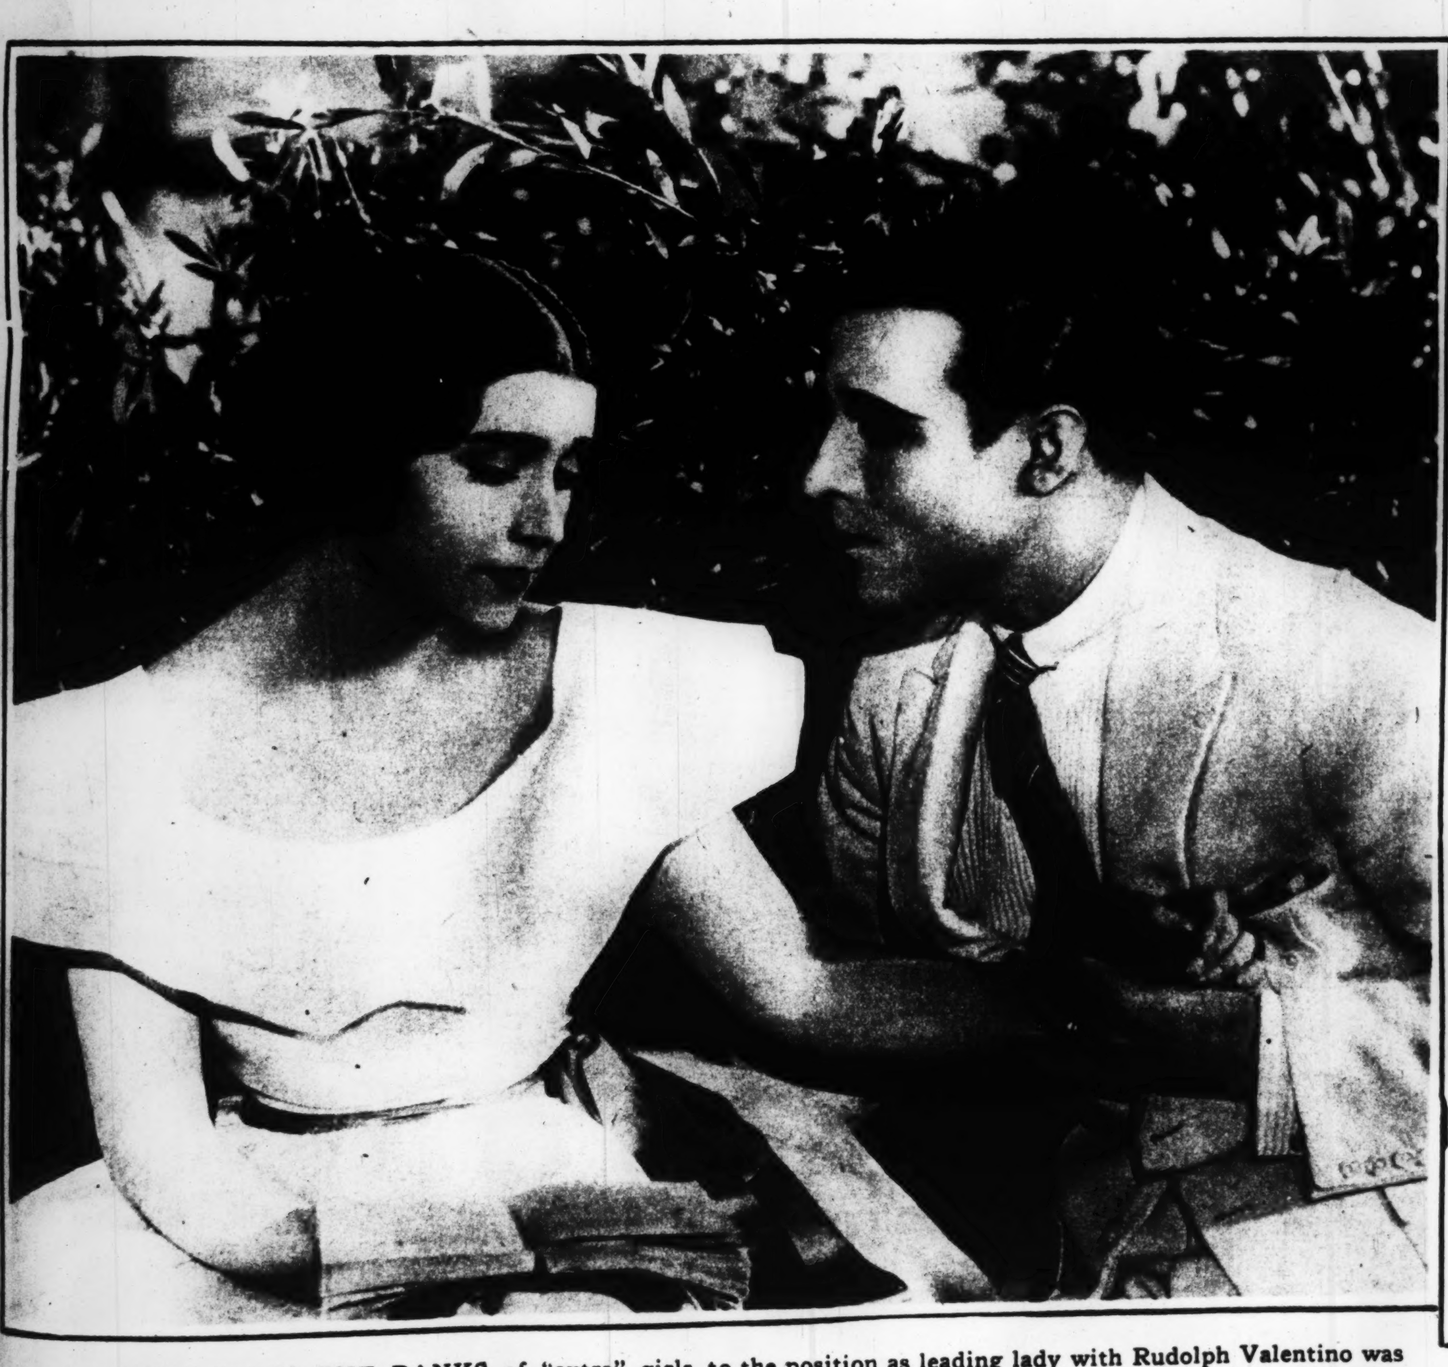
SHE DIDN'T WANT TO BOB IT—but they made her do it! That is, they said: "If you really want to play Peter Pan, Miss Betty Bronson, it will be necessary for you to bob your hair." And she DID want to play Peter Pan . . . ! So now she is working in the picture under the direction of Herbert Brenon.



"THIS IS THIS AND THAT IS THAT," explained Pola Negri to The Clinging Vine. Or, to spik plainly—Miss Pola Negri recently explained the mysteries of making movies to Miss Peggy Wood, star of "The Clinging Vine," who recently paid a visit to the Lasky studios in Hollywood.



RAISED FROM THE RANKS of "extra" girls to the position as leading lady with Rudolph Valentino was Helen D'Algy. Mr. Valentino, sauntering through an adjoining set to the one where he was working, saw the pretty Miss D'Algy. Something—maybe it was her resemblance to his wife—told him that she was the one he needed to play opposite him in "A Sainted Devil." She was engaged immediately. (Some folks have all the luck, girls!)

LOUISE LA GRANGE, whom you will remember for her unusual characterization in "The Sideshow of Life" with Ernest Torrence, is shown here as Carmelita—the role she assumes in "A Sainted Devil" with Valentino.

Between meals hunger

—a serious problem that is often misunderstood

In your life, is it a road to increased vitality— or a constant drag on health?

When we are hungry between meals, in the morning or afternoon or at bed-time, how many of us select what we eat with genuine care? How many of us, on the contrary, simply follow the impulse of the moment?

Today it is known that the choice of food between meals is of far-reaching importance in every life.

Between meals hunger means that the stomach is empty, ready to receive and digest more food, ready to do its work in building new strength and energy. But often this opportunity is wasted.

Many ordinary foods, especially those that are rich and heavy, are slow in digestion. Eaten between meals, they remain in the stomach a long time. They dull the appetite and are a drag on the whole system. Frequently they are the cause of serious disorders.

Yet millions have found a delicious food that makes this between meals hunger an easy road to greater vigor and better health. Because it is quick in digestion and combines unusual nutrition value with a wonderful flavor, Horlick's Malted Milk has long been recognized by diet specialists as the ideal food for between meals.

A wonderful blend of milk and grain

Full cream cow's milk is combined by a special process with the extract of barley and wheat, in Horlick's. Nature's two foremost foods, grain and milk, are united in a form that is more tempting and more easily assimilated than either alone. The starch of the grain has been converted into maltose and dextrin, the natural sugars of the grain. No cane sugar is used. The milk in Horlick's, unlike raw cow's milk, does not form large, tough curds in the stomach. It is safe milk.

For years, Horlick's has been prescribed by physicians to those who are in need of an especially delicate and nourishing diet. In eight million American homes it is bringing new vigor to young and old alike.

For everyone, for the robust who enjoy good health, and for those who are easily fatigued, who are nervous and underweight, or whose appetite is "finicky," Horlick's is the solution of the between meals problem.

At bed-time, for a soothing "night-cap", for that morning or afternoon fatigue, drink Horlick's. Give it to the children when they come home from school. This delightful food drink supplies all the elements needed to furnish extra vitality and build firm body tissue. It is not only quickly digested and readily assimilated, but also instantly satisfies hunger. For the entire family, Horlick's between meals, forms a wholesome and pleasant habit.

How to serve Horlick's

A complete food in powder form, Horlick's needs only to be well stirred in hot or cold water to make a delicious drink. To have its full, distinctive flavor serve it hot or cold, not lukewarm.

Some prefer Horlick's mixed with milk or part milk and water. The two chief disadvantages of raw milk—the tough curds it forms in the stomach and its usual constipating effect—are in large measure offset by mixing it with Horlick's. If desired, flavor with chocolate, cocoa, vanilla, salt, etc., to suit the taste.

Serve Horlick's regularly for your family and for yourself—both between meals and at the table. It enables you to use that between meals appetite to win fuller health and vitality. Have a bottle always on hand. Your druggist has it in three sizes, ½ lb., 1 lb., and 5 lb.; also Horlick's Malted Milk Lunch Tablets, an ideal light lunch for shoppers, office workers, tourists, etc.

Send for handy mixer and samples

In preparing Horlick's, many find it more convenient and more speedy to use a mechanical mixer. Here is a new, improved kind, especially designed to fit inside a glass or cup. Far superior to a spoon, as it mixes a smooth solution in a few seconds. We will send this mixer with an interesting booklet giving many delightful ways of serving Horlick's, for ten cents to cover cost of packing and mailing; also sample Horlick's Malted Milk for only two cents; or samples of Horlick's Malted Milk Lunch Tablets, cocoa or natural flavor, for two cents each. Just mail the coupon below.

For the aged and convalescents

The food selected for the aged, for the infirm, and for convalescents, must supply abundant, perfectly balanced nourishment and at the same time place the least possible tax on the digestive system. Moreover, it must be highly pleasing in flavor. Because it meets all these needs in an unusual degree, Horlick's has long been served, in hospitals and in homes, to all those who are in any way enfeebled.

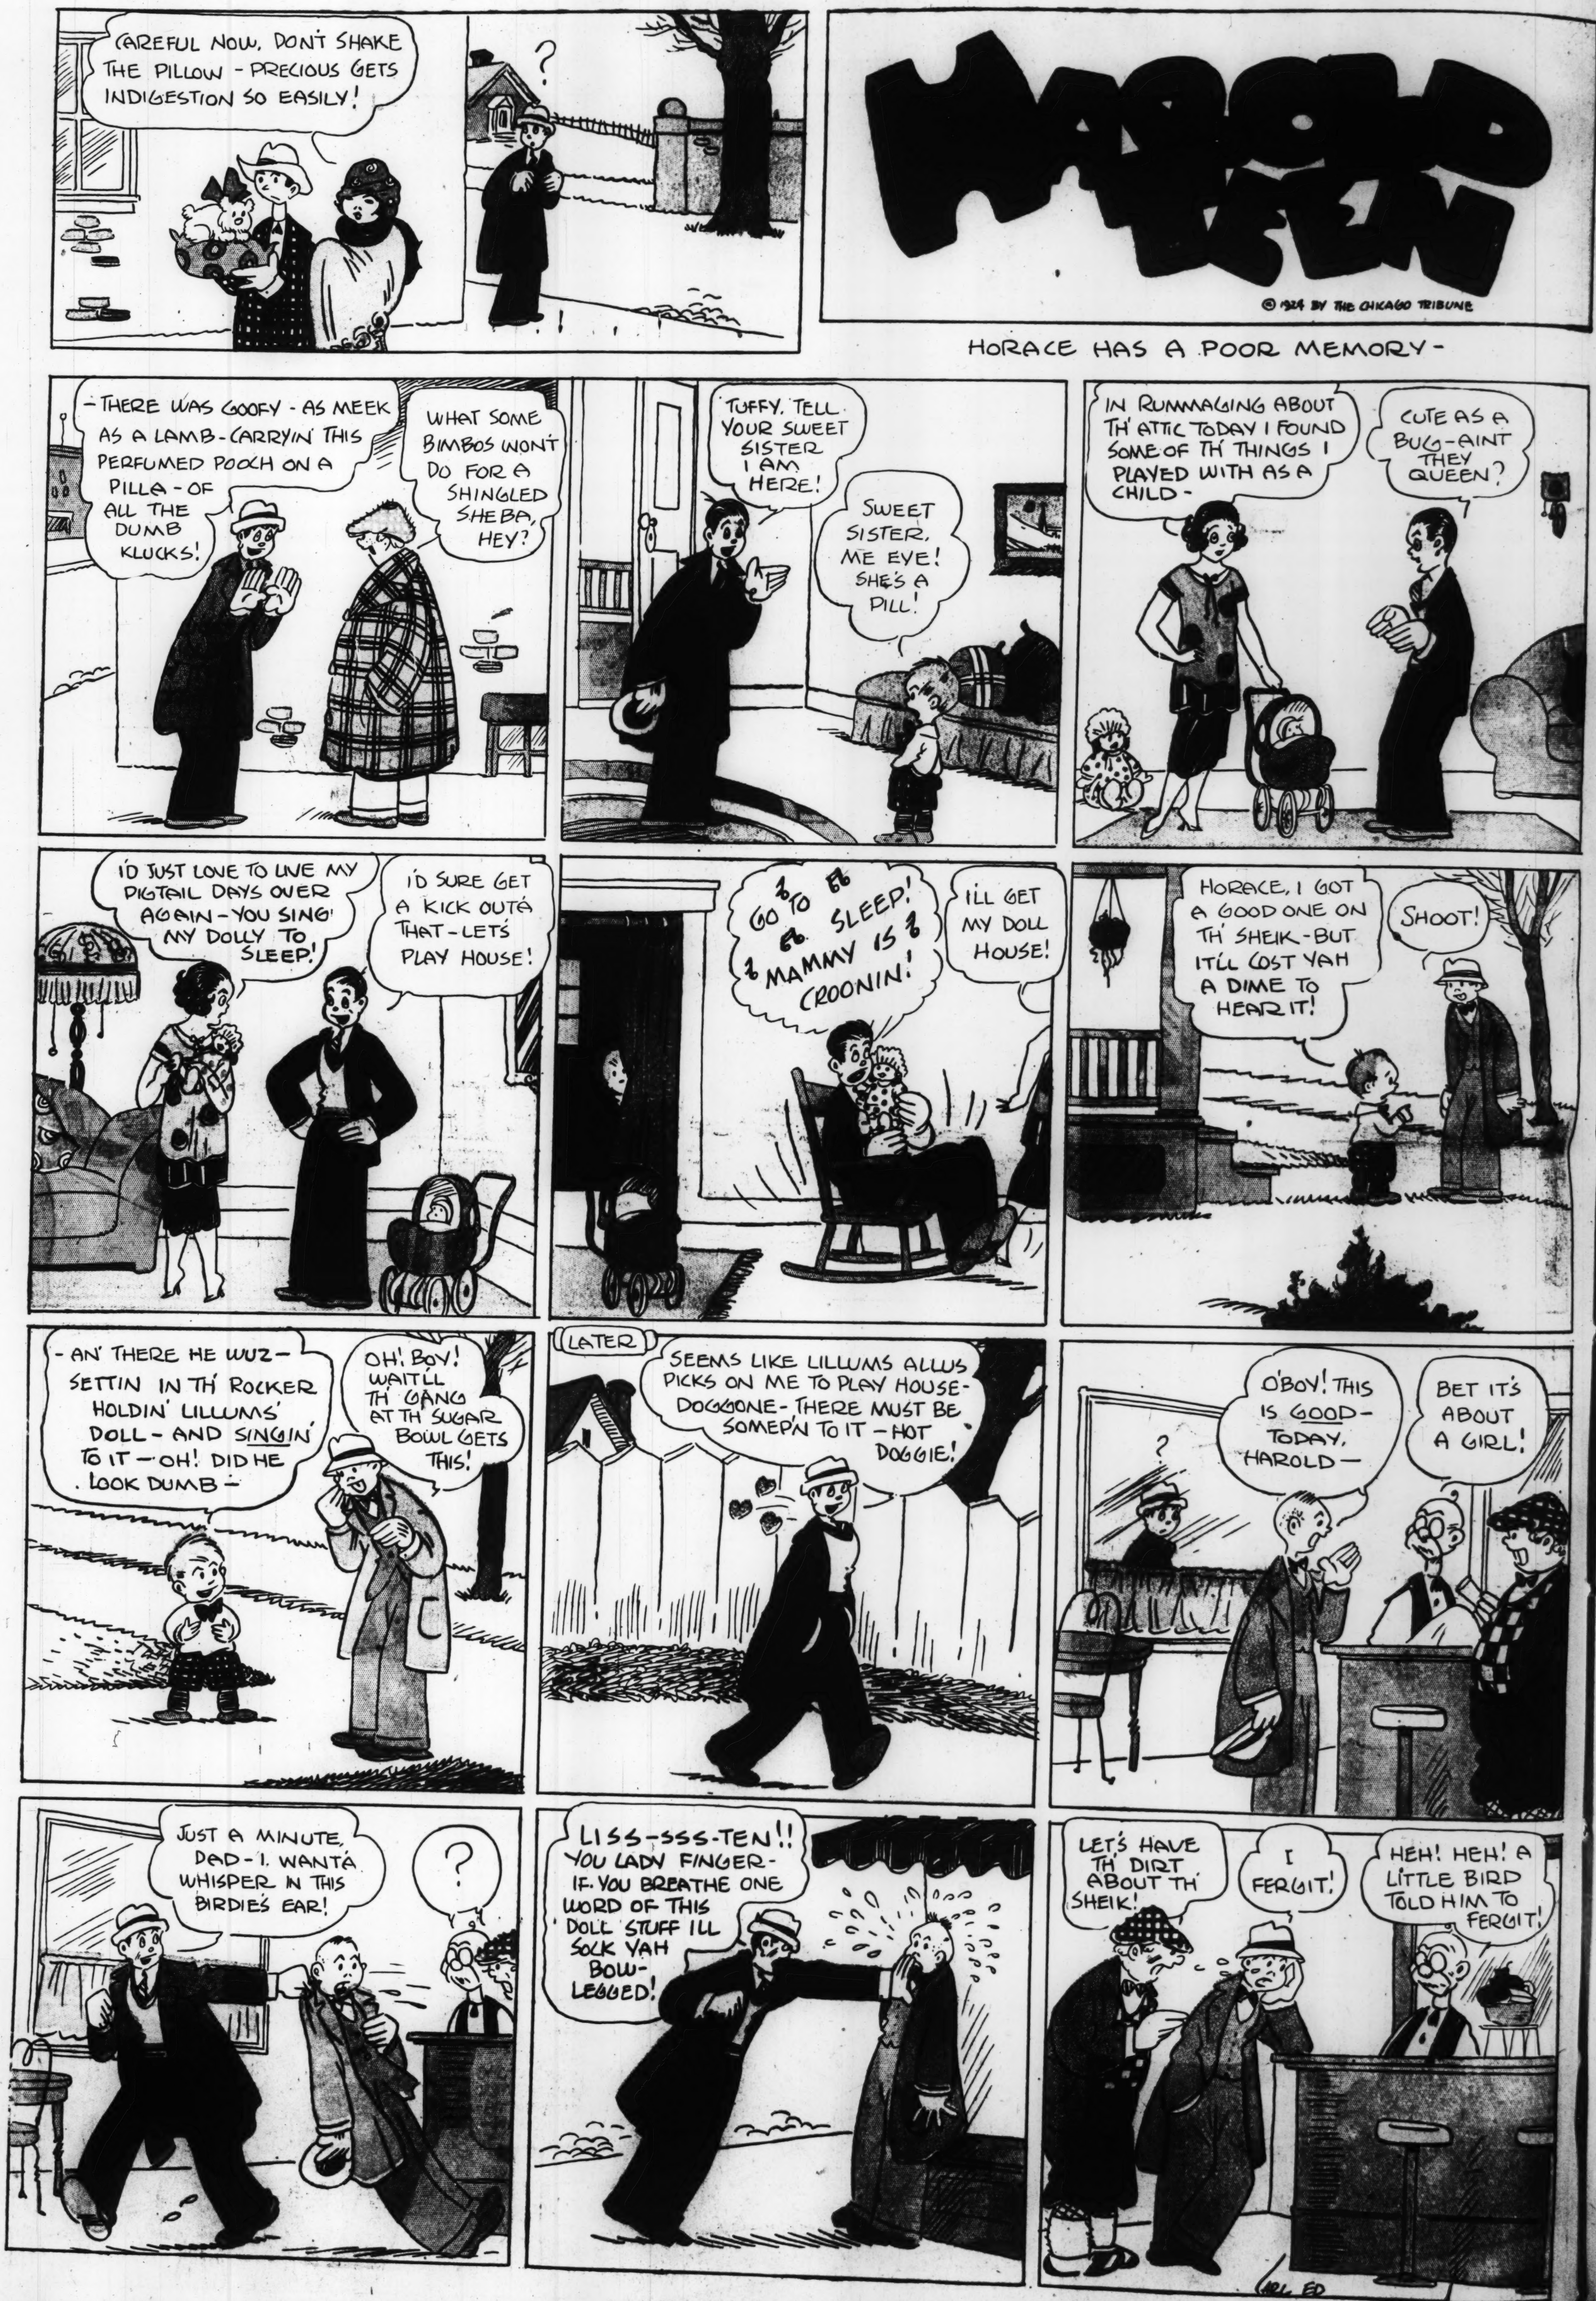
THE CAPTAIN PREDICTS A RECORD BREAKING VOYAGE HOME—
THIS SHIP IS ALMOST AS FAST AS THE MAGIC CARPET I READ ABOUT IN THE BOOK OF FAIRY TALES—
I'LL BET PAPA AND MAMA WILL BE SURPRISED TO SEE US DROP DOWN OUT OF THE CLOUDS IN OUR FRONT YARD—
I SENT A RADIOGRAM TELLING THEM JUST WHEN TO EXPECT US—
OH BOY— WE ARE UP HIGHER THAN THE OLD COW THAT JUMPED OVER THE MOON— THE WHOLE COUNTRY DOWN THERE LOOKES SMALLER THAN OUR BACK YARD—
I'M SORRY TO SEE HIM GO—
HE IS A VERY NICE BOY—
EVERYBODY LOVES HIM—
THE BIM BLIMP
DOESN'T IT MAKE YOU FEEL GOOD TO KNOW WE ARE GETTING NEARER HOME EVERY SECOND?
I GUESS I AM THE LUCKIEST BOY ON THE EARTH OR IN THE AIR OR ANY PLACE ELSE— I'LL BE SO GLAD WHEN I SEE MY DEAR PAPA AND MAMA AGAIN—
THIS SIGNALS TO THE ENGINE ROOM— JUST TURN THE HANDLE AND THE SHIP WILL OBEY.
OH BOY— I'LL ORDER FULL SPEED AHEAD AND THEN WE'LL BE HOME IN TIME FOR DINNER— I HOPE MAMA MAKES A PIE—
GOOD MORNING, CHESTER— I HOPE YOU SLEPT WELL LAST NIGHT WHILE WE WERE RACING THROUGH THE CLOUDS—
ALL NIGHT LONG I DREAMED OF HOME— I WAS PLAYING WITH ALL THE KIDS AND MY DADDY WAS TELLING US FUNNY JOKES TO MAKE US LAUGH—
WE ARE ONLY 79 MILES FROM HOME— WE SHALL ARRIVE IN LESS THAN TWENTY MINUTES—
I'M GOING OUT AND STAND WITH THE LOOK-OUT— I CAN'T WAIT TO SEE OUR HOUSE—
WE WILL LAND IN THE FRONT YARD—
THERE'S OUR STREET— I CAN SEE JONES' CANDY STORE— AND THERE'S OUR HOUSE— GEE, IT LOOKS LITTLE— HURRAH! I CAN SEE MY PAPA—
OH MIN! HERE THEY COME— I CAN SEE LITTLE CHESTER—
THERE'S MY BABY—
OH MAMA— I MISSED YOU EVERY MINUTE I WAS IN AUSTRALIA— GEE BUT I'M GLAD TO BE BACK—
OH YOU LITTLE DARLING— MY CHESTER HOME WITH US AGAIN—
OH YOU OLD FOX— DROPPING IN ON US LIKE AN ANGEL FROM HEAVEN— JUST TRY TO GET AWAY FROM US AGAIN— REMEMBER, THIS IS YOUR HOME FROM NOW ON—
WELL, YOU WON'T HAVE TO HANDCUFF ME TO KEEP ME IN YOUR HAPPY LITTLE HOME— JUST LET ME BE ONE OF THE FAMILY FOR A WHILE AND I'LL BE AS CONTENTED AS A CAT IN A DAIRY.



CAREFUL NOW, DON'T SHAKE THE PILLOW - PRECIOUS GETS INDIGESTION SO EASILY!

HORACE HAS A POOR MEMORY -
- THERE WAS GOOFY - AS MEEK AS A LAMB - CARRYIN' THIS PERFUMED POOCH ON A PILLA - OF ALL THE DUMB KLUCKS!
WHAT SOME BIMBOS WON'T DO FOR A SHINGLED SHEBA, HEY?
TUFFY, TELL YOUR SWEET SISTER I AM HERE!
SWEET SISTER, ME EYE! SHE'S A PILL!
IN RUMMAGING ABOUT TH' ATTIC TODAY I FOUND SOME OF TH' THINGS I PLAYED WITH AS A CHILD -
CUTE AS A BUG - AIN'T THEY QUEEN?
I'D JUST LOVE TO LIVE MY PIGTAIL DAYS OVER AGAIN - YOU SING MY DOLLY TO SLEEP!
I'D SURE GET A KICK OUTA THAT - LET'S PLAY HOUSE!
GO TO SLEEP! MAMMY IS CROONIN!
I'LL GET MY DOLL HOUSE!
HORACE, I GOT A GOOD ONE ON TH' SHEIK - BUT IT'LL COST YAH A DIME TO HEAR IT!
SHOOT!
- AN' THERE HE WUZ - SETTIN IN TH' ROCKER HOLDIN' LILLUMS' DOLL - AND SINGIN' TO IT - OH! DID HE LOOK DUMB - OH! BOY! WAIT'LL TH' GANG AT TH' SUGAR BOWL GETS THIS!
LATER
SEEMS LIKE LILLUMS ALLUS PICKS ON ME TO PLAY HOUSE - DOGGONE - THERE MUST BE SOMEP'N TO IT - HOT DOGGIE!
O'BOY! THIS IS GOOD - TODAY, HAROLD - BET IT'S ABOUT A GIRL!
JUST A MINUTE, DAD - I WANTA WHISPER IN THIS BIRDIE'S EAR!
LISS-SSS-TEN!! YOU LADY FINGER - IF YOU BREATHE ONE WORD OF THIS DOLL STUFF I'LL SOCK YAH BOW-LEGGED!
LET'S HAVE TH' DIRT ABOUT TH' SHEIK!

KAYO HERE'S THAT NICE RED APPLE I PROMISED YOU.
WELL, WHADDAYA SAY, KAYO? WHADDAYA SAY??
PEEL IT!
OH THAT'S ALL RIGHT, MOON - I GAVE IT TO KAYO TO PAY HIM FOR RUNNING AN' ERRAND FOR ME. HE'S GONE TO GET A MAN TO DRIVE SOME NAILS TO HANG PICTURES ON.
WHEN TH' MAN COMES TELL HIM YOU'VE ALREADY GOT SOMEBODY TO DO IT - I'M PRETTY HANDY WITH A HAMMER, MYSELF.
FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE, MOON - WAIT AND LET ME GET YOU SOMETHING ELSE TO STAND ON.
BAM! BAM! BAM!
DON'T BOTHER, BABY - I'M PLENTY HIGH ENOUGH.
BAM! BAM! BAM!!
MY WORD!
BOP!
YOU IDIOT, COME SEE WHAT YOU DID!
OH THAT'S NOTHIN'. YOU CAN HANG A PICTURE ON THE OTHER END OF THE NAIL.
I'M DE HANDY MAN YOUSE SENT FOR.
AND I'M HIS ASSISTANT.
YES, YES - STEP INSIDE GENTLEMEN - I'VE GOT A JOB FOR YOU.
BIFF!
POW!
WHAM!
OH, WHY DIDN'T I THINK TO TELL THEM TO ONLY THROW MOON OUT. THEY MUST BE MURDERING HIM.
I HAD TO GO ACROSS TH' STREET FOR THIS LADDER.
WELL, YOU OUGHTA STUCK AROUND AND SAW TH' FUN - A PAIR A RUMMIES BUTTED IN AN' TRIED TO WRECK TH' PLACE AN' I MADE A COUPLA JOBS FOR TH' DOCTOR OUTTA THEM.
MERCY ME! HE MUST HAVE USED A FULL SET OF CARPENTER'S TOOLS TO PUT THESE MEN IN SUCH A CONDITION -
NO SIR - MOON DIDN'T USE NOTHIN'. THAT'S ALL HAND WORK!

YOU DONT KNOW HOW LUCKY YOU ARE. A DOCTOR NEVER KNOWS WHEN HE'S GOING TO GET A NIGHT'S SLEEP.
WHAT'S THAT NOISE? SOUNDS LIKE SKEEZIX.
SKEEX PINCHA FINGA INA DOOR.
NEVER MIND HONEY. LET UNCA WALT SEE IT.
YOU COME OVER TO MY GARAGE, SKEEZIX. I'LL FIX IT ALL UP.
THIS TAPE IS GOING TO PATCH THAT FINGER SO YOU'LL NEVER KNOW IT WAS PINCHED. I'VE FIXED LOTS OF FINGERS JUST LIKE THAT.
FINGA DON'T HURT NOW, DOC.
SEE, UNCA. WALT. FINGA ALL WELL AGAIN.
THAT'S RIGHT! YOU HAVE TEN OF 'EM JUST THE SAME AS YOU HAD BEFORE.
FUNNY THING, WALT, BUT I CAN'T FIND MY MEDICINE CASE.
WHAT DID YOU DO WITH IT AFTER YOU FIXED UP PAL'S LEG?
BUT I DIDN'T FIX PAL'S LEG!
WELL IT MAY HAVE BEEN SKEEZIX. MAYBE YOU'D BETTER ASK HIM ABOUT YOUR CASE.
RACHEL, WHERE'S SKEEZIX?
I LOOKIN' FOR HIM MYSELF. SOMEBODY GOT MY BROOM ALL STUCK UP WITH TAPE AN' I GOT MY SUSPICIONS.
THERE'S ONE OF MY BOTTLES. I'M ON THE RIGHT TRACK.
PUFF IS FIXED UP TOO! THE LITTLE RASCAL IS BUSY ALL RIGHT!
MEAOUW!
JEAN, HAVE YOU SEEN SKEEZIX?
YEH, I GOTTA SORE FROAT BUT SKEEZIX! FIXED IT UP
PILLS AND A PILL BOX. HE LEAVES A TRAIL THAT'S EASY TO FOLLOW.
HERE, HERE, SKEEZIX! WHAT ARE YOU DOING WITH MY MEDICINE CASE?
